36 Die in East, Midwest Cold

By Associated Press

Snow, sleet and plunging temperatures brought an early winter to wide portions of the country Saturday, with accompanying misery and inconvenience to thousands of persons fighting the inclement weather.

At least 36 deaths were attributed to the storm.

The snow and sleet storms, which came from the Rockies into the Plains States at midweek, moved through the Midwest, then curved into the Northeast with devastating fury.

In eastern Maine, a new fall piled snow on the ground to a depth of 29 inches. Old Town, Maine, was covered by 15 inches of snow and Houlton had 17 inches on the ground.

More snow was forecast this weekend in northern Maine, and freezing rain and snow in the southern portion.

Snow and sleet over upper New York state felled utility lines serving communities with more than 50,000 homes.

Schenectady, Troy and Saratoga Springs, N.Y., were declared emergency areas when power lines fell in the cities. The emergency status enabled officials to enforce special short-term laws to facilitate quick return of services.

Freezing rain and snow fell over sections of lower New England, snapping communications lines and causing hundreds of vehicular accidents. Hazardous-driving warnings were issued in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and adjacent states.

The death toll covered these states and sections: New England states 14 dead, Missouri 9, Illinois 8, Indiana 4 and New York 1.

The heavy snow and low temperatures were not confined to the Midwest and Northeast.

Austin, Nev., got 3 more inches of snow Saturday, bringing its total on the ground to 10 inches.

At Alamosa, Colo., the temperature early Saturday dropped to -25.

International Falls and Bemidji, Minn., had -24. Fargo, N.D., reported -16, two degrees under the 77-year record for the date. Wichita, Kan., had 4 above and Topeka, Kan., 2 above, both tying records for the date.

A logging camp at Maverick, Ariz., in the northeastern portion of the state, reported -11.

Snow-removing crews worked in Chicago's downtown section all day and night to clear a 12-inch accumulation. Around the city and elsewhere in the northern portion of Illinois, 40-to-50-mile-an-hour winds piled drifts to a height of five feet.

No One Cares

By MARY NEISWENDER

Christmas is a time to live.

It's also a time to die.

For every kid at Rancho Los Amigos Hospital in Downey it's a time of living—of presents, parties and the thought that all the world knows they're alive and everybody is sending presents.

For the oldsters at the same hospital it's different.

Christmas is a time to live—and to die.

It's not a time of presents and parties.

It's a bell-ringing, tinseled reminder that the world has passed them by, and no one is sending presents.

There are no exceptions to this "life of the dying" at the county facility.

"They're all terminal cases," a hospital official said. "They may die tomorrow or next week or next month but they'll die—here."

In the hospital, the officials claim, they die slowly.

"They die in dignity."

$49 Billion Seen for Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said Saturday that preliminary estimates of next year's defense budget indicate it will be slightly below $50 billion.

McNamara spent two hours at the White House going over budget figures with President Johnson and said recent economies in the Defense Department will permit a substantial cut in new spending authority requested for fiscal year 1966 which begins July 1.

THE most recent estimate of spending for the present year is $49.8 billion, McNamara said, and the new budget should be pretty close to the same level.

More important in figuring future defense costs, however, is the requested new spending authority, which McNamara said would be $49 billion, or a little less.

WHERE IS BOUNDARY?

BILL BROOM
P-T Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Attorneys representing the state of California and the United States will start oral arguments before the Supreme Court Monday in a case involving billions of dollars in offshore oil deposits.

The issue concerns the location of California's offshore boundary. The federal government contends it is located three miles off the state's sinuous 1,200-mile coastline.

California claims the boundary should be located three miles beyond its offshore islands and headlands of its major bays. The two governments have been arguing the issue since 1945. It has been dormant since 1953, when Congress passed a tidelands act giving the states the income from submerged lands.

THE CONTROVERSY was revived by recent technological developments which allow oil to be extracted more than three miles from the coastline. If the Supreme Court sustains the federal government's claim, the offshore boundary will run smack-dab through four of the state's major bays—Monterey, San Pedro, Santa Monica and San Luis Obispo. The Santa Barbara and San Pedro Channels also would fall beyond the three-mile limit.

Oil deposits which are believed to underlie the bays and channels then would fall within federal, rather than the state's jurisdiction, and huge sums in royalties would go to Washington rather than Sacramento.

The state contends that the bays and intervening waters are included within the constitutional boundary.

Rusk, Russian Discuss Disarmament, MLF

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko Saturday probed issues splitting the two superpowers. Both called the two-hour session "inconclusive."

They agreed to meet soon again in a further effort to lower East-West tensions.

Rusk told newsmen, "We covered a number of points right around the globe."

"We talked disarmament questions, European questions, the MLF (multilateral force)," Rusk said. He emphasized that the discussion was inconclusive and said that undoubtedly there will be another meeting later.

Rusk said there was no discussion of the U.N. financial crisis or the war in Viet Nam.

But he said, "We did talk about the forthcoming possible talks between the three factions in Laos."

Gromyko said the discussion "was not conclusive" on the "several matters relating to Europe and of world character" which were discussed.

GOVERNORS VOTE TO FIRE BURCH

'Exclusion' Tactics Are Rejected

DENVER (UPI) — Republican governors Saturday unanimously approved a declaration which most called a demand for replacement of National Chairman Dean Burch and a rejection of "exclusion" tactics of the Goldwater wing of their party.

Burch was not named in the lengthy policy statement and his chief supporter at this GOP governors' conference, Gov. Paul Fannin of Arizona, insisted it was no call for his removal.

"If it isn't, you can shoot me," declared New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, one of the moderate leaders pushing for a quick change in party leadership.

GOVS. William Scranton of Pennsylvania, George Romney of Michigan, John H. Reed of Maine and other anti-Goldwater leaders said there was no question that almost all of the governors want Burch to go and that their statement carried that message.

Two conservatives, Govs. Tim Babcock of Montana and Clifford Hansen of Wyoming, said Burch should resign if he could not subscribe to the governors' declaration.

The governors recommended to the national committee, which will meet Jan. 22 in Chicago, that "it adopt leadership which clearly represents a broad view of Republicanism and

U.S., State Probes of 'Red-Inspired' U.C. Riot Sought

By BOB HOUSER

Assemblyman Don Mulford, R-Oakland, charged Saturday that student riots on the University of California Berkeley campus were "Communist-inspired."

Mulford, chairman of the Assembly Republican Caucus, said he has asked Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh and Congressman Bob Wilson for immediate investigations of the riots by the state legislature and by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Mulford's statement was made before the 70-member executive board of the Republican State Central Committee in the Airport Marina Hotel, Los Angeles.

The assemblyman, whose district includes the Berkeley campus, told the board that University President Clark Kerr "is convinced" the recent demonstrations are Communist-inspired, "and I concur from the information I have been given."

HE SAID UNRUH HAS indicated he will appoint a fact-finding committee of the Assembly to probe the "serious situation" and that President Kerr "welcomes" it.

Mulford said he spent considerable time on the campus observing the disorders and saw some of the same faces he had seen at other riots, including the ones against HUAC and Madame Nhu, widow of the late South Viet Nam leader.

He criticized past attitudes of the university administration in saying off-campus student activities "are no concern of ours." He said, "My answer is that the university DOES have a particular obligation to our fine students to pursue education."

MULFORD DISPUTED CHARGES of police brutality by new Assemblymen Willie Brown and John Burton of San Francisco. He said he suggests "these freshmen legislators see the events personally before shooting from the hip. I was present from 10 p.m. to 5:30 a.m. and saw no act of police brutality. On the contrary, some of the students were kicking, elbowing and swinging." He said officers conferred for a full hour on methods to be used to remove the demonstrators without injuring them.

Mulford also scored the teachers who on Friday were absent "from their podiums" when a majority of university students came to class ready to do business, "because they (teachers) were on the picket line. I hope they will

ELECTION WINNER POSED AS LAWYER WHO DIED IN 1961

Michigan Legislator Unmasked as Ex-Convict

DETROIT (AP) — A re-elected Democratic state representative Saturday was alleged to have masqueraded under the name and educational background of a brilliant New York lawyer who died in 1961.

In a copyrighted story, the Detroit News said State Rep. Daniel W. West, 54, of Wayne (Detroit) County's 24th District, also concealed a prison record.

West was elected to his second legislative term in last month's general election.

The News said the masquerading allegations against West were made by William H. O'Brien, executive secretary of the Civil Searchlight Inc., and by Thomas W. O'Hara, a Ford Motor Co. worker and one of five candidates West defeated in the party's primary election last September.

Sgt. Leonard Clippert of the Detroit police special investigation bureau said the Detroit West's fingerprints identified him as a felon who served sentences in three prisons under other names.

O'Hara and O'Brien, the News said, claimed West

The New York West died at the age of 36 in 1961.

Contacted by the News, Rep. West said he would have no comment at this time on the allegation by O'Brien and O'Hara.

Rep. West currently is charged before Wayne County Recorder's Court Judge Arthur J. Kosciński with aiding and abetting the false registration of voters in the September primary. Rep. West is free on $500 bond pending trial.

The complaint was signed by John A. Smith, city elections director. Smith's complaint said Rep. West induced a group of voters in his old 6th District who were not in his new 24th District to register as if they lived in the 24th.

The shift in districts was caused by Michigan's legislative reapportionment this year.

Clippert said that West's fingerprints had been identified by the FBI as those of a felon who served sentences in the Minnesota State Reformatory for burglary, the District of Columbia Reformatory for housebreaking and larceny and the Iowa State Penitentiary for forgery.

The News said O'Brien charged that "West apparently has masqueraded since 1954 as an honor student at both Swarthmore College and the Yale Law School and as a former practicing attorney in New York state."

O'Brien said the Civic Searchlight, a nonpartisan publication which rates candidates for state office, as early as 1958 and more recently in its November 1964 issue, identified Rep. West as a graduate of both Swarthmore and Yale on information supplied by West.

Registration spokesmen at Swarthmore and Yale law school said school records listed only one Daniel W. West as having been graduated.

L.A.C. Says: 11 Years Later

The recent resignation of the president of the Long Beach Millikan High School PTA caused wide publicity and some criticism of that organization. It reminded me of a similar incident 11 years ago. After the heat had subsided, I wrote a column "A Friendly Criticism." It seems to me the same conditions prevail in PTA policy today and the same criticism is justified. For example, the state organization voted to oppose Proposition 14 on the recent ballot. The impression was given that this was the view of all PTA chapters—which the actual vote did not bear out. The April 12, 1953 column was as follows:

Probably the most powerful and constructive organization in this country is the PTA. This organization works closely with our schools and is in closer touch with what is being taught than any other group outside the teachers themselves. When the PTA and school teacher organization join together in supporting an issue it brings to bear a powerful force that reaches into every block in a community. Because of the respect held for the organizations very few people have the temerity to oppose them. For this very reason the PTA should keep itself above reproach in the way it presents its policies to the public and to its own members.

One policy it follows seems to this writer to be extremely vulnerable. That is the policy that when the state organization has taken action in endorsing a given project the opposition side cannot thereafter be presented in a PTA meeting. In justification of this policy we have been told that such endorsement is made only after the subject has been thoroughly examined and passed on by delegates from various levels of the organization. It is contended that thereafter it is essential that the organization stand as one in its attitude. For that reason the PTA is restricted to hearing only one side of an issue which it has endorsed.

It is our opinion that this is a very serious departure from true democracy, which is so important to the PTA organization. The state endorsement may be made several months before an election is held. In the intervening months many changes may occur. It just does not seem right that the members of any organization be held to the policy adopted by a top-level board of directors. Democrats vote Republican without being read out of the party. In the United States Senate the right to present both sides right up to the minute of voting is preserved to the point that it allows filibusters. That type of obstruction is deplorable, but it is surely better than having only one side presented.

This situation was brought to our attention by many members of the PTA during the period prior to the last election. We have waited until now to bring the subject out into the open because we hoped it might be corrected. It is also a good time for it to be discussed because there is no issue before the voters.

We would hope that before the organization again endorses some important project, to be presented to the voters, it will make provisions to insure that its members be allowed to hear both sides of any issue in its own meetings. Such a change in policy would, we believe, greatly safeguard the organization from future dangerous criticism. It is too valuable a force to this nation to allow any question to be raised as to the methods it uses in informing its members on issues which the organization endorses.—L.A.C.

MARSHALL TAYLOR

MURDER SUSPECT

Raymond R. Clark, found with wrists slashed in apartment with dead boy, was treated at Memorial Hospital before transfer to County General Hospital. Police booked him on investigation of murder.

Accuse Man, 23, of Slaying Boy

Police Saturday accused a 23-year-old unemployed plasterer in the slaying of a 14-year-old Hamilton Junior High School student after the body of the boy was discovered in a gas-filled bedroom in North Long Beach.

Officer W. E. Stull said he was dispatched to a residence at 3145 Thompson St. after Gary J. Prothero, 22, of 2147 Thompson St., called police to report an attempted suicide at the address.

The parents of Marshall Allen Taylor, 14, reportedly told Stull, "There's no need to hurry, they're both gone."

Stull then went directly to a garage-apartment occupied by Raymond Robert Clark, where he discovered young Taylor's body on a pull-out type couch-bed, lying beside the unconscious Clark.

Young Taylor, whose head was on a towel, had been struck repeatedly with a piece of pipe.

Clark appeared to have slashed his wrists with a double-edged razor blade which was found nearby, police said, and was taken to Memorial Hospital.

Police pieced together the following story:

Prothero, a roommate of Clark, said he spent Friday night in a downtown Long Beach hotel and returned to the apartment at 9 Saturday morning. He said he was unable to enter because of a locked door.

He then went to the residence of Marshall R. Taylor, the dead boy's father, at 3147 Thompson St., he said, to obtain a key to the locked door.

Prothero said when he returned to the apartment and opened the door, he smelled gas and saw the prostrate forms of young Taylor and Clark.

When police arrived, they found young Taylor. Clark was lying on the floor, with cuts on both arms.

THE DEAD boy's father told police he had heard Clark and his son drive into the garage about 1 a.m. Saturday, and then enter the apartment. Taylor said his son and Clark, "were like brothers," and the boy had lived "with him or near him for approximately 10 years."

Clark, who was transferred in good condition to County General Hospital, was booked on investigation of murder. He refused to make any statement to police regarding the events which took place in the apartment.

WEAPON USED in slaying of 14-year-old boy is believed to be the pipe displayed by technician Dave Donnelly of the Long Beach police crime laboratory.

Johnson Showing Irritability as Pressures of Job Build

By WALTER T. RIDDER

CHIEF, U.S. WASHINGTON BUREAU
WASHINGTON—President Johnson is more than ever in the glare of the spotlight and it's apparent that he is enjoying it less. At his last press conference, when he wasn't downright dull he was waspish toward reporters, and in general he comported himself as one who wasn't too happy about what he was reading in the press.

This is normal. Presidents, for a lot of good and bad reasons, become disenchanted with the writers and commentators and pundits. Some try to conceal their distaste, others make no bones about it.

Johnson has long been prickly about things published about him. Long before he reached his present position, he showed a sensitivity about the press which is unusual in a politician, most of whom learn to accept criticism and on occasion outright mistakes with relative charm. Not so Johnson, who has been known to nurse for years the hurts of an article which he considered unfair or overly critical.

THE RECENT testiness of the President may well stem from the fact that he is right now under the most intense pressure of his year in office. He is having trouble with his allies in Western Europe, although that is at the moment a minor crisis compared to others.

He has a real tough one on his hands in Viet Nam. It's the kind of decision which would test the mettle of any man. While in the process of making that decision, it is not to be wondered that he feels he can do without what he must consider the gratuitous help and criticism from those who do not bear ultimate responsibility.

Those who work closely with the President have noted that some of the zip has gone out of his approach as he struggles with such difficult problems as Asia and the debt row in the United Nations. The supreme confidence which he once had has been blunted and he doesn't move as quickly as once he did. He seems, deliberately or otherwise, to be holding back on making appointments which he certainly could—and in some cases should—make right now. In many offices of government, morale is low because they have acting chiefs who don't know whether they will be asked to take over permanently.

YES IT'S A MESS!

ALTHOUGH THE SIGN they hung on the mailbox invites a friendly visit even when the housework isn't done, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Porterfield didn't mean to imply visitors could help mess it up. At least not mess it up as badly as the car driven by Danny Manning Jr. of 1324 Eleanor St. did Saturday afternoon when its throttle stuck. The car bounced off a tree, another car and into the Porterfield home at 6645 Falcon Ave. The car enlarged the front door enough that its left side was touching the edge of the sign, labeled "Apology," (arrow in lower photo) which says: "Although you'll find our house a mess, come in, set down, converse. It doesn't always look like this. Some days it's even worse." Saturday obviously was one of those days.

Report Scranton Eyes '68

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania, who started late in his unsuccessful bid to win the 1964 presidential nomination, is already planning how to capture the party's top prize in 1968, the Philadelphia Inquirer said Saturday.

The Inquirer said, "This was confirmed Saturday by one of his top aides, who said flatly: 'The governor will be a candidate for president in 1968. You can bank on that.'"

The aide was not identified. Scranton and his top assistant, William Keisling, could not be reached immediately for comment. They were en route home from the Republican governors' conference in Denver.

not be paid for that day. Goldwater are not entitled to take over either. There's no excuse for those hired as teachers to abandon their responsibility of educating and taking to picket lines."

He said he would not repeat the physical description of the riots but told the Republican meeting it was "disgraceful." He said the so-called Free Speech Movement led by Mario Savin had "amazing discipline" with FSM students with armbands strategically located on each floor of the UC administration building.

In other board business, Ann Bowler of Long Beach and Gardiner Johnson of Piedmont, California, members of the GOP National Committee, said they would keep an open mind on the matter of ousting GOP National Chairman Dean Burch at the committee meeting Jan. 22 and 23 in Chicago.

If he is to be replaced, said Mrs. Bowler, "I hope it isn't someone way out to the left." She said she has received 350 letters from state Republicans urging her to stand against an ouster vote because it would be construed as a repudiation of Sen. Barry Goldwater. Only four letters were for Burch's dismissal, she said, and two of those were from out of state.

JOHNSON said he would not be "sucked in" to name-calling because it is no way to "solve this problem." He told the board he once thought the presidential nominee was entitled to select the national chairman on his own, but "I'm not sure that is the proper view now. I tend to think it isn't."

He said he still is a Goldwater man but emphasized the prime thing now in his consideration is not the man "but a program that will win for the party."

Johnson said Goldwater is the party's titular head and is entitled in a major way to have his views considered "but he can't, in effect, dictate." He added that the people who failed to support Goldwater are not entitled to take over either.

State GOP chairman Dr. Caylord B. Parkinson, San Diego, recited a 10-point program to restore the party. He advocated that the best GOP speakers make an aggressive approach to youth; said "we're not getting across to young people," and urged setting up of a 100-member committee of top citizens to make a 24-month examination of the structure and direction of the party.

CONGRESSMAN Wilson, chairman of the GOP Congressional campaign committee, said California was a bright spot for Republicans in the nation because, outside of the presidential vote, the GOP improved its numerical strength in Congress and gained three seats in the State Assembly.

He said California should be looked to for leadership especially in the light of a lesser performance by the party's highly-touted Ray Bliss, Ohio GOP chairman. Wilson noted Ohio's Robert Taft lost his Senate race, and the state lost four congressional seats and both houses of the state legislature.

BERKELEY (AP) — A troubled calm prevailed at the University of California campus Saturday in the wake of Thursday's mass arrests at an administration building sit-in and an attempted general strike Friday.

Leaders of the Free Speech Movement vowed that pickets would be back on the campus Monday.

There was no organized picketing Saturday.

LABOR VS. ROBOTS

Unions Devise New Strategy in Job Battle

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

American labor unions have evolved a new strategy in their battle against machine-caused unemployment. Seeing their 35-hour-work-week offensive stalled, the unions are resorting to guerrilla-like tactics designed to win at least some of their objectives by attrition.

The United Auto Workers' recent bargaining success in the auto industry indicates the line of approach.

By lowering the optional age to 55, and getting more relief time and extra holidays in its new contracts with the Big Three car makers, the UAW has opened up about 35,000 extra jobs in the industry. These include 1,500 in California, according to union estimates.

Vast Problem

Presumably, the same strategy by other unions not only is adding more jobs all the time, but also is changing the country's work patterns.

Whether it is doing either to any significant degree, however, it still is too early to tell.

One thing is certain: labor's task in the years ahead will not be easy. UAW chief Walter Reuther has said that 41 million jobs will be needed in the next 10 years to offset job displacement due to automation, and to take care of incoming young workers.

While it is difficult to fix the starting point of labor's current drive, it's safe to say that it received one of its biggest boosts a little over a year and a half ago from the United Steelworkers of America.

At that time, the steel union obtained a 13-week sabbatical leave for its workers to force the companies to hire additional workers to fill in during the leaves.

UAW Assists

President Johnson gave the movement a strong push in January by urging double pay for overtime and asking Congress to enact such a measure for selected industries.

Since then, the campaign has been gathering momentum.

Earlier this year, for example, the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and the Teamsters Union went into joint negotiations with northern California warehouse employers and (unsuccessfully) demanded a $1 surcharge on time-and-a-half pay for overtime work.

The idea behind it, of course, was to force the warehouse firms to hire additional workers rather than pay the prohibitive overtime charges. An ILWU spokesman said the demand will be brought up again.

Other Steps

Other unions are advancing—or considering—such contract proposals as early retirement, limitations on overtime, expanded overtime pay and additional paid holidays—or simply different combinations of these.

Some unions, like the International Association of Machinists, still are pushing the 35-hour week, with various modifications.

Other unions are going ahead with their own plans. Several months ago, for example, the ILWU and the Sugar Workers Union, AFL-CIO, announced a plan to introduce early retirement among refinery workers in California and Hawaii.

Under the plan, "individuals aged 62 with 30 years of service (are) given the voluntary option of retirement at $100 monthly in addition to their regular pension benefits whenever a machine threatens layoffs."

Retire at 50

In its latest contract with Southern California supermarkets, the Retail Clerks union cut the retirement age from 65 to 60, and made early retirement possible at 50 with reduced benefits.

While virtually every plan noted indicates a desire on labor's part not only to preserve jobs but also, equally as important, to make new ones,

FOR THE LONELY OLD FOLKS, CHRISTMAS IS A TIME TO DIE

"They die with good food."

"They die without bed-sores."

But they die.

And no one, the hospital officials maintain, even cares.

"Our children are spoiled, not only at Christmas time but all year long. We have individuals and groups all year long bringing gifts to the kids, making them happy with parties and special treats. But the old folks they forget."

The old folks—who outnumber the children at the giant facility by about 10 to 1—don't complain.

They lie in their beds waiting to die.

"MY HUSBAND died a couple of years ago," said one gray-haired woman, "and my dog died a little later. It's my turn now."

She's right.

"Most of our old patients," say hospital aides, "have a degeneration of the vital organs... failing hearts, livers, kidneys."

"But they die slowly. It takes a long time for the heart to finally stop, or for the liver to go bad."

AND SO time drags. And relatives and friends, if any, lose interest.

They die alone.

"I have a relative," one woman boasted. "He's an actor on call, and can't come very often. I'm expecting him any time now."

He didn't come, though.

Another 84-year-old former dining-room employee came to the United States from her native Germany. She knew no one when she came, she knows no one now.

Some observers doubt the efficacy of the job-making plans, feeling they'll be of little use over the long run because they try to tackle such a large problem with such small means.

Lifetime Pacts

If this view spreads, it could be that labor may switch entirely to the defensive stance wherever it can, with its only objective being a lifetime guarantee of work for those already working.

The steelworkers have put the steel industry on notice that they intend to campaign for lifetime job security. And one highly respected observer of the labor scene, A. H. Raskin, says in the Saturday Review that the coming East Coast waterfront contract doubtless will "contain lifetime job and income pledges."

Labor leaders, however, still are left with the problem of full employment.

Some observers feel a universal 35-hour work week, if not a 30-hour week, is the only possible solution.

Public Works

At this stage, however, the prospects of a shorter work week aren't very good, either from a legislative or a collective-bargaining standpoint. Congress certainly isn't hot for the idea, and neither is the White House.

As for the overtime measure suggested by Johnson its chances are uncertain. It seems safe to say, though, that any such legislation will meet with bitter resistance from business and industry—and particularly marginal business, for which the proposal could be ruinous, some believe.

Meanwhile, labor hasn't forgotten its campaign other forms of government aid. It still is pressing hard for massive federal spending on public works—schools, sewer systems, libraries and recreation centers.

No Moonlighting

One Southland labor leader—Joseph DeSilva, executive secretary of Local 770 of the Retail Clerks—offers still another approach. He would eradicate the practice of moonlighting—the holding of two jobs by one man. He would do this by having Congress impose heavy tax penalties on supplementary income.

DeSilva notes that there now are over 3,600,000 moonlighters in the country, and these people are shutting off almost that many jobs from the unemployed.

But DeSilva admits that the long-term solution may not be so simple.

In fact, one group of citizens—an ad hoc committee of economists and social scientists—suggested several months ago that nothing short of a guaranteed income for all, including the unemployed, can meet the challenge of automation.

"PERHAPS," whispered one attendant sadly, "she'll meet her old friends soon. She's dying of cancer."

A 93-year-old ex-West Virginia coal miner keeps his one good eye—the one he didn't lose in the mines—out for his family's visits.

"He was unable to care for himself," nurses explained, "so his relatives brought him here."

The "baby of the ward" has been in the hospital 10 years, aides say, and once—last year—was put on the critical list.

"He was dying."

HIS SONS—who hadn't seen him in 34 years—came to see him die.

"But he fooled 'em," the nurses laugh.

He probably won't the next time, they admit.

Primping her snow-white hair, another of the aged lost her faint smile briefly:

"I was a singer, and traveled around a lot in my youth. Those were the busy days—I was too busy to have children."

"I do believe I made a mistake."

A 72-YEAR-OLD invalid is proud.

She has a son, she quickly tells everyone.

And she shows them his yellowed wedding picture. "But," she says quietly, "I can't understand it. I haven't seen him, and he hasn't written since I've been at the hospital."

She's been at the hospital 18 years.

THE NURSES, who wrote to the man in an attempt to bring the little lady some joy, also can't understand.

"We didn't mean to interfere," they said, "but we wrote just before Mother's Day to remind him. We know he got the letter."

But his mother didn't get one in return.

"We try," say sympathetic hospital officials, "to keep their minds off their loneliness, their health, their problems."

Hobby carts visit the wards. The patients are brought to church services, or if they can't make it the church services are brought to them.

A beauty shop is in operation, especially for them.

to get dressed and be active." This, the official adds, only applies to the ones who can get out of bed at all.

There are those who can't. And for them dying is the slowest.

But it comes.

It's just a little easier if someone is around.

IT USES ONLY ONE SPARK PLUG, NEEDS NO TUNEUPS

Chrysler May Market New Turbine Car

By CARLO J. SALZANO
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — How would you like to have a car that uses only one spark plug and needs no tuneups?

Such a car owner's dream may turn into reality

If Chrysler Corp. decides to market its new turbine car. To test the four-passenger hard-top under all kinds of conditions while recording driver and pedestrian reaction to it, the company made 50 of the new cars to be driven by about 200 selected users. So far, reports filtering back to Detroit seem to be exceeding expectations.

ONE OF the drivers selected in the Washington area last March had nothing but praise for the car. Retired Rear Adm. Raymond P. Hunter reported he drove the car "for three happy months." What impressed him most about the car was "its ease of operation, complete lack of vibration." The naval officer said he would be interested in buying a turbine if reasonably priced. At this point, Chrysler hasn't even decided whether it would be economically feasible to put it on the assembly line.

FEASIBLE OR not, the bronze-colored car has captured interest wherever it travels.

With a body hand-crafted by Ghia of Turin, Italy, the experimental job has a roof covered in black vinyl and a rear end accented by the swept-back aerodynamic styling. Turbine symbolism is evident in the ribbed tubes that project as casings around the backup lights.

MOST FASCINATING to the layman, of course, is the revolutionary engine.

The 130-horsepower engine weighs only 410 pounds and features a major breakthrough in turbine engine design—a gas generator acceleration time of one second from idle to maximum output. The turbine eliminates the need for engine tune-ups because it has no series of timed events, a simple fuel control system replacing the carburetor, and only one spark plug for its operation.

And how does it do on gas? It will burn just about any kind of fuel that will flow through a pipe and burn with air. Chrysler recommends the use of kerosene or diesel fuel, or mixing the two in any proportions.

K's Fall Leaves Italian Tailor Stuck With Suits

By HARRY J. STATHOS
 ROME (UPI) — One man who mourns the downfall of Nikita Khrushchev is Angelo Litrico, once described by the ex-Soviet premier as "the only non-communist friend I have in the world."

Litrico was Khrushchev's tailor, putting some style into the former Soviet leader's wardrobe. But he did such a good job of Westernizing the wardrobe that some people maintain Litrico did his client a disservice—with the Kremlin inner circle—by sprucing up his appearance.

With his smarter look, Litrico may have sown the seeds of envy among his comrades. Who else among them possessed raised insteps, supple mented by fairly high wheels, to correct Khrushchev's roly-poly squatness. Litrico not only lost a good customer when Khrushchev was toppled, he also got stuck with three suits ordered especially for the ex-premier's planned visit to West Germany.

The suits were ordered, as usual, through the Soviet Ambassador in Rome. But Litrico is pretty certain that no one will be around to pick them up for Khrushchev.

It was in 1957, when the first Italian fashion show traveled to Russia, that Litrico decided to tag along. He took an overcoat he had especially cut for Khrushchev, using photographs and measurements as a present. Khrushchev snapped at the for-ent and the unexpected tail-or-client relationship was established. It took a palace coup to break up a good friendship—and cost Litrico an important customer.

TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT

Two Turkish air force F84 jet fighters, serving as honorary military escort, fly close to wing of airliner carrying Pope Paul VI home from India. Efforts to get them to move away were unsuccessful.

Harrowing Turkish Escort Enlivens Pope's Trip Home

Editor's Note—The following dispatch is an eye-witness account by an Associated Press correspondent who was aboard Pope Paul VI's flight when it was met by Turkish air force jet escorts Saturday over Turkey.

By EUGENE LEVIN
 Associated Press Writer

ROME—Two Turkish air force jet fighters flew a chilling wingtip-to-wingtip escort Saturday for the Italian jetliner carrying Pope Paul VI home from India. Harrowing as it was to some other passengers 33,000 feet over Turkey, the experience did not seem to bother the pontiff.

For 25 tense minutes, two U.S.-built F84 fighters sent up to welcome the Roman Catholic pontiff flew so close to the DC8 jet that the airliner's pilot made emergency radio efforts to have the escorting military planes called off.

HE DID NOT succeed. The two planes, with red-and-white Turkish star-and-crescent flags painted on their tails, finally waggled their wings in farewell and disappeared when the papal plane entered a cloud bank.

Through the airliner—carrying 70 passengers besides Pope Paul, and a crew of 12—went a murmur of relief.

Apparently the Turkish pilots were unaware of the consternation they caused on the Pope's plane. They waved and saluted, and this correspondent could easily see their faces and even structural details such as fuselage seams.

In Ankara, a Turkish government spokesman said he did not think the fighter pilots created a dangerous situation.

"Turkish pilots, like all Turkish people, have a great respect for the Pope," the spokesman said. "I don't think they created such a dangerous situation. The latest model, high-speed planes might have given such an impression."

On the Alitalia airliner, though, some passengers prayed, others glanced nervously out of the windows and urged the crew to do something. Others snapped photographs.

MEMBERS of Pope Paul's staff, finally waggled their wings in farewell and disappeared when the papal plane entered a cloud bank.

and he may not have realized how close the planes were.

From the economy-class section behind the wings, passengers watched as four jets sidled in—two on each side of the pontiff's four-engine jet—at a speed of about 500 miles an hour.

The two on the left maintained a moderate distance, but the two on the right moved in close and sometimes the wings of the three planes overlapped.

Nova Scotia Storm Hits Lobstermen

HALIFAX, N.S. (AP)—Preliminary surveys indicate lobstermen in Lunenburg, Queens and Shelburne counties suffered about 25% losses or damage to traps and gear in the violent wind and snow storm that swept the Canadian Maritimes early this week.

A fisherman in the Bridgewater area said the catch in the first four days of the new season was about half normal.

$600,000 Loss in Blaze Blamed on Lack of Water

SACRAMENTO (AP)—With water, but they turned me firemen hampered by a lack of enough water hydrants, a fire destroyed a suburban food market early Saturday, causing $600,000 estimated damage.

It was the largest fire loss ever recorded in the Carmichael Fire District, officials said.

Carmichael Fire Chief Dan Donovan reported that before the market at Mission and El Camino Avenues was opened, he had asked the store operators to install two fire hydrants in front.

"I told them then that if they ever had a fire this would happen because we would not have enough water, but they turned me down," the chief said.

He said the management reported $30,000 in cash in the store safe, but added "I would make a bet right now that when they open the safe there will be just a handful of ashes left."

Offshore-Boundary Debate in Supreme Court Monday

ries of California. The treaty of Hidalgo and the state's Constitutional Convention of 1849 support California's claim, Attorney Gen. Thomas C. Lynch will argue.

THE STATE'S arguments that these historic boundaries should apply were strengthened when Congress passed the 1953 Tidelands Act and when the Supreme Court ruled on another offshore - boundary case involving Louisiana in 1960, California stated in written briefs filed earlier. The Supreme Court has set aside an unusual long period for the arguments—five hours—which indicates the justices will have many questions to ask of the advocates in the case. Two days probably will be needed to wind up the arguments, and it will be many weeks before a decision can be handed down.

practices a policy of inclusion, rather than exclusion."

THEY SAID flatly that "any policy of exclusion must be changed and cannot be tolerated."

The governors at the same time called for convening of an "all-inclusive, intraparty conference" in the spring of 1965 and revision of their organization to assure their own control of its financing and policy-making, with their own office in Washington.

Scranton, in the presence of fellow governors, told a news conference he had kept silent "for a long time" in the hope that Burch would act to unify the party in the wake of the November election defeats. "There has not been one thing, gesture or action in that direction," he said. "Instead, there has been continuation of the exclusion policy. I think it is important to unify the party around our national leadership and I do not believe it should be changed."

The moderate governors, still not fully recovered from the embarrassment of their failure to "Stop Goldwater" at their national conference in Cleveland earlier this year, were determined to emerge from Denver with a demand for action.

GOV. ROBERT E. Smylie of Idaho, chairman of the Republican Governors Association, who called this meeting, said the final declaration "describes a national chairman which in my personal opinion Mr. Burch isn't." He added dryly: "If the shoe fits, it can be worn with comfort."

Romney said he had concluded that "in the interest of unifying our party, it is necessary for Dean Burch to be removed or to resign as national chairman."

"It would be impossible for the Republican Party to unify and broaden and strengthen itself under his direction, because of the positions he, and those he is responsible to, have continued to take."

IN THEIR statement, the governors also condemned "all forms of narrow political radicalism, whether of the right or left," and gave their support to "all necessary action, public or private, to root out discrimination throughout the United States."

The governors, and governors-elect, who met in Denver Friday and Saturday, urged that the proposed spring conference recommend policy review and structural strengthening of the party. They said the national committee should include "considerable representation" of congressional and gubernatorial members, state chairmen, young Republicans, Republican women and finance-committee members.

SMALL BUT POWERFUL satellite, the Nimbus B shown in artist's sketch, can photograph details in the dark, with "cameras" sensitive to infrared radiation.

By Ralph Dighton

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the past five years, a hush revolution has taken place in the United States' ability to keep its eye on the rest of the world from the sky.

The surveillance — on obvious targets such as buried or camouflaged missile sites, and on less obvious targets such as industrial centers where traffic patterns may betray a concentration of effort on little known projects — goes on day and night from two levels.

Level One is the atmosphere, extending upward for about 20 miles. Through it wing such planes as the high-soaring U2; a photo-version of the F4 phantom fighter, called the RF4C; a four-engine version of the B57 Canberra bomber, called the RB57F; and the newly announced RS71, a camera-toting adaptation of the 2,200-mile-an-hour A11.

Their increasing efficiency has depended largely on technical breakthroughs in cameras and other surveillance gear developed for vehicles that travel in Level Two: the 100 miles-and-up zone of satellites such as Discoverer, Midas, Samos and Nimbus.

WITH new lenses and electronic magnifying techniques, cameras in Samos photographic satellites now reportedly can read a newspaper from orbital altitude.

Better still, "cameras" sensitive to infrared (heat) radiation instead of visible light can see as well at night as earlier aerial cameras could in bright daylight.

This breakthrough — crucial in maintaining 24-hour surveillance — came in development of Midas satellites. This program was almost cancelled once because infrared sensors designed to detect the heat of missile launchings were too frequently confused by other heat sources such as blast furnaces, sun-reflecting crags and even the sun itself.

THERE HAS been no official confirmation, but more than a year ago rumors swept through the aerospace industry that Midas researchers had broken through the sensitivity barrier.

Since then researchers in other programs have disclosed lenses can be made that will filter out all but certain desired frequencies of infrared radiation. Lenses obviously can be made which "see" only the radiations known to come from missile exhausts and are blind to all other radiations.

First official indication of the advances in infrared surveillance came with the recent launching of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Nimbus weather satellite.

Much smaller than Samos and Midas satellites, Nimbus nonetheless has been able to take detailed pictures of the cloud cover at night, and engineers admit its infrared sensors could be focused on the ground just as well as on clouds.

U.S. reconnaissance satellites, launched southward over the Pacific from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California, go into orbit around the earth's poles. This brings every square mile of the revolving earth's surface under surveillance once a day.

So far as is known, the Soviet Union has never used polar orbit. It is not believed to have launch pads from which it could fire south without detection. But this is no great disadvantage.

Russian satellites, launched eastward into a serpentine orbit around the earth's middle, easily scan all U.S. areas except Alaska — and that can be watched adequately by high flying aircraft based across the Bering Sea.

Whether the Soviets have a counterpart to the U2 plane has never been disclosed, but they've had almost five years to study the one that came down in Russia May 1, 1960.

SINCE THE international furor following the Francis Gary Powers incident, military men have been studying every plane in the U.S. inventory as a possible replacement for the U2.

A fairly successful compromise was the RB57F. This twin-jet bomber was given longer wings resembling the U2's and two small engines so it could loiter at high altitude. It had more than twice the U2's 500-M.P.H. speed, but this wasn't fast enough to escape 1,500-M.P.H. fighters. The big breakthrough in Level One reconnaissance was the development of a 100-foot-long triangle-tailed plane that could spear through the air at 2,200 miles an hour and soar to an altitude of 100,000 feet. Equally important, it had a range of some 2,000 miles and could carry a heavy payload.

ITS manufacturer, Lockheed Aircraft Corp., called it the A11 during development. The Air Force liked it so well it called for two versions: the YF12A, an interceptor equipped with bomber-killing missiles, and the RS71, with room for the latest optical and infrared gear in the missile bays.

Made of heat-resistant titanium, which means it can streak through the air at speeds that would melt aluminum or even steel, the A11 points the way for designing 2,000 M.P.H. airliners and even faster bombers.

And it provides, right now, the multi-speed, multi-altitude platform needed to supplement fixed speed and altitude satellites.

As the YF12A carries up to four 800-pound missiles plus an elaborate radar aiming system. As the RS71, it more than two tons of interchangeable day and night snooping devices.

FLOWN FROM Alaska strips — reported likely after it becomes operational next year — the RS71 will be able to investigate evidence of nuclear tests or troop and material movements by land and sea detected by satellites.

Its large payload means the RS71 can carry a whole range of detection devices much more sophisticated than cameras.

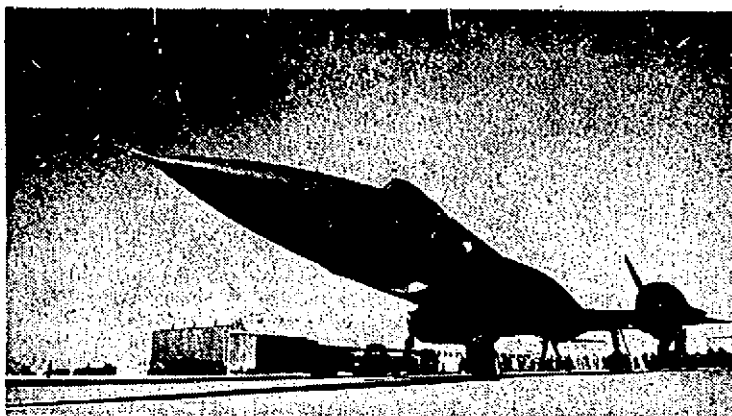

Just as analysis of smoke from a chimney tells whether the occupant is burning coal or wood, study of exhaust from a missile on a test stand shows precisely what blend of fuel it uses.

THIS KIND of scientific snooping has been advanced

Nosy

Eyes in the Sky

LONG-NOSED AND NOSY, this 2,200 mph YF12A interceptor can reach an altitude of 100,000 feet, and has a range of 2,000 miles with a heavy payload—including fantastic spying equipment.

recently to a stage where long-distance analysis of invisible gases above a factory indicates what materials are used in products made there.

Almost every element has a give-away signature of infrared radiation and these can be distinguished even though scattered as sparsely as one part in several million parts of air.

With such tools available, it is small wonder that military and intelligence agencies are pushing for better platforms on which to mount them in the air and in space.

UNDOUBTEDLY much reconnaissance use will be made of the new F111, a land-or carrier-based fighter with wings that fold backward for high speed flight.

But both the F111 and the A11 are stepping stones toward a new generation of vehicles which would operate equally well in air or in space and which could carry armament, reconnaissance gear or both.

This new aerospace plane doesn't even exist on drawing boards yet, but the experts say new discoveries in structure and propulsion may make it possible to build within a few years.

RESEARCHERS recently have learned that boron fibers can be fabricated into fuselages that are stronger, lighter and more resistant to heat than titanium. And alloys have been found that will permit jet engine temperatures to be raised several hundred degrees, which means they can use higher power fuels.

Also on the way are more powerful rockets, such as Titan 3 and Saturn, which will boost heavier and more elaborate surveillance systems into space. The Manned Orbiting Laboratory now expected to be the United States' next space venture after the Apollo moon shots, has been billed as a "scientific" program but it has an obvious military use: a platform on which to mount tireless, all-seeing eyes in space.

GOOD FOR CATS

But That's Not All Catnip's Good for

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Cats act as though they thought nature invented catnip solely for their excitement and rapture.

They eat it. They roll in it. They cavort in its presence like creatures far gone in ecstasy.

But Thomas Eisner, a Cornell entomologist, doubts that driving cats crazy with delight is catnip's true reason for being.

In Science Magazine, Eisner suggests that catnip's primary function is not to attract cats but to repel insects.

Catnip is a compound produced by certain mint plants. Why did evolution endow these plants with this particular manufacturing capacity?

"Surely," Eisner reasoned, "a mint plant derives no benefit from ability to stimulate cats."

IT TURNS out that some ants and an insect called the "walking stick" also manufacture compounds similar to catnip.

They use them as defense weapons in chemical warfare. The walking stick ejects a spray against other creatures which might want to eat or otherwise harm it.

This spray, Eisner said, is "strongly repellent to ants, beetles, spiders, birds, and even ourselves."

Eisner figured that catnip might perform a similar pest control service for mint plants. He conducted some experiments.

OF 78 INSECTS tested, 13 beat it when catnip vapor was brought near them. Subjected to direct contact with catnip, "they fled instantly and quickly," pausing only to cleanse themselves of the stuff.

Ants on the march stopped abruptly an inch away from a drop of liquid catnip. This and other examples convinced Eisner that "catnip is evidently an insect repellent of considerable effectiveness."

Eisner's report said nothing of the effect of catnip on fleas. But if your cat ever has ants, let him have a catnip orgy.

7 GI's Wounded in Big Viet Clash

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (UPI)—Seven American servicemen were wounded Saturday in a major clash between government troops and Communist guerrillas in South Viet Nam, a U.S. military spokesman reported.

The spokesman said one U.S. Army soldier was wounded in the ground battle and six helicopter crewmen were injured by Viet Cong ground fire.

According to first reports reaching military headquarters in Saigon, at least 23 South Vietnamese soldiers were killed and 51 wounded in the major engagement near the delta village of Tan Phu, 140 miles southwest of Saigon.

American military advisers accompanying Vietnamese troops into battle reported counting 50 Communist dead.

LBJ Bid for British Viet Aid Seen

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson is expected to urge that Britain increase its assistance to the anti-Communist struggle in South Viet Nam when he meets Prime Minister Harold Wilson here Monday and Tuesday.

Johnson has said he favors the maximum possible participation by U.S. allies in support of South Viet Nam.

Undersecretary of State George W. Ball conferred in London early this week with Wilson, British Foreign Secretary Patrick Gordon Walker and Defense Secretary Denis Healey.

Ball and David Bruce, U.S. ambassador to Britain, reported to Johnson Saturday on the proposals which Wilson is bringing to Washington and on his attitude toward the talks here. The report is understood to be optimistic.

Brunette Victim in Scarf Slaying

BALTIMORE (AP)—A pretty brunette file clerk died of asphyxiation "presumed to have been caused by strangulation," a medical examiner said Saturday after an autopsy.

The body of Mrs. Sally Patricia Crough, 23, was found Friday sprawled on the bed in her second-floor apartment in suburban Catonsville.

Two scarves were knotted tightly around her neck. Clad in a yellow house coat, she lay face down. A clock radio was playing.

Dr. Rudiger Breiteneker, assistant medical examiner who made the autopsy report, said further medical tests would be made to determine whether Mrs. Crough might have been drugged, because the body showed no signs that there was a struggle.

Butcher Strike Vote Set Today

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Federal mediators were intensifying efforts to head off a threatened strike by 12,000 Southern California meat cutters.

Members of the AFL-CIO Meat Cutters Union were scheduled to meet today to decide whether to strike—and when—if an agreement is not reached.

Involved in the dispute are supermarket butchers in Los Angeles, Ventura, Santa Barbara, Orange, San Bernardino, Riverside and San Luis Obispo counties.

Kill-for-Hire Plot Charged

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—A young woman and a man were arrested Saturday after, police said, they hired two detectives to kill the woman's husband.

Police said Mrs. Peggy Jo John, 22, and Robert C. Pitz, 24, both of Buffalo, were unaware of the detectives' identity.

Mrs. John and Pitz were charged with conspiracy to murder Mrs. John's husband, Paul E., 35.

Fancy Footwork in Space by Mariner

PASADENA (AP)—Mariner 4 performed an intricate maneuver with clockwork precision Saturday 1.25 million miles out in space and fired a rocket expected to drive it within 4,400 miles of Mars next July 14.

With no hint of troubles which called off a similar attempt Friday, the camera-toting spacecraft streaked smoothly on through space, apparently well ahead of its rival in history's first interplanetary race, the Russian Zond 2 launched Monday.

Mariner 4, launched last Nov. 28, was traveling at a slightly increased speed of 7,047 miles an hour toward earth's mysterious neighbor—at that point still 122.5 million miles away.

Mystery Band of Algerians Spotted

CAIRO (AP)—A mysterious band of Algerians dressed in civilian clothes passed through Khartoum airport, evidently on their way to join the Congolese rebel forces, it was reliably reported Saturday.

The band of about 40 Algerians was accompanied by the same number of Africans, also in civilian clothes. These were believed to be Congolese rebels given guerrilla training by Algerian President Ahmed ben Bella's forces.

Russians Report Sex-Change Surgery

MOSCOW (AP)—Soviet physicians changed the sex of a 27-year-old male by surgery and hormone treatment, the youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda reported Saturday.

The successful sex transformation was reported in papers read at a recent academy of medical sciences conference in Leningrad.

Three medical specialists, L. L. Liberman, N. P. Dubinin and

I. L. Goldman, said the operation was performed at the academy's Institute of Obstetrics and Gynecology in Leningrad.

The report said a photograph of the mustachioed male patient taken before the operation was shown, together with a postoperative picture of a smiling woman.

Similar operations have been performed in the West.

It said the unidentified patient was born with two X chromosomes with which females are normally born, plus a male Y chromosome. After the operation and hormone treatment, the patient's beard and mustache disappeared, the report added.

"The facial oval, skin, figure, walk and eyes also changed," it said, describing the patient's new appearance.

FBI ACCUSES EXEC, 67, OF SHOOTING PLANES

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP)—A "brilliant" executive-engineer, employed by a firm which handles defense contracts, was accused by the FBI Saturday of shooting military planes which flew near his farm.

One of the planes he is accused of hitting was a B52, a type used to carry nuclear bombs.

The executive, 67-year-old Gilbert H. Hagerman of New Carlisle, Ohio, was charged with three counts of destroying government property.

HAGERMAN was unavailable for comment. A business associate at Robbins and Myer Inc., electrical manufacturers, describe Hagerman as "a very brilliant man."

Hagerman is director of research and development for the firm. He has worked for it for 30 years.

Taken before U.S. Commissioner Robert E. Brown for a preliminary examination, he asked that the examination be delayed until he could be represented by counsel. He was released on $1,000 bond pending hearing Thursday.

E. D. MASON, special agent in charge of the Cincinnati FBI office, said Hagerman's arrest climaxed a month-long investigation.

He said Hagerman, who lives on a farm about seven miles from Wright-Patterson Air Force Base near Dayton, faces a maximum penalty of one year in prison and $1,000 fine.

"BRILLIANT" executive, Gilbert H. Hagerman, 67, of New Carlisle, Ohio, appears for preliminary examination on charges that he sniped at planes, including a B52 and a jet tanker, flying over his farm.

or both, on each count if convicted. The farm is within a mile of the line of flight of airplanes taking off and landing at Wright-Patterson, one of the Air Force's key research and space centers.

The investigation began Nov. 4 after Air Force officers told FBI agents a bullet hole was found in the fuselage of a KC135 jet tanker.

Mason said five planes were hit by bullets fired from the ground. No crewmen were injured, he said, "nor has a rifle bullet activated any aircraft explosives or jet fuel."

The FBI complaint accuses Hagerman of shooting at three planes—the KC135 tanker, a B52, a T29 trainer—on Nov. 3, Nov. 14 and Nov. 25.

MASON did not comment on Hagerman's possible reasons for shooting at the planes. He said the FBI investigation turned up some comments from residents in the area "involving aircraft noise and interruptions of television."

Reports here said Hagerman had complained recently about the noise of the planes. The words "Rest Home" were reportedly painted on the roof of one of Hagerman's farm buildings.

The FBI said Hagerman has lived on the farm for 24 years. Agents seized three rifles at the farm Wednesday and sent them to the FBI laboratory.

The FBI said crewmen in the planes did not realize they had been fired at until technicians discovered the bullet holes after landing.

Schoolmen Discuss Funds With Solons

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Money and where to find it was one of the topics most discussed Saturday by educators and legislators attending a conference on urban school crises.

Most speakers agreed most problems met in urban areas are found in suburbs as well and did not confine their approaches solely to what they termed the overall "urban crisis."

Ronald W. Cox, California's

associate superintendent of public instruction, suggested the state should contribute more money to "crying educational needs."

Cox and Neil V. Sullivan, superintendent of the Berkeley Unified School District, were among the speakers at the conference jointly sponsored by the California Teachers Association and the National Education Association.

"The major cost of the programs should and must be borne by the state from revenue sources other than the local property tax," Cox said. "To do otherwise would burden with substantial increase present total tax efforts in the very areas where they are now excessive."

AIRBORNE TV SNOOPER

Device Tells How Many See What

By BERNARD GAVZER

WINTER PARK, Fla. (UPI)—The twin-engine Beechcraft approaches its target, levels off at 2,000 feet and zips above the rooftops at 150 mph — "eavesdropping" on television viewers.

It can zero in on any neighborhood and then electronically collect and record signals given off by TV sets. In the space of 18 seconds, it covers an area three-fourth of a mile long and one mile wide.

This electronic eavesdropper is expected by its inventors and developers to produce what they claim will be more accurate rating of television programs.

"WE THINK it is the perfect technique for determining scientifically and with accuracy the number of television sets tuned to given channels at a given program period," says David L. Nicholson, 30-year-old president of Television Audit Corp.

Steve Mixsell, 32, who is the firm's whiz on electronic devices, says "our system has the electronic capacity to count 1,250,000 actually operating TV sets an hour."

"It works by being able to detect what channel a set is tuned to," explains Mixsell. "This is possible because each tuning oscillator gives off a specific signal for a specific channel."

THE WEEK IN REVIEW

Baker Inquiry, FBI Arrests Spotlighted

By SAM FOGG
United Press International

The federal government carried out one of the most sensational civil rights crackdowns in history last week. In a rapid-fire raid, the FBI arrested 21 Mississippians on charges stemming from the murder of three young civil rights workers last summer.

Under arrest were Lawrence A. Rainey, sheriff of Neshoba County; his deputy, Cecil Price; a "fire and brimstone" country preacher, and a collection of reputed Ku Klux Klan members from the area of Philadelphia, Miss., where the three slain civil rights workers were last seen.

The bodies of the one Negro and two white victims were discovered buried in an earthen farm dam near Philadelphia on Aug. 4. The three dead men who had gone to Mississippi last summer to promote the civil rights cause were Michael Schwerner, 24, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Andrew Goodman, 20, of New York City, and James Chaney, 22, a Meridian, Miss., Negro.

Ten of those arrested were charged with a plot that allegedly ended in the lynch-mob death of the three young civil rights advocates. Nine others were accused of conspiring in the plot. Two were alleged to have had knowledge of the grim events.

ALL BUT THE latter two were held under an 1870 civil rights law which could result in 10 years imprisonment and a $5,000 fine.

The arrested men could not be brought to book for murder because of lack of federal jurisdiction in such cases. However, the federal charges contended that the three civil rights workers were arrested last June on a traffic charge as part of a plot in which they were to be intercepted by a group which intended to "threaten, assault, shoot and kill them."

The development climaxed an acrimonious period of dispute between FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and the Negro civil rights community.

Hoover, in a recent press conference with a group of women reporters, had referred to civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. as a liar for the latter's claim that FBI agents in Southern states had not pursued police work strenuously because they were Southern-born.

HOOPER AND KING had a get-together at FBI headquarters last week and the Negro spokesman disclosed that the long-time federal police chief had indicated the Mississippi arrests were imminent.

The persistent political ghost of the Bobby Baker case walked again on Capitol Hill last week.

The Senate Rules Committee, after an election campaign hiatus, reopened public inquiry into the lucrative outside business activities of Baker, former Senate Democratic secretary.

The upshot was a spattering of charges of influence peddling, denials and—in the case of Baker—a firm refusal to answer questions on constitutional grounds, including that of possible self-incrimination.

The main accuser was a former insurance agent pal of Baker's, Don Reynolds, who said the one-time Senate page boy had participated in a $25,000 campaign fund "kickback deal" accruing from an over-payment on construction of the District of Columbia Stadium.

REYNOLDS described himself as the "bagman" who helped channel the "kickback" into Democratic campaign coffers in 1960 when President Johnson was running as vice presidential running mate with John F. Kennedy.

Reynolds said the over-payment on an insurance performance bond was paid by Matthew J. McCloskey, Philadelphia contractor who built the D. C. Stadium and a long-time treasurer of the Democratic Party.

McCloskey, who served a brief hitch as ambassador to Ireland, followed Reynolds to the witness stand to deny any hanky-panky. He said the excess fee was the result of an inadvertent "goof" by his auditing staff.

As the hearings went on, there were these developments:

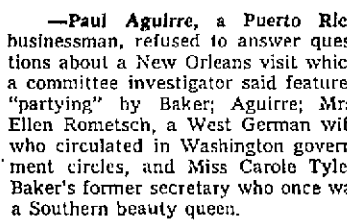

—Myron Weiner, a Johnny-come-lately public relations man in Washington, testified that he had paid Baker $5,000 for his influence in congressional consideration of a bill benefitting ship-fitting firms.

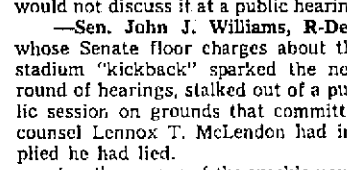

ELLEN Rometsch, who was a topic of questions during the Bobby Baker hearing in the Senate, left for Europe before probe began.

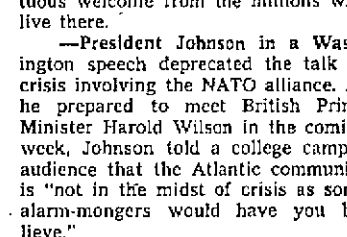

MAXWELL Taylor returned to Saigon after top-level talks in Washington on conduct of anti-Communist war in South Viet Nam.

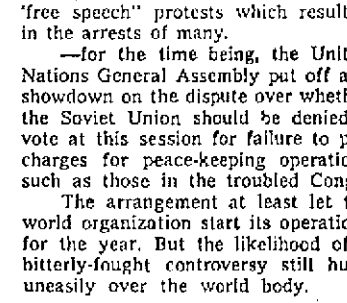

—Paul Aguirre, a Puerto Rico businessman, refused to answer questions about a New Orleans visit which a committee investigator said featured "partying" by Baker, Aguirre, Mrs. Ellen Rometsch, a West German wife who circulated in Washington government circles, and Miss Carole Tyler, Baker's former secretary who once was a Southern beauty queen.

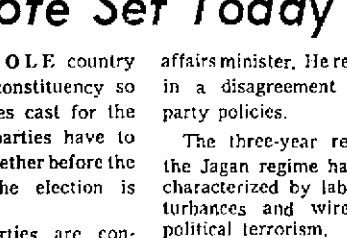

—Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., whose Senate floor charges about the stadium "kickback" sparked the new round of hearings, stalked out of a public session on grounds that committee counsel Lennox T. McLendon had implied he had lied.

—Pope Paul visited the Hindu country of India and received a tumultuous welcome from the millions who live there.

—President Johnson in a Washington speech deprecated the talk of crisis involving the NATO alliance. As he prepared to meet British Prime Minister Harold Wilson in the coming week, Johnson told a college campus audience that the Atlantic community is "not in the midst of crisis as some alarm-mongers would have you believe."

—Hundreds of students at the University of California at Berkeley staged sit-ins, demonstrations, and strikes in "free speech" protests which resulted in the arrests of many.

—for the time being, the United Nations General Assembly put off any showdown on the dispute over whether the Soviet Union should be denied a vote at this session for failure to pay charges for peace-keeping operations such as those in the troubled Congo.

British Guiana Vote Set Today

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana (UPI) — Voters of British Guiana will cast ballots today to elect a 53-member house of assembly, about 230,000 votes are expected.

The People's Progressive Party (PPP), led by Marxist Dr. Cheddi Jagan, won the last election in 1961 and Jagan became the country's first premier.

The election is to be held under a system of proportional representation known as the "party list." Under it, the voter will choose between lists of candidates, each sponsored by a party.

THE WHOLE country forms one constituency so that all votes cast for the competing parties have to be added together before the result of the election is known.

Seven parties are contesting the election. They are the PPP, the People's National Congress, the United Force, the Justice Party, the National Labor Front and the Peace and Equality Party.

The Justice Party is led by an attorney, Balram Singh Rai, a former member of the PPP and home affairs minister. He resigned in a disagreement over party policies.

The three-year reign of the Jagan regime has been characterized by labor disturbances and widespread political terrorism.

Of the 53 seats to be contested, each party wins a proportion equal to its share of the total number of votes cast.

Political observers predicted Saturday the PPP would get the highest number of candidates returned, but not enough to form a government.

FOREIGN PRESS VIEWS

Multilateral Nuclear Force Seen as Posing Hard Decision for LBJ

By United Press International

European newspapers commented editorially last week on President Johnson's difficulties in promoting the American-proposed Multilateral Nuclear Force (MLF).

The West German Frankfurter Allgemeine said, "the decision for or against MLF will not be an easy one for President Johnson. Two lines of American interest will be cut apart rather than coordinated: On the one hand, it wishes to continue arms control discussions with the other atomic giants—that is the real political hand, the big powers must work to prevent breaking up of extant power blocs."

The Belgian La Libre Belgique said of MLF, "It is evidently badly conceived. Even the State Department admits this, as it considers it simply a working document."

The Austrian Tiroler Tageszeitung said, "Britain wants to know nothing of a Multilateral Nuclear Force, which would be vital for the Germans if they are to forgo nuclear weapons of their own."

"Almost every day brings bad news—France threatening to withdraw from the Common Market, Britain acting autocratically in the European Free Trade Association (EFTA), Bonn featuring a tug of war between pro-American and pro-French politicians . . .

"What is more glaringly apparent in Europe as a result of declining American prestige can be seen also in other focal spots of the globe. President Johnson's round thus must not be limited to Europe when he goes about his paramount task, that is, restoring the political prestige of the United States," the Tiroler Tageszeitung said.

The French Newspaper Les Echos said of American investment in Europe, "One can easily imagine a methodical plan in Washington tending to create many factories in Europe, to take up the majority holdings in European firms and so on ... today, if the treasury can intervene, it will be rather to discourage the administrations of big American firms from exporting too many dollars. The government on the other hand wants to favor commercial exportation to Europe. Hence the Kennedy Round (of tariff talks), and hence pressure to liberalize trade between a Europe that Washington wants to be more open and an America which it does not want much less protected."

The Austrian newspaper Arbeiter Zeitung said, "After Monday's start of the Soviet 'Zond 2' Mars rocket, it would seem that Moscow has surprisingly decided to enter a space race with the Americans who had launched their 'Mariner 4' Saturday. In reality however this is more or less a coincidence by chance. . . . It is of no scientific significance whether, next July, the Soviet, or the American

B'nai B'rith Praises Pope's Arms Views

WASHINGTON (AP)—B'nai B'rith, Jewish service organization, expressed "warm approval and appreciation" Saturday night for a plea by Pope Paul VI that some of the world's armament expenditures be diverted to help alleviate poverty.

The statement made by the Pope on a visit to India was described by Label A. Katz, B'nai B'rith president, as a "vital call for multinational morality."

In a speech to B'nai B'rith board of governors, Katz said the Pope's views "expressed reverence for humanity in very practical terms."

Avalanche Buries Two in Austria

INNSBRUCK, Austria (UPI)—The first avalanche disaster of the snow season in Austria Saturday buried two men. One was saved and the other was missing.

The avalanche occurred in the Tyrolean Zillertal, 20 miles east of here, burying a car in which the men were driving.

Albert Schober, 28, a janitor, managed to jump clear before masses of snow piled on the auto.

The driver, Hans Wagner, 25, a student of Bavaria, West Germany, was buried.

In Asia, the Japanese press was only mildly critical of Communist China's propaganda attacks on Japan's new prime minister Eisaku Sato.

As the Japanese press sees it, Sato has simply failed to come up with a consistent policy toward Red China, the result being a lot of misunderstanding. Most papers want Sato to work for increased contacts with Peking and a policy independent of the United States with a view to the eventual establishment of diplomatic relations with China.

GOP a Threat, Wyman Warns Demo Leaders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eugene L. Wyman told fellow Democratic leaders Saturday: Unless we start now to rebuild toward the 1966 elections, we face a return to Republican control of this state.

Wyman, California's Democratic national committee chairman, added: "I shouldn't have to point out that the California GOP is still the captive of its most reactionary elements."

He addressed the executive committee of the Democratic State Central Committee.

"I believe the governor is the key to all our planning toward 1966. The certainty of his continued leadership not only would insure a strong, single-front party for 1966, but would guarantee California's more than 18 million citizens four more years of responsible and effective government."

The executive committee, on Wyman's motion, unanimously urged Brown to seek a third term. The group thus reaffirmed its position of two years ago.

Gov. Brown's present term expires in November 1966.

IT WOULD be fatal, Wyman said, to regard President Johnson's overwhelming California victory in the Nov. 3 election as an indication of the Democrats' present strength or prospects.

"California Democratic majorities were reduced both in Washington and in Sacramento to while other Democratic states were increasing their representation," he continued.

"In California, at least, the evidence is convincing that the President's victory was due to his personal appeal, not to the party's effectiveness."

As goals to insure a Democratic victory in California in 1966, Wyman proposed:

"1. A strong expression to Gov. Brown from all elements of the party that he agree to run for a third term.

"2. An early settlement of intraparty differences.

"3. Enactment at the general session of the legislature, opening in January, of legislative proposals and a budget that will maintain California's position as the most stable and forward-looking state in the nation.

"4. Immediate development of Democratic candidates for federal and state offices now held by Republicans, with obvious emphasis on the certain reapportionment of the State Senate, and possibly the State Assembly, at the next session of the legislature."

Wyman said it was too early to expect Gov. Brown to declare himself for a third term but added:

29 in Race for School Trustee Jobs

Interest in school affairs in the Norwalk-La Mirada District has soared to a new high, with 29 residents of the two cities vying for trusteeships on the seven-man board to be elected Jan. 19.

Deadline for filing was Friday at 5 p.m. The board will not officially begin serving until July 1, 1965, when the existing elementary school district becomes unified.

Last Oct. 6, voters in the Norwalk-La Mirada District, which is one of the four elementary districts that make up the Excelsior Union High School District, voted overwhelmingly in favor of placing all schools, kindergarten through high school, under one board and a single administration.

IN ADDITION to electing trustees Jan. 19, voters will decide on a proposition that calls for the Norwalk-La Mirada District to assume a proportionate share of the outstanding bonded indebtedness of Excelsior Union High School District.

Candidates for the board are: Mrs. Phyllis Aegerter, Mrs. Polly Blankenbecker, Mrs. Marie Butts, Curtis Broyles, Ray E. Buchman, Warren D. Clark, Milton P. Cook, James D. Digheta, Theodore J. Dolney, John D. Elkins, Dr. Duane Dyer, D. Gath Edmunds, Warren A. Escobar, John E. Helms, Clarence C. Hobdy, Raymond A. Kluck, Mrs. Mickie Lindquist, Mrs. Pearl Sue Loughran, Rex Nickler, Ned Peebler, Donald E. Roeder, Murray Seidman, Jose Paul Sena, Carl Sterner, Jess Vela, Louis Zucker, Kenneth W. Jones, George E. Landgren and Jossie H. Ross.

Dixie Sheriff Claims FBI Offered Him Money

PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP) — Sheriff Lawrence Rainey claimed Saturday that FBI agents told him they had eyewitnesses to the murders of three civil rights workers and offered him money for information about the brutal slayings.

The FBI called Rainey's claim "ridiculous."

The sheriff was one of 21 white men arrested Friday on federal conspiracy charges in last June's triple slaying. The arrests climaxed a gigantic five-month investigation.

FBI sources said the government's case was built by infiltrating the Ku Klux Klan and interviewing more than 1,000 residents of Mississippi, including 480 Klan members. There was no confirmation of published reports that the FBI has a statement from an eyewitness of the killings and will use it in court.

FBI sources said 153 agents had worked on the case almost without letup since Michael Schwerner, Andrew Goodman and James Chaney disappeared near here last June. Their bodies were found in an earth-fill dam Aug. 4.

Schwerner and Goodman were white New Yorkers. Chaney, a Negro, lived at nearby Meridian.

The Neshoba County sheriff's charge came as Mississippi awaited the next legal step in the massive FBI roundup that included the husky sheriff, his deputy, Cecil Price, a rural preacher and several businessmen.

Intense interest centered on next Thursday's preliminary hearing in nearby Meridian.

Government attorneys will have to show enough of their hand to convince the U. S. commissioner the men should be held for federal grand jury action.

The question of whether any of the 21 men would be charged with murder still was unanswered. Murder is not a federal crime unless it is committed on federal property.

Nineteen of the men are charged with violating the civil rights of the three slain workers.

The other two men were charged as accessories. Rainey made his remarks about the FBI in an interview in his office. He and Deputy Price buckled on their gunbelts again Saturday and returned to duty after their arrest and arraignment Friday.

The sheriff said two FBI agents who picked him up at his office urged him to give them whatever information he had about the June slayings in his county.

"They started telling me I knew everything about the crime," Rainey said, "but I told them no. They said, 'We've got three to five eyewitnesses and we are going to take care of them.'"

He quoted the agents as saying: "If you'll come on and tell us what you know, we will take care of you and pay all your debts and you will leave out of here with more money than you'll ever make."

In Jackson, Roy K. Moore, agent in charge of the Mississippi FBI office, termed the sheriff's charge ridiculous.

"He can say whatever he wants," Moore said, "I wouldn't dignify that by a comment. Let's just say, 'no comment' on such a statement as that."

Deputy Price, in good spirits, said the agents tried to scare him by talking about the gas chamber. He said they told him his bond would be $25,000. But at the arraignment, Miss Esther Carter, the commissioner, set bonds of $5,000 for most of the defendants, including Rainey and Price.

NATIONAL 'SECURITY' IN OLD SENSE GONE

Nuclear War Defense Rests on 'Balance of Terror'

By BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP) — By the early 1970s the nuclear warheads deployed by the United States alone will have an explosive equivalent exceeding 20,000 million tons of TNT—20,000 megatons.

An explosive force of that size is no more comprehensible to the human mind than the concept of infinity.

The Soviet Union's capacity for destruction probably will be no less.

Three other nations—Great Britain, France and Red China—are also building nuclear weapons, and scientists say 20 other nations have the technical know-how to build them.

There is now no such thing as national security for any nation, certainly not in the sense that the United States enjoyed such security before the Soviet Union mastered nuclear weapons in 1950.

TWO EMINENT scientists—Jerome B. Wiesner and Herbert F. York—believe that a technical solution to the problem of making the United States immune to nuclear attack is impossible.

Wiesner was scientific adviser to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, and York was head of the Defense Department's Advanced Research Projects Agency when it embarked on the search for an anti-missile missile.

An impressive number of scientists and research analysts are convinced that the only possible solution is some form of world-wide arms reduction and control.

The prospects for agreement in this field in the near future appear remote.

IN THE event of a nuclear attack on the United States, therefore, the main hope for survival—however forlorn—seems to be to run for the shelters. As matters now stand, the United States shelter program is wholly inadequate.

The shelter program is in the province of the Office of Civilian Defense.

If there is to be any improvement in the shelter program, there will have to be a radical change in the attitude of congress and the public.

The annual appropriation for the OCD has been reduced every year since 1962. The decline in appropriations probably reflects popular opinion on the futility of defense measures.

WIESNER and York recently wrote in the Scientific American:

"The steady decrease in national security did not result from any inaction on the part of responsible U.S. military and civilian authorities. It resulted from the systematic exploitation of the products of modern science and technology by the Soviet Union."

"Both sides in the arms race are thus confronted by steadily increasing military strength and steadily decreasing national security."

"It is our considered professional judgment that this dilemma has no technical solution."

WIESNER and York think a Soviet attack on the United States could result in 100 million casualties.

"The only kind of shelter that is being seriously considered these days for other than key military installations is the fallout shelter."

"Even for the people protected by fallout shelters the big problem is not a problem in the physical theory of gamma ray attenuation, which can be neatly computed, but rather the sociological problem of the sudden initiation of general chaos, which is not subject to numerical analysis."

If people would have to live and work in shelters to protect them against fire, blast and fallout, this could lead to such a regimentation and distortion of civilization, the scientists imply, that the very freedom the nation was trying to protect would be destroyed.

The basic question is whether life in such a society would be worthwhile and whether survival of an atomic attack really would be desirable.

THE FORCE of a nuclear explosion is generally beyond comprehension. There were 100,000 casualties from the "low yield" bomb dropped on Hiroshima, which had an explosive force of "only" 20,000 tons of TNT.

By the early 1970s some U.S. warheads will have an explosive force ranging from one million tons of TNT to 23 million tons.

The OCD has worked out a table of what happens if a bomb with an explosive capacity of five megatons—that's 5 million tons—is dropped on a city—any city.

It would scoop out a hole in the ground more than 1.5 miles in diameter and nearly 2,000 feet deep.

Everyone within a three-mile radius at the point of detonation—ground zero—would be killed.

There would be "extremely heavy" damage to buildings outward to five miles in all directions, which means most of them would be reduced to rubble.

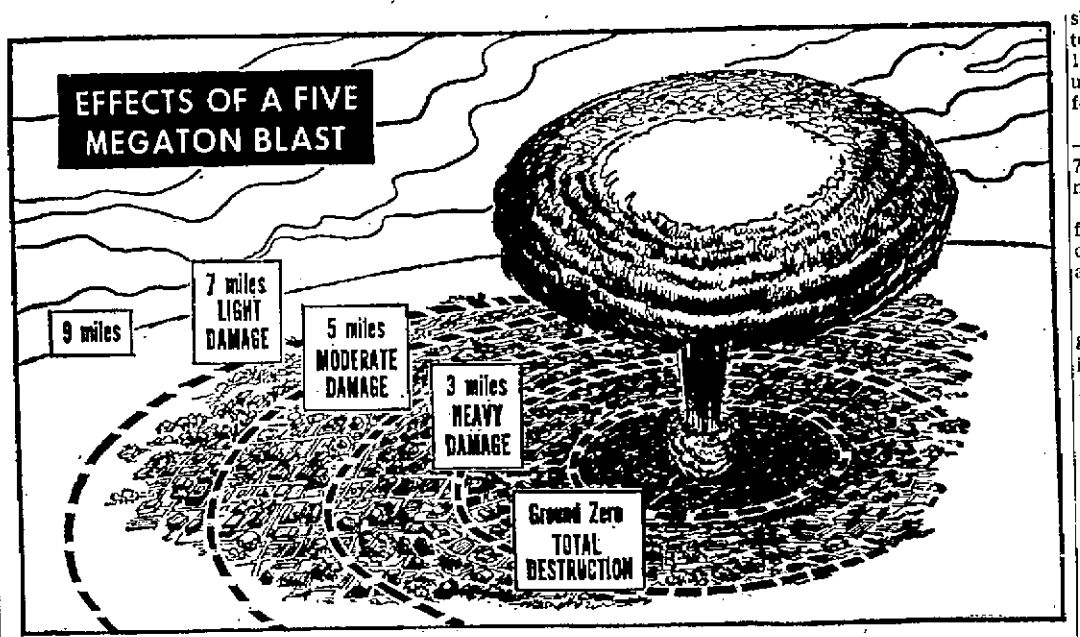

OF THE people living or working in the zone three to five miles from ground zero, 40% would be killed and 25% would be injured.

Beyond the nine-mile radius houses and people would be "safe" from heat effects and blast even though there still would be enough heat to ignite a newspaper at nine miles.

The use of the word safe is relative. There would still be radioactive fallout.

Assuming a 25 mile per hour wind in the upper atmosphere, one bomb would distribute a lethal dose of radiation 200 miles downwind spreading over thousands of square miles.

THERE ARE estimates that an all-out nuclear attack by the Soviet Union could destroy 88 per cent of the American population in the absence of a fallout shelter program. By OCD calculations, fallout from such an attack would embrace 75 per cent of the U.S. land mass.

Studies have shown that radioactive danger does not last as long as first thought.

A Defense Department evaluation of the effects of widespread radiation on the balance between man, animal and nature appears in a report by the House Armed Services Committee.

"There has been conjecture that the radiation would create a wasteland by upsetting the balance of nature. Information available does not support this view."

THE STUDIES indicate that enough food, fuels, rolling stock and heavy equipment would survive an attack in usable condition to enable survivors to begin putting what's left back together again.

The Defense Department has estimated that the nation could develop an adequate fallout shelter program providing spaces for 240 million people for $2.5 billion.

OCD studies show that a two-story house with a basement, perhaps slightly modified, will provide protection against fallout. Between 15 and 20 million people live in such houses.

Federal buildings and other public structures can be designed to provide this protection at little or no extra cost.

THE FEDERAL end of the OCD program has been kept small deliberately—about 1,000 employees in all. Of these 400 are in Washington while the rest are distributed through eight regional offices.

This is because most action after an attack will have to be on the local level. There will be little, if any, direction from Washington.

Thus, the program is effective in a given community only to the extent the city, county or state sets aside funds and assigns personnel.

While it needs 240 million shelter spaces, OCD survey teams have identified only 121 million so far and put up signs pointing to spaces for 76 million.

But—and here is the rub—there are supplies in the 76 million spaces for only 25 million people.

In the final analysis, defense still rests on what has come to be called the "balance of terror."

Death Penalty Ban Bill to be Offered

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California legislature will have another emotion-charged capital punishment fight next year.

Assemblyman Lester McMillan, long a foe of the death penalty, revealed he once again would ask for its abolition.

But McMillan conceded that due to traditional Senate opposition there appeared little chance for passage of his bill.

Hard of Hearing?

It is now possible for many who are hard of hearing to regain all or part of their hearing loss.

So many have told us, we have tried everything and we are so discouraged that we hesitate to try anything else. Many who have tried this new and proven method are overjoyed. Just like magic in certain cases, they are able to hear without their hearing aid after the very first treatment.

The treatment is simple and painless, and takes about 45 minutes. If the hearing loss is due to a nerve condition, a special treatment is given. If the loss is due to catarrh a different treatment is given.

If you have a hearing loss no matter how slight or how bad, it may be helped. Why not find out?

We are one of the busiest offices in Southern California, so if we cannot help you, be assured that we will not take your case.

The total charge is $3.00 for the first treatment and the examination. And if you see no improvement from the first treatment, you are under no obligation to return. Assure your appointment by calling 591-1305, 2067 Atlantic Ave., L. B. Dr. H. L. Hutchings, D.C., director.

Night Latch Locks Up Futurity Trials Easily

By DON HARDIN

Night Latch established himself as the horse to beat in the $156,250 Los Alamitos Futurity when he sizzled to a length and one-half victory in the second division of the Futurity Trials Saturday.

A crowd of 13,669 saw Citation Bars win the first division and Goetta fail to win in her second outing at the meeting.

The attendance was a record for a single-day fall meeting and the total mutuels of $994,655 was the second highest in history.

NIGHT LATCH, WHO HAD WON his previous race by three-quarters of a length in 18.1 at the Futurity distance of 350 yards, did even better against his company in the second division of the trials as he zipped across the finish line in 18-flat.

Ridden by Ronald Banks, Night Latch zoomed out of the starting gate as if a big win depended upon his qualifying for the big race. He broke clear in front of the field and there was little doubt about the ultimate winner after the first couple of jumps.

Rocket Hug finished second, a neck in front of Bar Request. Night Latch returned $3.60, $2.60 and $2.20.

Rocket Hug paid $3.40 and $2.40 and Bar Request $2.80. In the first division, Citation Bars broke strongly from the gate, had a huge lead for most of the route but seemed to loaf a trifle at the finish as Short Charge came on fast. But Citation Bars' margin at the wire was still a comfortable neck.

Double Snooper was three-quarters of a length back in third place.

Citation Bars paid $5.60, $3.00 and $2.40 as the close second favorite to Double Snooper. Short Charge returned $4.80 and $2.80 and Double Snooper $2.60. The first division was a slower 18.4.

The 10 horses of the 16 starters with the fastest times qualify for the Futurity to be run Dec. 19. After the times have been officially reviewed, it appears that more than half of the second division will qualify.

IN SATURDAY'S $5,000 MONITA PURSE, Princess Rozella upset the form by scoring a nose win over Mr. Barredon who was another head in front of favored Miss Magnum Bar.

Time for the 350-yard event was 18.3 and the winner paid $29.60, $12.60 and $7.40. Mr. Barredon, winner of his previous two, paid $9.20 and $6.20 and Miss Magnum Bar $4.20.

Scooper Chick outraced Goetta to win the Josie Bar-St. Catherine's Military Academy Purse for older horses at 400 yards. Time was a swift 20.3 as Miss Zip Bar finished third.

Scooper Chick, leading all the way, paid $10.20, $4.20 and $3.40. Goetta, who broke well, returned $4 and $3 and Miss Zip Bar $4.20.

PENN FIRES GRID COACH AFTER 1 WIN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The University of Pennsylvania fired head football coach John Stiegman, whose five seasons at Penn produced only 12 victories in 45 games and only six in Ivy League competition.

This year Penn won only one game in nine, defeating Lehigh 13-6.

Athletic director Jerry Ford said he took the action after consultation with a faculty-administration committee appointed by Dr. Gaylord P. Harwell, president of the university, "to evaluate the coach."

Ford said the staff of assistants, also with a year to run on their contracts, will be asked to remain either as assistants to the incoming coach or in other duties of an expanded football program.

Tribe Opens in L.A.

CLEVELAND, Ohio (UPI) — The Cleveland Indians announced Saturday the 1965 home baseball schedule starting April 21 against the Angels will have 46 night games in the 73 playing dates. The Tribe opens on the road April 12 at Los Angeles.

Don Schollander--Who's He? Oh! You Mean Me...

LAKE OSWEGO, Ore. (AP) — If you could get up to Don Schollander's room without noticing things on the way—the medals and trophies and gifts that fill the downstairs—you might suppose he was just another 18-year-old getting ready for college.

There are a few pennants on his bedroom walls; a few travel posters; an assortment of odds and ends on his dresser. A tape recorder has the central place and it sends out music over two speakers.

He lounges on the bed wearing a University of Pennsylvania football sweater he swiped from his older brother.

He smiles that even, happy smile that lifted so many hearts at the Olympic games. He reaches for a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, taking it in long-fingered hands that helped pull him through the Olympic pool at Tokyo to four gold medals.

HE HAS TO BE led into talk about that. You'd never know, either, that his appearance anywhere in Japan touched off teenage girl hysteria. He speaks of it—and flectingly—only when he gets a firm push.

The other evening at a party he said, about 11 o'clock, that he had to go home and pack.

"Why?" asked one of the girls. "Where are you going?"

"Well, uh, to Washington." "What for?" "It's sort of a luncheon."

"You can have lunch at home. Why go to Washington?"

"Well, uh, it's with the President."

He wouldn't have said it without being prodded.

Drive into his home town and there, at the edge of the road down from Portland, a sign says: "Lake Oswego, Home of Don Schollander."

It adds a note on population: 11,000. And it might have said all 11,000 are busting with pride.

"How does it feel, Don, to come home from the Olympics and see that your home town has a sign like that?"

He smiles a bit and says, "It's sort of all a part of everything. A part of the Olympics." He shakes his head, colors slightly, and goes silent.

Volzke Draws First Ban After 17 Years

Compiled from Wire Reports

Jockey Merlin Volzke, veteran of 17 years riding, was suspended Saturday five days for careless riding—the first suspension in his career.

The Bay Meadows stewards suspended Volzke after judging him guilty of careless riding astride King's Rullah in Friday's eighth race.

Macedonia, claimed for $25,000 by builder Sam Le.

frak as a present for his wife, sprinted to a three-quarter length victory in the $28,650 Stuyvesant Handicap at fog-shrouded Aqueduct.

Macedonia paid $16.70, $8.90 and $5.50. Bonjour returned $8.70 and $5.40 and Piave $3.40.

Tom Stone, making a strong bid on the final turn, pulled away in the stretch to win the $22,025 Pimlico Breeders' Stakes.

Double Park, coupled with Tom Stone in the betting, was third, the entry paid $9.00, $3.60 and $4.00. Duke Great, the 6-5 favorite, paid $2.80 and $2.60.

Jockey David Kassen suffered a broken shoulder when his horse fell after the first race at Tropical Park in Miami.

NEW DATE FOR TITLE FIGHT 'PREMATURE'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Spokesmen for heavyweight champion Cassius Clay said here Saturday that the announced rescheduling of the postponed Clay-Sonny Liston fight for next April 19 at the Boston Garden was "premature."

Attorney Gordon Davidson, handling Clay's business affairs since the hospitalization of his manager, William Faversham Jr., here this week, said the announcement by Bob Nilon, president of Intercontinental Promotions, Inc., was a "unilateral thing."

"We are not contacted at all in reference to it. I tried to reach them (Nilon and Edward J. Powers, president of Boston Garden) but was unable to," Davidson added.

HAYES HELPS FLORIDA A&M IN 42-15 WIN

MIAMI (AP) — The explosive Rattlers of Florida A&M, a team on which the world's fastest human is just another football player, clobbered Grambling College of Louisiana, 42-15, Saturday night in the Orange Blossom Bowl.

The Rattlers made it a runaway in the second half in a game between outstanding Negro teams with two of the biggest lines in college football.

Bob Hayes, 100-meter dash winner in the Tokyo Olympics, caught a 48-yard pass from Ernest Hart for a third-quarter touchdown and ran for a pair of two-point conversions.

LAS VEGAS MOTORLOG

Lincoln Is VIP Car in Vegas

By BILL EMERY

A classic luxury motorcar functions best when its standards are put to its highest tests. Last weekend, we challenged John Gustafson, general manager of Murphy Lincoln-Mercury-Comet at 1940 Lakewood Blvd., to allow us an opportunity to test a 1965 Lincoln Continental. The results of that test drive were revealing.

With a bright red convertible loaded with optional equipment including air conditioning, AM-FM twin speaker radio, automatic headlamp dimmer plus an impressive and lengthy list of standard factory equipment that makes the Continental almost totally automatic, a comprehensive course was charted.

A thorough test would be a lengthy drive . . . from sea level to high in the mountains and over the desert to a resort of unquestionable expression of elegance.

By five o'clock in the morning, we were on our way to The Dunes in Las Vegas, Nevada, via the Riverside freeway. At the top of the Cajon Pass, which is over 4,200 feet in elevation, we stopped for breakfast, and the road led up to the cafe was packed with snow and ice. Shifting the twin-range turbo-drive automatic transmission from three-speed to the two-speed range gave us much better control on the ice. Maneuvering in and out was an effortless task for the heavy convertible.

The freeway is complete now to within just a few miles of Baker, and it picks up again a mile east of Baker with the remaining drive to Las Vegas mostly freeway.

Some parts of the new road are so long and straight they seem to have an almost hypnotic effect on the driver. It's roads like this that make you wish you could set your car on tracks, set the throttle and use the elapsing time to read or play cards.

Pulling into the impressively new front entrance of The Dunes with our luxury four-door convertible, we automatically commanded special attention. This is not to say that any prospective guest driving in is not going to get a hearty welcome, but you feel that extra enthusiasm offered and you know the Continental has just passed another functional test.

In the heart of the fabulous strip, The Dunes is in the process of completing a city within a city. The new 22-story Dunes hotel addition will open the first eleven floors for occupancy in December and the "top o' the strip" will open soon after. When completed, the plush resort will offer 1,000 beautiful rooms and 80 luxurious suites.

A new grand ballroom and convention hall adjoining the exhibit hall will offer facilities unsurpassed.

The 7,125-yard 72-par golf course, largest in Nevada, is handily located for "par-busters" on the grounds of The Dunes hotel. Thousands of white oleander bushes surround the perimeter of the course with a mile of symmetrically placed palms of matched heights bordering the western boundary.

A cheerfully luxurious clubhouse on the golf greens . . . unusual and stately by any comparison, will open in mid December.

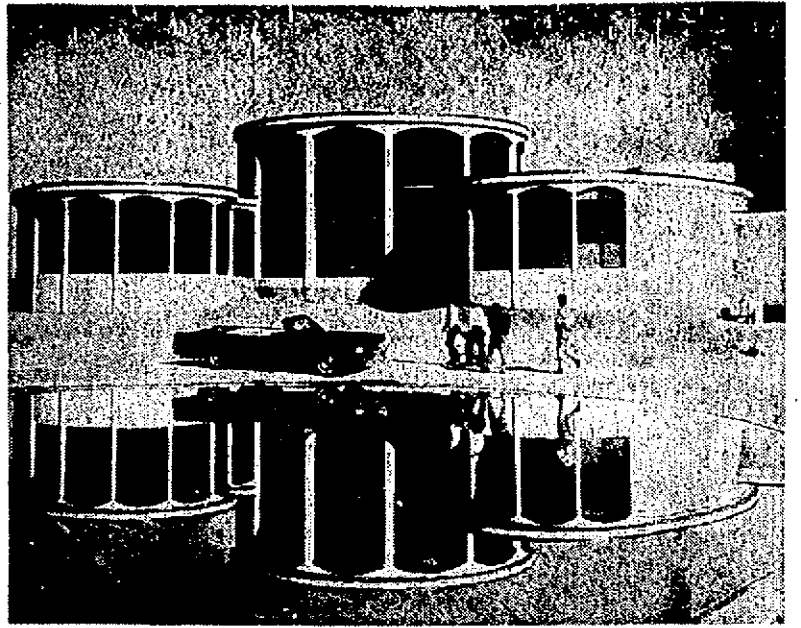

The top of the hotel will house health clubs for men and women, a solarium for men and women, and a cocktail lounge with a panoramic view of the 900-square-mile Las Vegas valley. The nation's name dance orchestras and entertainers will be featured at the "top o' the strip" and an express elevator will service patrons quickly.

Two swimming pools, an Olympic pool and the sea horse pool, provide ample swimming, diving and sunbathing facilities the year around, although the recent cold spell across the country discouraged even the weariest from the game rooms last week.

FRENCH SHOW

Star of the new $2 million direct-from-Paris stage extravaganza in the Casino de Paris is the exciting Made-moiselle from Armentieres, Line (pronounced "Leen") Renaud.

Internationally-known, Line records in eight languages. Her "Ma Petite Folie" recording, one of the best sellers, projects her personality in a parallel comparable with Maurice Chevalier. Watching her act gives you the feeling they were both products of the same French finishing school.

REFLECTING THE LATEST

New 1965 Continental with top down pauses between pool and exotic clubhouse at The Dunes' championship golf course. The structure will be complete and open Dec. 15.

A 60-ton electronic monster, built in Glasgow at a cost of $800,000, was installed just for this show. It looks like a futuristic space machine from a science fiction fantasy . . . in fact it was actually built by space scientists and engineers with the Skybolt missile program.

The octuramic stage moves up, down, sideways and into the audience like a multi-fingered octopus. With a cast of 100, a good percentage of them semi-nude French beauties, the weird movements of the saucer platforms, together with manufactured clouds and special effects, do a magnificent job of diversifying the audience's attention . . . momentarily from time to time . . . from the box-office attractions.

In the Perisian room where entertainers perform around the clock, another 30-person French show is presented three times nightly. "Vive Les Girls" is a fast moving attention getter that will make you forget your winnings and your losses . . . whichever is your fortune. Many a couple slips into the lounge to grab forty winks and 80 feet wide, costs a half-million and is visible from the air for 100 miles. This sign runs up a power bill of $100 per day and requires three men full time to service it.

Named by the Diners' Club in 1962 as the finest and most beautiful new restaurant in America, the Sultan's Table represents a $500,000 investment by The Dunes.

The room features an imaginative blending of silver, black, orange and beige with a moonbeam lighting effect. A color-spotted waterfall and fountain provides a pleasing splash as ten violins, two pianos and a bass violin revolve on a floor-high platform in the center of the room playing chamber music while the diner engages gourmet cuisine and vintage wines.

The sterling silver service is from England, the linens from Ireland, and the French glassware was specially blown to the Sultan theme.

WORLD RECORD

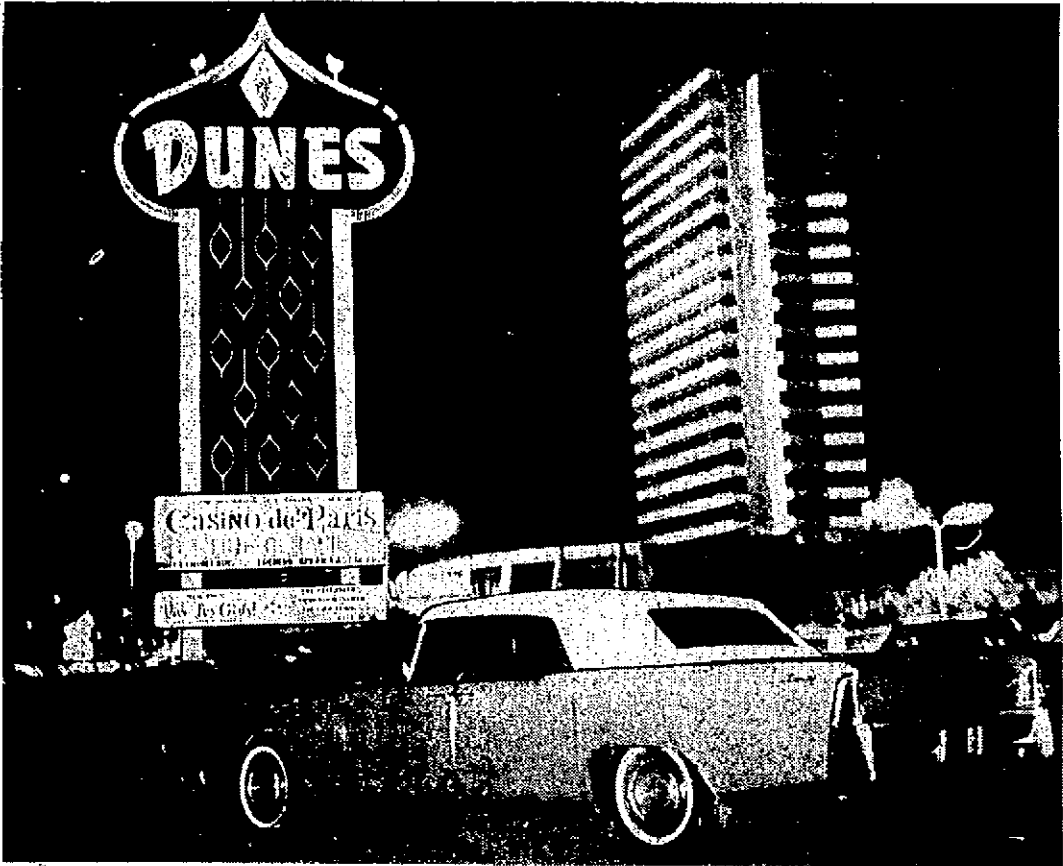

In Las Vegas, where every casino strives to out-dazzle the other in neon signs, The Dunes just scored another triumph. They now have the largest free standing sign in the world. It's 180 feet tall and 80 feet wide, costs a half-million and is visible from the air for 100 miles. This sign runs up a power bill of $100 per day and requires three men full time to service it.

Arriving at such a distinguished resort, we deemed it only fitting and proper that the top should be down on our Continental. And since the trunk and top are operated on the same button, imagine our dismay with the gearshift in "park" position neither the top or trunk would open! Fortunately, before our plight was in evidence, I discovered the solution. The gearshift must be in the neutral position to operate the trunk and the top. Now it was obvious that this was a built-in safety device for with all the switches, levers and buttons on the dash, eventually anyone can get confused . . . especially in an emergency.

The 1965 Continental convertible with its top up or down is luxury and comfort unsurpassed. There is nothing to button, unfasten or snap . . . and the cover becomes an integral part of the car and design when the top is down.

It's a motoring experience . . . a goal worthy of all motorists.

L.B. Aids Fight on Compensation Abuses

By GEORGE WEEKS

Harassed by rising workmen's compensation awards, Long Beach is joining with other California cities in what amounts to an attack on methods of administering the compensation insurance system and a demand for remedial legislation.

A strongly critical report by Long Beach management officials is being incorporated, in large part, in recommendations being prepared by a special committee of the League of California Cities. The report cites what officials regard as flagrant examples of excessive awards to Long Beach city employees.

IT EMPHASIZES these three defects which, the officials contend, are adding unjustified costs to compensation insurance premiums paid by cities and by employers generally:

1. A tendency on the part of State Industrial Accident Commission referees (who usually determine the awards) "to broaden the scope of benefits far beyond any reasonable interpretation of legislative intent."

2. Loopholes in the compensation benefit laws which, under the guise of "aggravation," are extending benefits designed for industrial (on-the-job) injuries to compensation for degenerative physical conditions not job-connected.

(Under these loopholes, the city report charges, "we must pay for arthritis, heart conditions, ulcers, osteoporosis — bone decalcification — mental disorders, fungus, gout and even athlete's foot.")

3. Other legal loopholes that grant bonuses or premiums added to unimpaired earnings and retirement benefits already being provided by the public employer.

The inequities are not all against the city as employer, officials concede.

"In some cases we consider the workmen's compensation too low," said City Manager John R. Mansell. "It is not our purpose to deny employees awards" "to broaden the just compensation for bona fide job-connected injuries.

But the inequities that have developed in the opposite direction obscure the hardship to other employees."

MANSSELL ALSO took note of the fact that the problem is not confined to government jurisdictions.

"The cost of compensation insurance has skyrocketed in many cases for private industry as well—and for basically the same reasons," he said. "One incidental result is that employers, public and private, are becoming extremely cautious about hiring applicants with a history of even slight physical defects."

The city's insurer is the State Compensation Insurance Fund, a state-created corporation administered by a five-man state-appointed board.

Mansell emphasized that the local representatives of the fund have worked as co-operatively as possible with the city and have helped materially in reducing accident frequency.

Mansell signed the seven-page report, with supporting data, presented recently to the league's special committee on workmen's compensation problems by Samuel M. Roberts, director of administrative management.

ROBERTS IS A member of the league's committee, whose final report will be submitted to a Workmen's Compensation Study Commission created at the 1964 legislative session. Out of the commission's studies, officials hope, will come some legislation in 1965 and 1966 to curb the sharp increase in workmen's compensation insurance costs to cities.

In Long Beach these costs have risen from $443,000 in 1959 to a current premium level of more than $900,000, Mansell said.

One point that galls city officials is that while the premium charges were rising 100%, the number of job-connected accidental injuries among Long Beach city employees has been cut 30%, from 1,078 to 809.

This reduction has been brought about by a new safety engineering program, Mansell noted, which includes a fully-staffed occupational health clinic, a reorganization of the claims service and the alerting of city executives to the importance of safety procedures.

COMMENTING on liberal awards by the Industrial Accident Commission — a state-appointed agency — the city report declares that the commission's referees rely on the wording of the law as it stands "for apparent disregard of employer evidence with respect to medical determinations and facts relating to job requirements."

Moreover, according to the report, the burden of proof has been shifted from the employee to the employer.

Some cases of Long Beach city employee awards cited in the report as evidence of abuses in the present system include:

An employee stated that he was unable to lift more than 20 pounds, could not raise his arms high enough to knot his tie, and mentioned other complaints. At the IAC hearing color films were shown in which that employee played a strenuous game of tennis. In spite of this evidence, an award of 57% was granted.

As one of many cases of low back pains, an employee received 72% disability plus an IAC lifetime pension plus lifetime medical benefits plus social security retirement benefits, although "various specialists were unable to locate anything physically wrong with his back."

AN EMPLOYEE suffered an attack of arteriosclerosis, and the city was obliged to pay because of aggravated angina pectoris. Any activity, such as walking, can aggravate angina pectoris. Under the "aggravation" rule, the condition becomes compensable.

Because of IAC decisions during the past two years, ulcers have become almost automatically acceptable as compensable for police personnel. At the time of the report, the city was paying for 10 such cases, two of which were expected to require surgery.

An employee slipped and fell, injuring his back. While it appeared likely that he was legitimately injured, the doctors could find nothing functionally wrong with him. He received a 70% award that cost the city more than $135,000.

Five years ago an employee was granted a 73% award. Suspecting shamming, the city recently filed a petition to reduce the amount. At the hearing a film showed the man working with lumber on a freight train, bending over, lifting heavy loads and jumping to the ground. The city petition was rejected.

OBSERVING that paradox of the freeways — thousands of cars jammed up, most of them with just one person aboard — Reader Arthur Sandler thinks it's time to launch a "share the ride" program in this area, similar to that in war days.

Then it was because gas and tires were hard to get. Nowadays, says Sandler, space on the freeways is hard to get. He thinks the Southland press should give the program a publicity buildup and offer low rate classified advertisements to prospective share-the-riders. (Classified Adv. Mgr. please note.)

Another scheme that has occurred to me is to conduct a gigantic real estate trading operation, with people living far from their work trading for residences close by. The way cars race both ways over the major arteries, morning and evening, it's obvious that a lot of people simply live in the wrong places, and that many a convenient, travel-saving house exchange might be worked out.

GOING on with more interesting notes from readers, here's one from Fredrica Cowan about the problems of traveling with a dog.

She and her husband had their well-behaved English bulldog with them on a recent stop in San Francisco and had one devil of a time finding a motel that would let them stay with their pet. She says they got a lot of rude treatment, one motel attendant shouting to Cowan to get his dog out of his office when the dog was at the time in the car with Mrs. C. The Cowans, as a result, are down on San Francisco.

And H. P. Thompson complains about a sample of cough mixture found in his mail box with a label on it cautioning to keep this bottle and all medicine out of the reach of children. A man at the p.o. told the Thompsons that there was not enough medicine in the bottle to hurt a child and there's no postal rule against distributing the stuff by mail. But Thompson doesn't like it, and he's also irked that the medicine sample was delivered to his box by a mailman in a car—virtual special delivery service for what he says is sent as bulk mail.

NOTE to Chief Bill Mooney: Not everybody growls about the police.

In fact, I hear rather frequently from citizens who want to express appreciation of some friendly service by an officer. Typical is a note from J. E. Klein.

Driving in the rain the other morning, he turned his lights on. He later parked his truck across from his residence, leaving the lights burning. An officer came along, checked the registration to ascertain the owner, and called at the Klein apartment to give a warning that probably saved a run-down battery.

Letters of this type usually start with the comment that "we hear so many complaints about the police that we want to tell you something."

GRACE BOTTLES suggests some comment here about one way careless people endanger others. She's talking about the practice of bicyclists, especially young ones, throwing their bikes flat on sidewalks. Pedestrian accidents and near-accidents result. . . A. Ronel reports that he (or she) came across the ragged bicyclist who has become a familiar sight in these parts. "I had the unique experience of receiving a smile and a nod," writes Ronel. "I liked what I saw." . . . Lucy Hammond, pleading for more local pride, lists among litter she sees on the streets: cigarette stubs, burned matches, worn-out match books, scraps of paper, paper cups, drizzles of ice cream, bits of small metal, cleaning tissue. "This litter is disgraceful," she concludes, and she's so right.

She Makes Cars Purrr

U. P. T. EDUCATION EDITOR

When a glamorous coed named Sandee Smith told high school officials she wanted to become a garage mechanic she almost threw the whole school out of gear.

None of Long Beach Jordan's 150 auto shop students were girls. As far as anyone could remember it had always been a masculine preserve.

Things quickly got worse. Sandee added hastily that she wanted to rebuild her own car from scratch, wanted to build a racing car, wanted to be a race car driver, wanted to own her own garage.

"I get a big charge out of engines," purred the 5-foot-six brown-haired senior.

GLENN DARGATZ, school auto shop teacher, sent her to a counselor to have her head examined—or, rather, her scholastic aims re-evaluated.

The counselor, noting her good grades, failed to shake the coed's resolve so the school tossed in the clincher — a mechanical aptitude test. Sandee scored 99-plus with 100 being perfect.

But could she take it—being the only girl in class and all? "I just want to learn," said Sandee. "Boys, girls—I couldn't care less."

Dargatz threw in the sponge. Despite a long waiting list of males, he admitted her last September.

TODAY she has her precious 1960 Model-A sedan strewn all over a nearby garage, saves her baby-sitting fees to buy parts.

clines to wear coveralls but still manages to avoid getting greasy.

The first day was memorable. Some classmates opened doors for her, some pointedly ignored her, others just gaped. Sandee stood it for three weeks and then gave a quiet little speech.

"I DON'T expect to be coddled—or ignored," she said sternly. "I just insist on being treated like any other member of the class." That ended the trouble.

Her car is expected to be completed in April — then she plans to build a racing car. She says her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Smith of 1716 Poinsettia St., approve everything but her racing ambitions.

Oh yes, she has another little problem which she plans to remedy next spring. Sandee, nearly 18, doesn't know how to drive.

IN CHILDREN'S ROOM

Science Exhibit at L.B. Library

By VERA WILLIAMS

Science is brought close to home in a "Your World and Science" exhibition in the children's room of the Main Public Library, Ocean Boulevard and Pacific Avenue.

"We try to make the children aware of science close around them," explains Mrs. Lorna Kugler, children's librarian at Main. "We like them to know about the craters of the moon. We like them to know about the names of flowers, the names of the trees they see on their way to school. We like them to know what is in the sea and on the desert. We like them to know about rocks."

And the young science enthusiasts do. Practically any youngster looking at the moon, built by librarians on a chicken wire frame, can tell you that the crater with the mountain is Copernicus. The youngsters can tell you that trees in Lincoln Park, centered by the library, are camphor, magnolia, cork oak and Mareton Bay fig.

THEY CAN TELL you about the palm tree and the various kinds of cacti in the desert exhibition, and they are fascinated with the gold lizard, Tiny, which lives there. Under pressure, they can show you Tiny in an open natural history book, and read you his name, Carolina anole.

The science exhibition includes a tide pool aquarium and a rock collection, the specimens identified. It includes a "See through the Sea" exhibition, with a beach scene with familiar shells. It includes leaves, seed pods and flowers, all identified. Although the Main Library

WATER DEPT. FOUNTAIN

Lights Go On at 4:30 Today

A new fountain, cascading jets of water in changing patterns of color, joins the three 15-foot floating Christmas trees of the Long Beach Water Department in a Christmas holiday debut at 4:30 p.m. today.

The 20-foot fountain with its center jet rising 15 feet in the air is located in the acre foot reflection pool surrounding the Administration Building of the Water Department at 1800 E. Wardlow Road. Amber, blue, red, and green colors combine in 14 different combinations to provide a color change every seven seconds in what seems to be an ever-changing variety of color.

The 350 gallons per minute of dancing water serves as more than an object of beauty. The fountain is an integral part of the air conditioning system servicing the Administration Building, discharging heat and aerating the water as a part of the building's cooling cycle.

Automatic wind controls turn the high flying jets off whenever the wind speed rises to 15 miles per hour to preclude blowing water into Wardlow Road.

King Thanks Wade on Congratulations

Replying to a message of congratulations from Mayor Edwin W. Wade, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. has declared his selection for the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize "is an award to the whole civil rights movement and its dedicated leaders."

In a letter received here last week, Dr. King expressed gratitude to the mayor, adding:

"This award should inspire all of us to work a little harder and with more determination to make the American dream a reality. It should also challenge us to work passionately and unrelentingly to discover the international implications of nonviolence; for in a real sense, there can be no justice without peace and there can be no peace without justice.

"If mankind is to survive, we must come to see that war is obsolete and must be cast into unending limbo."

Results Prove United Fund Plan Sound Approach

IT HAS WORKED. That is the happy evaluation of the results of the first attempt to combine the United Way (the old Community Chest) campaign with the Red Cross drive in the Long Beach area and all of Los Angeles County.

COMMUNITIES of the Long Beach area of the United Crusade—name of the new joint venture—had reached 93% of goal by the final county report meeting Thursday night. Continued "clean-up" effort can bring the result to 100%. Bellflower, Lakewood and Paramount, divisions of the area, have actually gone to 100%.

New highs were attained this year in total contributions through this county-wide general giving, significant in showing the advantages of wider participation and coordinated effort. Charity giving in the Long Beach area itself reached unprecedented levels.

Cooperation was especially good in our area. United Way and Red Cross boards worked jointly in the common appeal. Unification was immediately attained even though Red Cross leaders came into the picture at the last moment following an agreement signed in July.

Certain new techniques were evolved, such as dinner conferences for leaders of business and industry sponsored by Douglas Aircraft, for complete briefing on the united plan.

The reports on campaign production submitted last week do not fully reflect the Long Beach area effort. For one thing, these totals do not include local firms' contributions that were placed in the county-wide quota and not credited to the area. These funds, nevertheless, are returned to the area and our United Way agencies and the local Red Cross chapter will share as beneficiaries.

JOINING UNITED WAY with Red Cross in fund raising was effected in response to the long-heard complaint about "too many campaigns." People have indicated their appreciation of one major effort to reduce the annoyance of repeated appeals and to cut the cost of campaign administration.

The united fund concept is the right idea. The results prove it.

A Misnomer?

PERHAPS THE CONGRESS of Racial Equality should change its name to the Congress of Racial Discrimination.

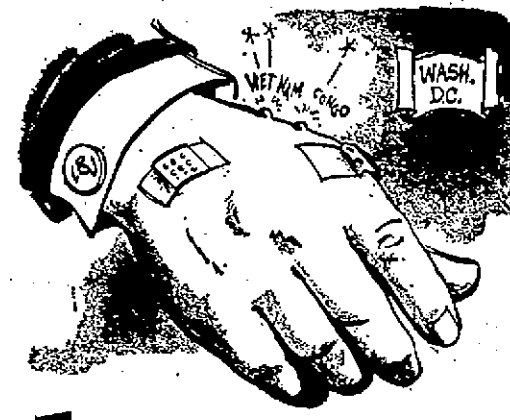

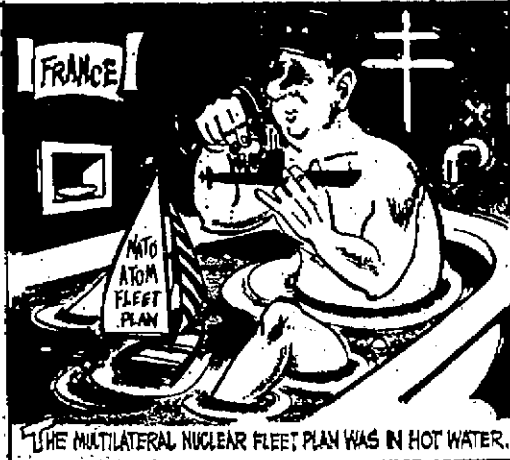

The latter title would be more in keeping with the remarks this week by David Finkel, a CORE attorney, before a state Senate fact-finding subcommittee on race relations.

He and other members of the civil rights group told the committee that equal opportunity in hiring is not enough, that preference must be shown to Negroes to make up for decades of discrimination in favor of whites.

This newspaper has been and is a strong supporter of the civil rights movement. We believe Negroes have not been getting an equal break with whites in the job market, and we agree that discrimination against Negroes must cease because it is both immoral and illegal.

However, the CORE position, as indicated by Mr. Finkel, violates the very principles on which the civil rights movement is based. "Equal rights" means equal rights for all. The theory of "compensatory" hiring is just as discriminatory and just as wrong as the theory of white supremacy.

CORE should change its attitude or its name.

State May End Free Tuition Plan

SACRAMENTO—California, facing a $250 million revenue gap next fiscal year, is likely to scrap its historic policy of free college tuition for residents and cut-rate tuition for nonresidents.

That is the opinion of Assemblyman William Dannemeyer, D-Fullerton, who proposed serious consideration of such a plan last legislative session. Dannemeyer is a former Long Beach resident, a Poly High graduate.

Previously, similar proposals of economy-minded lawmakers were shrugged off by key state officials.

However, Sacramento is receptive to economy ideas in the face of a budget pinch that will result in higher taxes unless the drain on the treasury can be curbed.

The State Chamber of Commerce also will advocate some sort of a tuition plan for college and university students.

Still uncertain is the timing of any such tuition plan. However, more officials see the fiscal hand-writing on the wall. Earlier this year, State Finance Director Hale Champion conceded it might be necessary in the future to consider a tuition plan.

The Brown administration isn't expected to urge one at this time, though.

But with the backing of Democrat Dannemeyer and the State Chamber of Commerce, the plan for tuition could receive serious consideration in 1965.

For Charging

Nonresident students at California colleges and universities now pay only $600 a year tuition. Dannemeyer feels they should pay their own way. He notes that it costs $1,100 a year for every undergraduate college student and an average of $2,500 a year for graduate students.

A. Alan Post, legislative analyst, estimates that the state could save $12 million a year if out-of-state students paid the entire costs of their California education. Higher nonresidence tuition is a good possibility in 1965, according to Dannemeyer, who intends to introduce legislation on the subject.

However, he anticipates that it may be a few years before lawmakers will force California colleges to charge resident tuition. He also plans to back a resident-tuition bill in 1965.

Dannemeyer's 1964 plan, sent to the Assembly Ways and Means Committee for further study, called for resident students to pay $400 a year tuition—the same tuition New York charges its resident college students.

The economic blow would be softened by a companion loan and scholarship program so that no student would be denied a college education because of financial need.

Technically, the legislature cannot order University of California regents or State College trustees to impose a tuition system. However, if university budgets were slashed the institutions could be left with no practical alternative.

If nonresident students pay their full way and residents are charged $400 a year, the state treasury would be fattened by $87 million a year. The tuition take would grow as enrollment expands.

A tuition plan would have soaked Assemblyman Dannemeyer in the pocket book if it had been imposed a couple of decades ago. After attending high school in Long Beach, Dannemeyer was graduated from the Hastings College of Law at the University of California.

Assemblyman Dannemeyer, though at that time only a freshman legislator from Orange County, tackled one of the most controversial issues in the educational realm when he raised the subject of college tuition.

Instead of being clobbered politically, he gained stature. And some in Sacramento are speculating that he may have picked up enough allies to enact at least a phase of the tuition program in 1965.

LBCC Demo Chief Hopes to Elevate Political Dialogue

"WHICH ONE OF YOU called my wife a dog?"

The irate questioner hopped out of his car and bore down on three young men walking in a North Long Beach neighborhood.

The story had a happy ending but illustrates the vicissitudes of precinct work as experienced by members of the Long Beach City College Democratic Club in the last campaign.

Richard Kalish, club president, said the man was satisfied with the explanation that one of the youths had remarked, upon being barked at on one of their house calls, "Must be a Republican dog."

Kalish, only 17, has some enlightened ideas about politics and what the function of political clubs should be. He thinks the mission should be "informed citizens, not emotional partisans." He adds, "This goal we're trying to foster in our club is by no means a plan to make everyone a Democrat."

He deplores that discussion over candidates and issues too many times disintegrates almost immediately into name-calling argument because the people are armed only with emotions, not facts. He feels this is a major failing of the state's Young Republican organization which has made conservatism its passionate cry and emotes almost exclusively against any frame of mind less than conservative.

SAYS KALISH, "This argument should be secondary to a well-rounded presentation of the issues facing us." Although the LBCC Democratic Club has only about 40 members, its on-campus programs have drawn as many as 150 observers. A college should be an intellectual center, he says. It is in many communities—not so much yet in Long Beach, but it's getting better.

So, our community neighbors come to the campus for symphonies and plays—why not for informative political sessions? We have films, pamphlets, tapes, speakers and each program includes a discussion period.

In short, Kalish doesn't believe partisan political meetings should be sessions at which people who agree they are Democrats merely nod more agreement at each other without some attack on issues and ideas. Above all, the dialogue should be constructive.

NOTING THAT most of the club membership are not yet of voting age, Kalish wrote his constituents: "We can, in my opinion, be of greatest value to the Democratic Party, to the society we live in and to ourselves by striving to be individuals who are informed of the problems which face us today and also those which we can expect to encounter in the future."

"We should have a knowledge of the solutions which have been suggested for those problems as well as an adequate perspective as to the consequences of these solutions... as our knowledge of these problems increases, so does our ability to discuss them intelligently and persuasively and so does the probability that we will vote rationally when that time comes."

Disloyalty Charge Won't Help P.T.A.

EDITOR:

Mrs. Russell Brown recently resigned from the presidency of the Millikan manner that brought her much publicity. I do not question her right to speak her views, but I do feel she has taken advantage of her office and of the PTA to spread her own personal philosophy.

Her ideas do not reflect my views nor do they, I feel, reflect the views of the majority of the members of the Millikan PTA. If Mrs. Brown sincerely wished to make reforms, she might have attempted to work within the structure of the group and with the cooperation of other members. Perhaps she is resigning—not because the leadership is dictatorial—but because the members do not accept her views.

Mrs. Brown accuses the PTA of being a subversive group because it supports the United Nations. Nationalism is not inconsistent with a sincere attempt at international cooperation and an attempt to better the lives of others in the world. Mrs. Brown would also have the PTA take a stand on the prompt dismissal of teachers of doubtful loyalty. I would like to ask her who would decide the loyalty of the teachers?

Some people call anyone who disagrees with them disloyal. My view of Americanism is that there is room for more than one opinion and that people may oppose each other's ideas without questioning each other's loyalty. Therefore, I agree with Mrs. Brown that there are very real problems that the PTA could deal with and that there is a need for more parent-teacher cooperation, but does she feel that the only way to accomplish this is by questioning the loyalty of the PTA?

Luther King Has No Facts

EDITOR:

What are you trying to do in your paper, whitewash Rev. King and his associates?

Would you condemn an outstanding American on an emotional impulse, before checking the facts? Most any school boy knows that the FBI investigates and send their findings to the Attorney General, then it is the responsibility of the Attorney General. Does Rev. King know of this procedure? If he does, is he aware of what is in the reports? Of course not. The contents of the reports are classified, so when Rev. King makes statements such as he did, he shows how irresponsible he is.

Mr. Hoover warned Rev.

King several months ago that Communists had infiltrated his civil rights movement, but Rev. King did not act on it. Now we all know that one of the first objectives of communism is to degrade the law enforcement agencies. When Rev. King made his false statement, all other civil rights leaders across the land were ready with statements urging Mr. Hoover to resign. They say he could not bear the pressure.

How any paper, if it wants to be fair, could condemn Mr. Hoover without facts, I'll never understand. Mr. Hoover has done more good for this country than all of his attackers combined.

Southland Needs Good Yule Parade

EDITOR:

It's truly a shame that the county of L.A. doesn't have a decent Christmas parade. Recently, my two daughters, 5 and 4 years of age, watched the parade from Hollywood Boulevard. Later, we saw the Macy's parade from New York City. Which of the two parades held the children's interest?

In one parade they saw many lovely floats, large animal-shaped balloons and lots of colorful bands. In the other parade, they saw dozens of convertibles occupied by disc jockeys, news men and an assortment of TV personalities, unknown to most young children.

In one parade there were lovely dancers and professional singers; in the other, there were commentators dashing into the street to get a few comments from "personalities." There were equestrian units more interested in out-doing each other in the amount of silver-decorated horses than entertaining the youngsters.

Parades are for the young and the young at heart—can't something be done about having a truly fine Christmas parade out here?

A Small Beginning

The Arizona Republic

SARGENT SHRIVER picked a good place to launch the Arizona phase of "the war on poverty." He announced that $35,000 (out of a national total of $35 million) will go to a study of English language difficulties among Arizona's Papago Indians.

American Indians undoubtedly stand at the bottom of the nation's economic ladder, and Arizona has more of them than any other state. It would be absurd to blame the Indians' woes on any single cause, but certainly federal neglect is partly at fault. If the $35,000 pilot project in teaching English can help the Papagos to make a living either on or off the reservation, the newly created Office of Economic Opportunity will have a real achievement to its credit.

The thing that strikes us, however, is that the federal government has been responsible for the education of the Papago Indians for these many years. If the tens of millions of dollars spent has failed to achieve the goal, we don't know what will be accomplished by the $35,000 allotted as part of the war on poverty.

Johnson Basically Conservative

WASHINGTON — Maybe some of the Republican governors and the so-called "moderates" will wake up sooner or later to the fact that the American people elected a conservative as President of the United States last month.

The theory expounded by the "moderates" that the country repudiated conservatism doesn't seem to have been accepted by President Johnson himself. For in his speech on Wednesday to the Business Advisory Council, he made one of the best expositions of conservative doctrine that has come from the lips of a Chief Executive in many years.

Mr. Johnson endeavored to make it clear that the government and business are really partners in the all-important task of preserving an equilibrium in wages and prices. He emphasized the need for healthy investment of funds and the creation of job opportunities for a growing population.

The President, in listing "the foremost economic problems" of the day, used, of course, generalities, but he did specify the obligations of business and government and stressed the fact that both are important.

He said: "I believe the federal government's role is to create a climate conducive to prosperity."

The President spoke of what he called "primary obligations" of the government. These included a tax system "that does not overburden businessmen or consumers" but maintains incentives for productive effort, "expenditure programs that promote development of human and natural resources," and "keeping a clear field for private initiative in the wide range of activities where competitive enterprise is the most efficient way of getting things done."

Mr. Johnson spoke of the importance of "an over-all budget policy that promotes balance between purchasing power and productive ca-

Rusk Advises Against a Summit Meeting

WASHINGTON—No. 1 item on the Anglo-American agenda when Prime Minister Harold Wilson meets with President Johnson this week is future policy toward the new leaders of the Kremlin. Especially they will explore the wisdom of a summit meeting.

President Johnson, who believes in talking to people face to face, had previously been planning on a personal talk with Nikita Khrushchev.

Later, when Khrushchev was knocked out of the Kremlin box, LBJ naturally figured on meeting with Brezhnev and Kosygin at some appropriate time.

However, Secretary of State Dean Rusk has been less than enthusiastic. He doesn't want to see a high-level meeting unless there is a real chance of settling major problems.

He is also concerned over evidence that the new Kremlin is following a tougher line than Khrushchev. Furthermore, it has made no overtures toward a meeting with the President.

While the President is usually inclined to follow his own famous advice, "Come, let us reason together," in this case he is following the advice of his Secretary of State.

This is where Prime Minister Wilson comes into the picture. It's probable that he will act as a sort of unofficial emissary to sound out Moscow about a meeting. He expects to go to Moscow soon, will take some diplomatic soundings, then come to Washington after Christmas to report.

Upon this will depend whether there will be a summit conference in 1965.

Meanwhile, Ambassador Foy Kohler has reported that he is concerned over the influence of the Red Army in the new Soviet government. Three Deputy Premiers—Ustinov, Rudnev, and Smirnov—are considered strong supporters of the army and the armaments industry.

The new Chief of Staff, Marshal Matvey Zakharov, is a believer in conventional weapons. The late Chief of Staff, Marshal Sergei Biryuzov, recently killed in an air crash in Belgrade, was a rockets missile advocate, had been picked by Khrushchev because he supported him in his battle against conventional weapons.

Note—Khrushchev's argument with the Red Army in favor of missiles and against conventional weapons was somewhat similar to President Johnson's argument for missiles as against Gen. Curtis Lemay's argument for manned bombers.

IT DIDN'T make headlines, but the Warren Commission has finally dug out the mystery of the full-page ad "Welcome Mr. Kennedy" which appeared in the Dallas News the morning Kennedy was assassinated.

The Warren Commission has found that the ad was financed by John Birchers with Nelson B. Hunt, son of the well-known oil billionaire W. L. Hunt, helping to raise the money.

Another inflammatory hate sheet, "Wanted for Treason," featuring pictures of Kennedy, turned up on the streets of Dallas three days before he arrived. The Warren Commission found it was produced by Robert Surrey, a partner in the American Eagle Publishing Company.

THE DOCTORS of the United States are among the most dedicated people in the nation, but being necessarily busy they don't always know what their so-called "trade union," the American Medical Association, is doing.

Recently, for instance, top policy-makers of the AMA got together behind closed doors to ponder the disaster of Lyndon Johnson's landslide victory and to decide on further strategy to defeat medical care for the elderly.

However, the anti-Medicare people took such a drubbing at the polls that the doctors have decided they can no longer block Medicare with the old Kerr-Mills Law, which pays the medical expenses only of elderly people who take a poverty oath and can't otherwise pay their doctor bills.

As a result, AMA strategists are studying how far they must compromise in order to put across a compromise substitute.

Murphy Says Crash Program Wrong Way to Rebuild GOP

WASHINGTON—A group of newspapermen had a pleasant lunch here the other day with the new Senator-elect from California, George Murphy. During his political career—which incidentally extends over quite a number of years—Murphy has borne the gratuitous tag of "former song and dance man," a phrase which refers to his background as a hooper in the movies.

MURPHY

While some of his adherents in the recent senatorial contest with Sen. Pierre Salinger objected to the "song and dance" label, Murphy says it didn't bother him in the least. On balance, he thinks, it probably helped him. It identified him and brought a distinct and well-known face to the mind of newspaper readers as they read the words. In a state in which the entertainment business is not only big news but also a bulwark of the economy, identification with Hollywood is no handicap.

Then, too, Murphy said, he was helped by the fact that he always played the screen role of a good guy. He never was the heavy or the villain. People remembered him as the nice fellow who tried to help Shirley Temple or who had overcome the forces of evil in innumerable movie scripts. He was helped, he thought, by the fact that several of his movies were re-issued and the late, late show set could see him anew in all of his goodness.

Movies however are now behind him, except for a continuing affiliation as a paid consultant to Technicolor, Inc. He's in business now as a Senator and as a Republican.

He is concerned with the present status of the GOP. He believes it needs some rebuilding, but doesn't think a crash program is the way to achieve that objective. Murphy indicated he thought both the liberal Governors meeting in Denver and the big National Committee meeting to be held here in January are a bit premature. He didn't use that exact word, but that was the gist of his meaning. He suggested the party experts might spend a little more time digesting the results of the November election and then begin to take remedial action.

Murphy thinks the Republicans should appoint something akin to a board of directors to guide party policy. That board should consist of representatives of the various elements of the party, i.e. conservatives, liberals, unionists, business, congressional, etc. The board would try to hammer out differences between the different groups and present an agreed upon course of action to the national committee and to the party. In the past, attempts have been made to form such a body, but they have never been brought to fruition.

A first lunch with the Washington press is never an easy for any man. It seemed to us that Murphy passed with flying colors and we'll watch with interest to see, as the phrase goes, if the "former song and dance man" does as well in the future on the Senate floor and in committee.

CAPITAL CAPERS

Gaiety Absent as Washington Prepares for Inauguration

I, P-T Washington Bureau

HEARD ANY GOOD political jokes lately? We haven't. For inexplicable reasons the mood of Washington isn't very gay these days. There's none of the boisterous excitement which prevailed between election day and inauguration day four years ago nor none of the anticipation of a big change which characterized the period of waiting before the swearing-in of President Dwight D. Eisenhower. No one here seems to know quite what to expect for the future and the mood of the city is perhaps best described as "watchful waiting." A mood which doesn't make for humor and jokes.

MRS. JACQUELINE KENNEDY will go for the sporty life during the Christmas vacation. She will spend Christmas Day in New York, then the day after will travel to Aspen, Colo. There she'll devote her time to skiing. She had never skied before last year when her brother-in-law, Robert, introduced her to the sport in New England. Apparently she was so taken by art of riding over the snow that she plans a couple of weeks in Aspen. And, oh yes, Bobby will be accompanying her for at least part of the vacation. He'll have to cut his vacation short however in order to get back here to Washington in order to be sworn in as the new Senator from New York. His wife Ethel will spend the Yuletide vacation here in Washington, presumably taking care of the new baby which is due any day now.

VICE-PRESIDENT-ELECT Hubert H. Humphrey will spend most of the Christmas vacation here in Washington. Although it probably won't turn out to be a vacation. He will devote his time to cleaning up his Senate office before resigning and giving his seat to Senator-designate from Minnesota, Walter F. Mondale. Humphrey will undoubtedly also be busy working out the priorities for the President's legislative program and taking care of the myriad of details which accumulate for any man about to be inaugurated as Vice-President.

GEORGE MURPHY, the senator-elect from California, was in town the other day. His background as a Hollywood actor came up and he remarked that as far as he knew he was the first member of Actors Equity ever to be elected to the Senate. "No actor has ever before been a Senator" he said. A wag added that the contrary was not true.

THE SPLIT WITHIN Republican circles grows wider instead of narrower. GOP governors are spearheading the opposition to National Committee Chairman Dean Burch. When the governors hold their annual meeting, as they did in Denver last week, the National Committee usually picks up their expense tabs. This time, the governors paid their own way, probably because they knew Burch would refuse to approve payment for a meeting held to hang him in effigy.

AS EACH NEW SENATOR and representative arrives in Washington, he poses for a photograph in front of the Capitol which will be used over and over again during his tenure in office. The pose is different this year, however. The new legislators are being photographed against the Capitol's backside. The front door is cluttered up with special wooden stands and podiums which are being constructed for the inauguration of President Johnson. Were the temporary construction visible in the background, the photo would be "dated" and hence unusable after Jan. 20.

Family's Madonnas From Many Countries

By ANNE HOWE
A stately lady from every nation. So is described the Cloyce Bogle International collection of 65 Madonnas and 50 Nativity groups, which will be displayed at the Long Beach YWCA Dec. 11-20.

A dimstore Nativity scene purchased 30 years ago by Mrs. Bogle for her youngsters began a world-wide search for representative mother and child replicas and creches.

Bogle's son, Kip, a free lance designer, is the family authority on the items in the collection.

Recently returned from a tour of the Orient, he uncovered "one of the most interesting figures in the collection."

"The natives of Malay do not worship the Madonna and Child, since Buddhism is the country's main religion, and they thought I was ridiculous in trying to find a mother-child figure, but after much questioning I found a carved rose-wood statue of a native woman, carrying the traditional bundle of sticks on her head, with the child on her side."

An artistically inclined family, the Bogles live in North Long Beach. Although Protestant, they have collected these symbols of the Catholic religion purely as an interpretation of the artisans in the countries represented.

"Each artist reproduces his figures as they are reflected in his own people," Bogle emphasizes. "For example the Chinese nativity scene is complete with Chinese style wisemen, a Madonna dressed in a Mandarin gown with an elaborate hair style and a babe wrapped in the colorful Oriental shawl."

Ecuador's collection contribution is a nativity scene molded by hand out of kneaded bread dough. The dough, after being formed into the proper figures, is brightly lacquered, preventing mildew.

Others in the collection include a large assortment of straw, pottery, pounded and colored aluminum, and wood creations from Mexico; a Holy Family made of wood shavings from Germany; a single piece of wrought iron forming a solemn Madonna, purchased in Basel, Switzerland; a crude stone idol-like mother and child from South America, and a natural wood Holy Family from Poland.

A LARGE assortment of traditional Madonnas in porcelain, and fine china are also included. Other materials used include cork, corn husks, felt and wax.

Bogle's favorite Madonna he could never buy. In the Los Angeles school Kip attended, there was a Madonna first, created by ceramic artist Suzy Singer. At that time the figurine was impossible to buy. Returning several years later to try to buy it, Kip found that the Madonna had mysteriously disappeared and he has never found one similar to replace it.

Fortunately, as he says, he found another that he "would grab first if the house caught on fire." This one is the black cast iron Madonna of Notre Dame he acquired while studying in Paris after the war.

The display will be open to the public from 2 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. Dec. 11-20 at the YWCA auditorium, 550 Pacific Ave.

Gardena Dedicates New $318,000 Library

GARDENA—City and county officials Saturday dedicated the newest facility in Gardena's expanding civic center—a $318,000 county-financed public library.

Built on the south mall of civic center, the 25,000-square-foot library surrounds an interior courtyard, designed and landscaped by the Gardena Valley Gardener's Association in an Oriental motif that characterizes already-built sections of the civic center site, 1700 W. Gardena Blvd.

The facility opens Monday with 30,000 books—only a third of the 90,000 which eventually will be housed on its shelves.

AN INTREPID EXPLORER AT PIER J

L.B. New Frontier

By LOU JOBST

In the tradition of John C. Fremont, Lewis & Clark and other intrepid trail blazers, we beat a path out to Long Beach's new frontier.

It was a perilous journey that took us two miles farther south than any settler hereabouts has ever ventured on foot before.

We crossed vast stretches of sand more desolate and lifeless than the Sahara, forded several raging streams about to break out of their banks, clawed our way up steep inclines and plunged down rubble-strewn cliffs of granite and stone.

AT ONE POINT we walked on earth that shook and trembled beneath us like a bowl of anxious gelatin and, on another occasion, stepped confidently out onto solid ground only to find ourselves knee deep in ooze, and sinking deeper. We found many natural wonders and gave them names when we felt they merited them.

A towering peak of stone we dubbed Mt. Mansell and an oval-shaped island sea, Lake Wade.

We found a huge rusted anchor half buried in the sand and were reminded that more than 60 boats have been shipwrecked on these alien shores.

That's what the harbor department official, who gave us rubber boots for our trek out onto barren Pier J, had said.

He also told us that the

TWENTY-FIVE MILLION of the pier's 33 million cubic yards of sand, he explained, and virtually all of the 3 million tons of rock dike are in place.

At its highest point the pier is 16 feet out of the water and at the lowest, 11 feet, he stated.

"The fill is going in at a rate of 1.5 million cubic yards a month," the official said beaming with pride, "and when the pier is finished early next year it will be nearly five miles long around the perimeter."

"But don't go that way."

He mapped us a course that was roughly on a dead southeasterly heading from the harbor department administration building.

"That'll put you on the southeast corner of Jay, almost exactly two miles seaward of the intersection of Ocean Boulevard, Atlantic Avenue and the city's furthest landfall."

HE SUGGESTED we steer clear of the nearly 10,000 lineal feet of 36-inch steel pipeline that snakes about the pier like a drunken serpent and to stay off the mounds of gray sand.

The mounds, he said, are covered with thousands of square feet of thin polyethylene plastic to keep the sand from leaking back into the sea.

"You might poke holes in it," he said fastidiously. We had found, on our trip, little wildlife to classify—a solitary centipede, some shellfish and an occasional gull feeding on a stranded anchovy.

But we did talk to the natives.

"HEY," SHOUTED a red-necked crane operator above the roar of the diesel engine, "you guys lost?" "Yes," we screamed back through cupped hands, "and no."

"We're looking for the south city limits, but we seem to be going in circles." "The WHAT?" he replied, and cut his engine.

"The southeast corner of Pier J," we responded, "We want to be the first to get there."

"Oh, do you now?" he said with sly look in his eyes.

"Just follow those," he said, pointing to a trail of footprints in the wet sand.

ELECTION TUESDAY

Chace Likely Choice for Supervisor Chair

L. P. T. Los Angeles Bureau

The annual election of a chairman of the Board of Supervisors will take place Tuesday at 9 a.m., and it appears certain that Supervisor Burton W. Chace of Long Beach will be named.

The present chairman, Supervisor Warren M. Dorn of Pasadena, announced publicly at a board meeting several weeks ago that he would not seek re-election. He is completing his second consecutive term as chairman.

Supervisor Ernest E. Debs, who was chairman in 1961 and 1962, and Supervisor Frank G. Bonelli, who headed the board in 1959 and 1960, have indicated they would not seek the chairmanship this year.

SUPERVISOR Kenneth Hahn, who has been on the county board since 1952 and is the senior member from the standpoint of service, has never been chairman. Observers said he does not have support of his colleagues for the position.

Chace has served two terms as presiding officer of the Board of Supervisors. In March, 1965, the then Supervisor Herbert Legg decided to relinquish the post and Chace was named to complete the term. He was elected for a full term in 1958.

Chace, three times mayor of Long Beach, was appointed supervisor March 20, 1953, to fill a vacancy created by the death of Supervisor Raymond Darby.

In 1954, he was elected for the remaining two years of Darby's four-year term on the board. He won his own four-year term in 1956, was re-elected in 1960 and again this year.

Chace and his wife, Polly, live at 4160 Country Club Drive.

Salvationist Yule Cheer for 13,000

More than 13,000 persons will enjoy a merrier Christmas because of the Salvation Army. Ben Pearson, chairman of the group's Christmas committee, said Saturday.

Pearson urged citizens to donate food, money, toys and effort to make the massive project possible.

Applications for Christmas help now are being received at Salvation Army Christmas Headquarters, 215 Long Beach Blvd. Mrs. Mabel John is the director.

Mrs. Pat Collins directs the food commissary at 1318 Pine Ave.

Pearson said that 700 families and 600 single persons will receive Christmas dinners. There will be parties for 1,000 youngsters and gift packages for 4,000 persons in rest homes and hospitals.

Contributions may be sent to Salvation Army Headquarters, 206 E. Fourth St., or placed in the Christmas Kettles downtown. Food and toys may be taken to 1318 Pine Ave. or placed in receptacles in used car lots.

Classes Swarm, Slip Over Rocks

Story and Pictures
by DICK EMERY

In this season of low tides at afternoon hours, school classes swarm over San Pedro's Point Fernin rocks. From the rocks and from tide pools students gather such flora and fauna as their teachers tell them they should collect in their coffee cans.

They also slip on the seaweedy rocks, step into knee-deep puddles, cut their hands on barnacles and fill the air with joyous or pain-filled shrieks.

After all, rock crabs do pinch!

IN THE NEARBY Cabrillo Beach Museum (established 1934 and operated by the Los Angeles City Recreation and Parks Department) the tide-pool-bound pupils first see the marine exhibits and hear about sea life from John Olguin, the museum's director.

Then, followed by their teachers, they prowl the rocks and the pools. They pick up strands of sea grass, tufts of algae, empty shells of clam and snail and cowrie, "owner-occupied" shells of chiton, limpet and barnacle.

They whoop over discoveries of sea urchin, purple anemone and brittle star.

When the hunt ends, the class withdraws from the pools and the rocks. Wet and weary, carrying coffee cans—which splash over at times—the tide-poolers trudge back to school buses parked beside the museum.

BUS DRIVERS load the fragrant loot—flora and fauna—all in coffee cans with sea water—into baggage compartments and the buses chug for home.

"We get them by the hundreds, these junior high and high school students, at this season," Alguin said. "They come here from cities all over Los Angeles County, when the tides are low in daytime hours."

"By visiting the museum first, they learn what they should find in the pools. And if they find something they can't identify, they bring it in here and we help them."

Chatter Along Gay Way

By EARL WILSON
NEW YORK—Sybil Burton, who cast "The Knack," says casting is easy—"once you decide there isn't a role in the play for you" . . . Louis Armstrong's joking remark after seeing "Hello, Dolly!" "They took my recording and built a whole show around it!"

Leslie Caron said she may do the lead in the Edith Piaf bio . . . Carroll Baker—whose "Sylvia" is her sixth film in a short time—was asked her plans: "I'll retire in 10 years and watch all my movies on the Late Show" . . . The "John Goldfarb, Please Come Home" movie, which has football scenes, will be reviewed for Life by Mrs. Charlie Connerly, wife of the former Giant quarterback. Mike Nichols explained how he got interested in dramatics: "I tried out for plays at college because it was a great way to meet pretty girls" . . . Three record companies want to sign pretty Pat Woodell of "Petticoat Junction" . . . Pierre Salinger was offered a contract to cut an album, as a pianist.

Carolann Daniels of "Slow Dance on the Killing Ground" needed a wig for publicity photos—so she borrowed one from Hume Cronyn, who wears it in "The Physicists" . . . Pat Boone's taking his family on a tour of Japan . . . Actress Louise Sorel, who once said kiddingly she'd wed only a titled man, will marry actor Herb Edelman—who plays a gypsy King of Newark in the B'way musical "Bajour."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Lisa Kirk, who'll be coming to the Persian Rm., turned down an apartment here: "It didn't have a sunken living room—but the kitchen floor sagged a little."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Larry Matthews can't understand why the woman who loves a bargain so much hates to be told she's wearing one.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "There are two kinds of people at every party—those who want to leave early, and those who want to stay late. The trouble is, they're usually married to each other."—Anon.

EARL'S PEARLS: The true marriage expert isn't the woman who has been wed 20 times, but the woman who has been married for 20 years.—L. S. McCandless.

Now that Ringo Starr got so much publicity about taking out his tonsils, Ronnie Martin wonders what he'll do for an encore—have 'em put back in again?—That's earl, brother.

SWORD-RATTLER, COMEDY

Evans in TV, Film Roles

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Maurice Evans, one of the world's greatest Shakespearean actors, is back in Hollywood, working in a sword-rattling movie and a television series.

It's a credit to his talent that he's at home in both. Evans' last Hollywood movie was "Androcles and the Lion," made in 1953. His only visits to Hollywood since then were social, until the last trip.

He's working on the Universal lot in the new Charlton Heston film "The War Lord." Evans also was hired for a Red Skelton show and the "Bewitched" series in which he plays Agnes Moorehead's husband.

ANOTHER, and perhaps more important, reason for Evans' presence in Hollywood is film production. He hopes to make his own pictures here.

"What I really want to do is get behind a camera and make one," he said. "I'm talking with people out here about it, finding the right subject."

"The people who backed me in the theater are going to back me in movies," he said. "I don't think anybody has done this before in movies. When you go to the usual source of finance you have to compromise."

No Cloak-Dagger Atmosphere in Czechoslovakia

By PRESTON GROVER

PRAGUE (AP) — If you want to take a vacation behind the Iron Curtain, Czechoslovakia is an easy place to do it.

You won't feel much cloak and dagger atmosphere, although you can count on it, the police are keeping a fairly close eye on you. But they don't seem to do much about it. The cloak and dagger thrill of a trip behind the Iron Curtain is largely gone, even in Russia, so long as you stay in the main cities.

Here, unlike other places behind the Curtain, you just drive up to the frontier and they will give you a visa for as many days as you want to tour. If you come by plane, you get your visa on arrival at the airport. It is that simple.

THE OFFICIAL rate of exchange is 7 crowns to the dollar, but you forget all about that from the beginning. When you come in you are required to buy crowns equal to $4 a day for each day you expect to stay. For these the rate is 14 to the dollar.

After that, all money you change brings 28 crowns to the dollar and that means easy going. A big room in a first class hotel — and there are some fine ones — costs $3.50 a day and your meals for the most part will be under $2 each. (A good meal in Paris costs almost two days of living in Prague.)

If you feel lonesome, you can drop into the Hotel Aleron for dinner and the chances are the orchestra will be playing its favorite medley, a string of songs which have made generations of Americans cry in their beer. On one evening I recorded the following, in one unbroken burst:

"Oh Say Goodbye to Mother," "Yankee Doodle," "Old Black Joe," "Listen to the Mocking Bird," "When You and I Were Young Maggie," "Then A Hoe-Down I Couldn't put a name to, Swanee River," "Nearer My God to Thee" (Honest injun, they played it), "My Old Kentucky Home," "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," "Dixie," "Anchors Aweigh," "The Cassions Keep Rolling Along."

THERE ARE some European oddities you will have to get used to, but painlessly. You sleep under an eiderdown cover six inches thick which looks as if it would smother you. It won't. The bath towels are so big it is like drying yourself with a wall-to-wall carpet.

Prague is a city built by kings for the benefit of socialists. Almost everything is on a massive scale except the streets. They are so narrow in places you can't even ride a bicycle into them without skinning your knuckles. There is a reason for that. Years ago all the great nobles had to build houses as close as they could to the royal palace on the main hill above the River Moldau (which flows into the Elbe which flows through Germany to keep the Russians and Americans apart). With so many nobles there had to be many big houses and that left little room for streets.

One of the nicest walks you can take is to start from the palace on the hill and stroll back to your hotel. It will be a couple of miles or more, what with backtracking from dead-end streets, but you will see some of the finest architecture in Europe, and some of the most colossal foundations any place. They built big, those Czechs.

If you get lost, you are bound to find somebody who will put you on the right road. People speak more German than English, and they are continuing to study it as a main language along with Russian, despite five years of Nazi occupation. But they are good at sign language. If you name your hotel, they will know where it is.

DON'T LOOK for taxis. There are only 350 in the whole city of a million population. In Bratislava, there are just 50 for a population of 260,000. Cars are scarce and expensive. It takes more than two years full earnings of a skilled mechanic to buy a little Skoda.

But with your low-priced crowns you can rent a car and driver for the day without too much pain, three crowns (10 cents) a mile and 8 crowns an hour (about 30 cents) for waiting time.

Prague wasn't shot up by the war so almost everything is intact, including that famous clock which attracts crowds every hour. On the hour, every hour, it chimes the time, parades the twelve apostles in front of a window, and repeats the age old ceremony of death beckoning to a priest, a wastrel and a warrior, each of whom shakes his stony head in refusal. Then a cock crows.

You won't see many of the signs that decorate Moscow and East Berlin urging you to march on-ward to the victory of communism. The only sign I saw was in the Skoda automobile plant, urging the workers to work for the glory of the Skoda works.

THE PLACE is alive with night clubs open to 3 or 4 a.m. and Wenceslas Square, the town center, is almost as bright as Broadway. One night spot there, the Alhambra, gives a leggy show with American music. In another "Off Wenceslas" spot, the Olympia, they sing only Beate songs. Once it became so riotous that the police stepped in and ordered them to keep it quiet or else. Now the teenagers and twentys sit, twitching but silent, while singers contort and scream on the stage. At the end they applaud, but no bobby-sox shrieking.

Opera is well staged in the fine old Prague Opera House that has echoed to the great voices of old. I saw Tosca. The scenery was ultramodern and excellent, the soprano good, but the tenor tiny and tinny. Socialism hasn't solved the tenor problem.

You can also hunt pheasants, deer, bear and wolves, but it is expensive.

Don't confine yourself to hotel eating, even though it is easiest. The little wine halls are fun. The food is simple but good. Those plump little sausages you buy at the street stands in Wenceslas Square, to eat off a sheet of paper, are one of the treats of Europe. "U Fleku" is an old beer hall dating back about 400 years. It serves beer, ham and hot sausages. It is patronized by students who are students, and by artists who are artists. A painting says a license was granted in 1499, the year after Columbus' third voyage to America.

And it is easy to remember that after all, Prague is little more than an hour's flight from Paris.

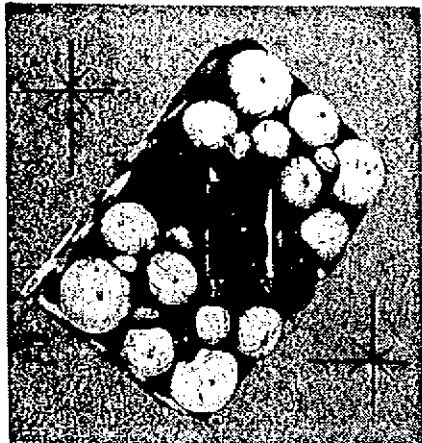

—AP Wirephoto

TIME FOR ENTERTAINMENT

Vacationing in Communist Czechoslovakia is easy, with unlimited visas available at border or airport. An attraction which draws crowds every hour, as here, is Prague's famous 300-year-old clock. Its hourly activity includes climes, a cock's crow, a parade of the 12 apostles, and a ceremony of death beckoning and being repulsed by a priest, a wastrel, a warrior.

MAY FEAR SATO'S FRIENDSHIP WITH U.S.

Red China in Angry Attack on Japanese Leader

By ROBERT CRABBE
TOKYO (UPI)—Communist China has surprised the Japanese political world by mounting an angry propaganda attack against the new prime minister, Eisaku Sato.

The ostensible reason for the attack was Sato's refusal to allow an important Chinese Communist to visit Tokyo for the convention of the Japan Communist Party.

The real reason may be that the Chinese fear that Sato will work closely with the United States to make Japan a more effective partner in the struggle against Asian communism.

On Nov. 21, less than two weeks after Sato took office, the Japanese government decided to refuse entry visas to 23 foreign Communists bent on attending the Japanese Communist Party convention.

The 23 applicants included 14 from Red China, five from North Korea and four from North Viet Nam.

AMONG THEM was a

Chinese leader named Peng Chen, who is mayor of Peking, and a member of the politbureau of the Chinese Communist Party. Had Peng been allowed to come, he would have been the highest ranking Chinese Communist ever to set foot on Japanese soil.

On Nov. 23 Peoples Daily, official newspaper of the central committee of the Chinese Communist Party, called the rejection of the Chinese delegation "a serious move hostile to the Chinese people, and aimed at undermining Sino-Japanese friendship."

The paper also attacked Sato for permitting the visit of an American nuclear powered submarine to the Japanese port of Sasebo, and Sato's protest against the Red Chinese nuclear test.

Similar attacks by Peking's propaganda machinery have been going on ever since.

SATO'S OLDER brother, former Prime Minister Nobusuki Kishi, was an object of special hatred by the Chinese Communists.

The sternly anti-Communist Kishi openly favored the Chinese Nationalist government on Formosa over Red China. He also rammed through the U.S.-Japan security treaty, in the face of left wing rioting which eventually drove him from office.

Enraged over Kishi's policies, the Peking Chinese in 1958 broke off virtually all trade between China and Japan, using as a pretext an anti-Chinese demonstration by an obscure group of Japanese Fascists.

The Peking Chinese have not forgotten that Kishi and Sato are brothers (they have different names because Kishi was adopted by his wife's family), and are thought to be closely akin in their thinking.

Japanese trade with China revived rapidly after Kishi left office. Under Kishi's successor, recently retired Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda, it rose to a post-war high.

THERE HAS already been nervous wondering in Tokyo whether the Chinese would repeat their performance of the Kishi era, and break off the trade again.

Repair Badly Damaged Ship in 8 Days

IN ONLY EIGHT WORKING days the Bethlehem Steel Co. Terminal Island shipyard put the damaged Dutch tanker, M. V. Sirrah, back into service. The Sirrah and the Pacific Coast Transport Co. tankship, SS Santa Maria, collided at Anchorage, Alaska, Oct. 19. The Los Angeles based Santa Maria burned and was abandoned. The 12,463-ton Sirrah limped down to Los Angeles Harbor with a stove-in and badly burned bow (left photo). Erecting a three-story scaffolding, workers installed 20 new bow plates as well as a new chain and anchor (middle photo). The heavily damaged nose section then was hand-washed and repainted (right) before returning to service. All this happened in unusually fast time. First photograph was taken by skipper of Sirrah shortly after accident occurred.

RESEMBLES SHAKE SHINGLES

New Roof Poured On

By DON KIRKLAND
There's a startling new answer for homebuilders faced with the decision of abandoning the traditional shake roof in favor of conventional fire safety:

Now he can have both—and, from an appearance standpoint, hardly know the difference.

A relatively new cement product, already in extensive use in high-temperature areas, combines the realism of wood shingles and the fireproof qualities of asbestos.

THE PRODUCT, known generally as Bermuda Roof, is applied like cement over the base sheet, or tar underlayment.

Available at builder supply stores, the roofing material initially is purchased pre-mixed and pre-colored in bags. On the job, it is poured into a portable cement mixer and pumped through a hose directly to the roof, where it is placed in specially-designed, 4-by-8-foot forms, each one containing its own unique honeycomb of irregularities to simulate the regular pattern of real shakes.

When the material sets, in roughly 30 minutes, the forms are removed and the product "slumps" together, much like gelatin in molds which have been removed from the refrigerator a bit too early.

ONCE DRY, the roof takes on an appearance of well-weathered wood shakes—without the usual waiting period.

Combining cement with lightweight aggregate, the product has four distinct advantages:

(1) It is completely fireproof, and may be used safely in any area where fire danger now prohibits shake roofs;

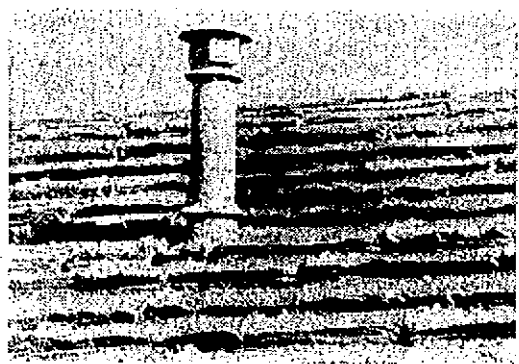

(2) It retains its natural beauty a lifetime, and never needs to be recolored or repaired in ordinary use;

(3) Unlike some other shake-substitutes, it gives an appearance of reality rather than artificiality; and
(4) Being full of air pockets by virtue of the lightweight aggregate composition, it offers outstanding heat-insulation qualities, making it especially desirable in areas where heat must be considered in the overall building plan.

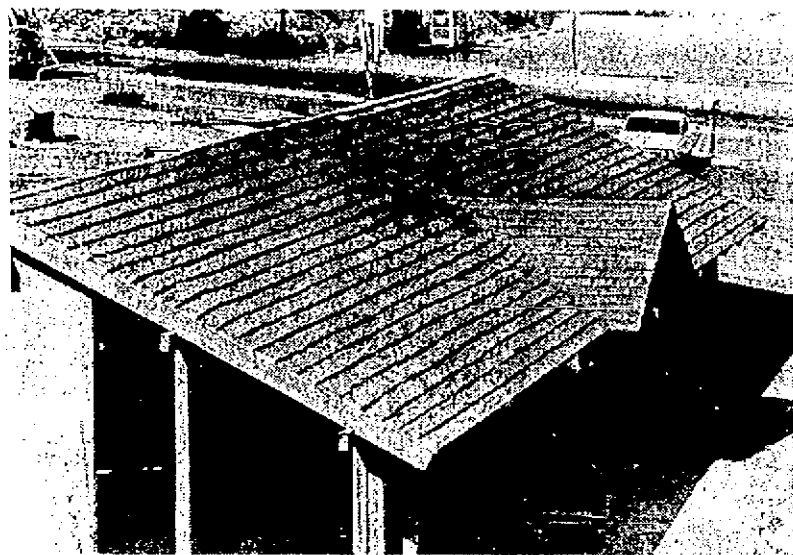

AS FOR COST, installation is comparable to that of thick-but wood shakes, 1½ inches and over, or about $32 per hundred square feet.

John McKinnon, Torrance city building superintendent, summed it up this way:

"It's the ideal answer for homeowners who otherwise would be unable, because of fire danger, to utilize shingles. We're tickled pink about it."

HERE'S CLOSEUP OF CEMENT 'SHAKE' ROOF

LOOKS LIKE, BUT ISN'T

40TH ANNIVERSARY

L. B. Apartment Group to Celebrate Dec. 15

Plans for a colorful meeting and Christmas party in observance of the 40th anniversary of the Long Beach Apartment House Association Dec. 15 are being readied by officers of the organization.

Several hundred apartment owners and operators will attend the 6:30 p.m. dinner meeting and program at the Woman's City Club, 1309 East 3rd St.

Forty years of progressive programs and action make the history of the association—one of the largest and longest established such groups in the state—an outstanding chapter in the development story of Long Beach and the California Southland, Arnold Berg, president of the group, noted Saturday.

MEMBERS OF the City Council, led by Mayor Edwin Wade, various other notables and past presidents of the Apartment Association, will have a part in the meeting program.

The large Woman's City Club hall will be festively decked in Christmas decorations and the dinner will be a Yuletide repast.

Election of directors of the association for 1965 also will take place during the meeting.

Harbor Investors Participate in Major Miraleste Project

SAN PEDRO—Composed entirely of Harbor Area investors, the Delores Development Corp. has begun the job of moving more than a million cubic yards of earth in the exclusive Crownview section of San Pedro's Miraleste district to create view lots for a new residential project.

The corporation includes lawyers, doctors, bankers and businessmen, among others; and for the last three years it has averaged a volume of $1 million annually in sales of homes, lots and multiple units.

Vincent Grant as vice president, and Mrs. Laurel Seward as secretary.

Delores Development's newest project, to be known as Miraleste Hills, will be a joint venture with J. H. Barton Construction, Inc.

Balanced Power homes at Miraleste Hills will be located on the east side of the Palos Verdes hills, overlooking San Pedro, the Los Angeles Harbor, and the Pacific Ocean. Each lot is being carefully carved out of the hillside to take full advantage of the spectacular view.

All homes will be air conditioned by central gas systems that provide heating and cooling for year-round comfort. Balanced Power kitchens will be equipped with built-in gas ranges and ovens.

Five furnished model homes are scheduled for construction as soon as the earthmoving operation is completed, the developers said.

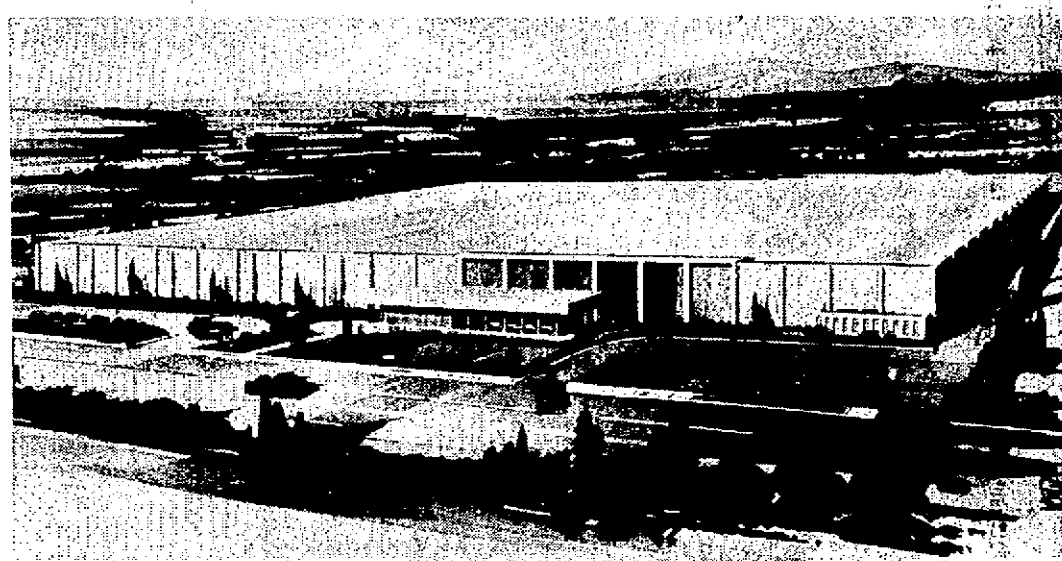

Miraleste Hills' 80 homes will be built on the last remaining hillside acreage in Crownview.

UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Here's artist's rendering of Shasta Beverages' new multi-million dollar canning and bottling plant now under construction at La Mirada. Representing the world's largest soft-drink canning facility, the plant will be more than four times the size of Shasta's present installation in Los Angeles. Completion of the new facility is scheduled for late spring, 1965.

Giant Beverage Plant Going Up at La Mirada

Shasta Beverages, a division of Consolidated Foods Corp., has started construction of the world's largest soft-drink canning facility on a 10-acre site located at La Mirada, it has been announced by William A. Buzick, Jr., president.

The multi-million dollar plant, which will more than quadruple the size of Shasta's present facility in Los Angeles, is being built by Associated Construction & Engineering Co., of South San Francisco, under the direction of D. S. Pavloff, project manager.

Located in the Southern Pacific Railroad development, at the intersection of Artesia Boulevard and Shasta Way, in La Mirada, the plant will have 144,000 square feet of floor space, compared to the 35,000 square feet in the company's existing quarters. It provides for over 4,000 square feet of office space, plus a large shipping area and spur track facilities.

TWO PRODUCTION lines with an output of a million cans a day will be utilized for processing Shasta's full line of 12-ounce regular and low-calorie carbonated beverages.

In addition, production facilities are being provided for Shasta's 46-ounce non-carbonated fruit drinks, as well as a bottling line for Shasta's no-return bottles.

Shasta's bottled drinks include carbonated flavors and mixers, both sugar-sweetened and low calorie. Provision is being made for a third soft-drink canning line to be added later.

Buzick stated: "We are establishing our new La Mirada plant in order to meet the greatly stepped-up demands for beverages which have resulted from Southern California's exploding population, Shasta's growing share of the soft drink market, and the increased retailer and consumer preference for soft drinks in disposable, no-deposit containers."

BUZICK POINTED out that canned beverages now account for 25% of the Southern California soft drink market and are increasing rapidly in consumer and retailer acceptance. "Shasta's growth in this market," he points out, "has been increasing at an even faster rate than canned soft drinks generally, and we expect this growth to continue." Shasta was one of the pioneers in the canned soft drink field, which has now become one of the most rapidly growing markets for the U. S. can manufacturing industry.

Shasta's new plant will be under the management of John Koch, vice president of Shasta Beverages and manager of the company's Southern California district.

include Stary Gange of Los Angeles, utility executive and well known speaker and raconteur; Mayor Wade, and Samuel Lackman, attorney and long time director and officer of the association. Lackman will outline "Highlights Of 40 Years," in the association's history.

Since it was created 40 years ago the association has grown from a handful of owners to some 4,000 apartment owners and operators.

"The apartment industry in the Long Beach area and throughout the nation is a huge, major business, and this is especially true in Long Beach," President Berg said. "There are multi-millions of dollars invested in apartment buildings here and paying a great share of property taxes."

"THE association, through the years, has been instrumental in improving operating methods for apartment owners and operators and for bringing better owner-tenant relations."

"Likewise, during its existence, the organization has been instrumental in helping develop many proposals and programs of great benefit to

"During the past 40 years the apartment business here has grown tremendously and now a new era in apartment living is bringing hundreds of apartments new-in-concept and design to this region," the association president said.

"MANY ARE more than the four unit structures and similar apartments of yesterday, with numerous spectacular, high-rise, hundreds-of-units, handsome buildings. All embody everything new to make living in the wonderful Long Beach area, easy, comfortable and exciting."

"And at the same time, far-sighted owners of older apartments have kept pace by modernizing and upgrading their buildings, inside and out, and hundreds are now modernized completely," he added.

Berg said a vigorous association program for 1965 and the years ahead is scheduled, including an intensive, continuing campaign to enlist all available apartment owners and operators in the Long Beach area as member.

"Every apartment owner in our area needs to be a member of the organization to help make it ever stronger, more vigorous and effective in working for good government and good business practices in the industry."

Realtors Move to Overcome California Housing Problems

The annual meeting of the retiring and incoming regional vice presidents of the California Real Estate Association held recently in Los Angeles was the scene of the unveiling of a plan Realtors have to overcome California housing problems.

The meeting was presided over by the association's president, Art S. Leitch of San Diego, and assisted by David N. Robinson of Berkeley, 1965 president-elect.

The association, comprised of some 45,000 members representing 173 real estate boards, is administered through a board of directors of nearly 1,000, elected from throughout the state. To maintain a grass roots communications with the directors and members, the association annually elects 31 vice presidents representing the various statewide geographical areas.

LEITCH REMINDED the vice presidents, that the association had organized more than a year ago an Equal Rights Committee. The board of directors, Leitch said, subscribed sometime ago to the policy that a favorable public attitude for the acquisition of housing could best be accomplished through leadership, example, education and mutual cooperation between the real estate industry and the public.

The committee was presented in their opportunity to move ahead, Leitch told the vice presidents, "because we felt the Rumford Forced Housing Act passed by last year's legislature was an erosion of the rights of all people. Therefore, in supporting a constitutional amendment to retain the right of the people to determine to whom they wish to rent, sell or lease, our opponents made every effort to declare our conscientious efforts to launch an educational program to be a vehicle against the Rumford Act."

"THIS WAS NOT TRUE. To protect the efforts of this committee, it was necessary that we not launch the educational program, advocated to the governor's office during the legislative session preceding the passage of the Rumford Act, until after the voters had voiced their expression on Proposition 13. "It has been the intention," Leitch added, "to launch this program at the earliest possible date."

He said several speakers on the program presented a Code of Practices to the regional vice presidents, who were instructed to carry the message to the various communities through the state with the request that realty boards begin immediate implementation of the plan, adapting it to local conditions.

THE FOLLOWING, Leitch said, was submitted as a suggested Code of Practices for member boards of the California Real Estate Association:

1. It is the responsibility of a Realtor to offer equal service to all clients without regard to race, color, religion, or national origin in the sale, purchase, exchange, rental, or lease of real property.

a. A Realtor should stand ready to show property to any member of any racial, creedal, or ethnic group.

b. A Realtor has a legal and ethical responsibility to receive all offers and to communicate them to the property owner. The Realtor being but an agent, the right of decision must be with the property owner.

c. A Realtor should exert his best efforts to conclude the transaction.

2. Realtors, individually and collectively, in performing their agency functions have no right or responsibility to determine the racial, creedal, or ethnic composition of any neighborhood or any part thereof.

a. A Realtor shall not advise property owners to incorporate a listing of property an exclusion of sale to any such group. b. A Realtor may take a listing which insists upon such exclusions, but only if it is lawfully done at the property owner's instance without any influence whatsoever by the agent.

3. ANY ATTEMPT by a Realtor to solicit or procure the sale or other disposition in residential areas by conduct intended to implant fears in property owner's based upon the actual or anticipated introduction of a minority group into an area shall subject the Realtor to disciplinary action. Any technique that induces panic selling is a violation of ethics and must be strongly condemned.

4. Each Realtor should feel completely free to enter into a broker-client relationship with persons of any race, creed, or ethnic group.

a. Any conduct inhibiting said relationship is a specific violation of the rules and regulations of the board, and shall subject the violating Realtor to disciplinary action.

DAVID N. ROBINSON of Berkeley, president-elect of the statewide association, informed the vice presidents that it was their duty in this coming year to respect the mandate of the people and to work in their respective communities to overcome housing inequities. He pledged his full support to the plan unveiled by CREA president Leitch.

'PICTURE STORY' IN WINDOW

Buffums' Windows Feature Animated Christmas Story

Children and grown-ups alike have noses pressed to Buffums' windows on Pine Avenue at Broadway these days, watching the animated antics of "Merry Christmas" and her little friends.

Merry Christmas is a typical little-girl doll, and she's seen in three sequences as she goes a-visiting.

First, at the home of her little playmate Carol, who has a fabulous Chinchilla Cat, and coincidentally, many items around her beginning with the letter C! A Cuckoo Clock with a pop-out cuckoo, a calico covered chest that opens to reveal a clown with clapping cymbals, a canary in a cage, and a host of other C's!

THEN Merry Christmas pays a visit to Santa, who takes off his beard and appears as Merry's little friend Stephen.

In this room too, spectators will be on the lookout for things beginning with the letter S... a sailor doll, a school clock, a shadow box with a soldier collection, and so on!

Merry's third stop is to see her musical friend Hope, who lets Merry play her harp, while Hope herself stands on a hassock, hammer in hand, and nails a holly wreath to the wall. Herman, Hope's hound dog, watches the hutch and wags his tail as a drawer opens and a toy hippo hops up and will find Santa's helpers.

Merry Christmas is the Yuletide mannequin used in other Buffums' windows and throughout the store, and children who come in to say "Hello" to Santa, dressed in Merry Christmas costumes!

Now within two months of completion is this new 96,000-square-foot office building addition to the Hawthorne headquarters plant of Mattel, Inc. The new building, situated at the front of the plant, facing Rosecrans Avenue, is part of an expansion program that has resulted in construction of nearly 700,000 square feet of new Mattel production and office facilities throughout the United States and Canada within the past year and a half. The three-story glass and concrete structure will house the firm's Research and Design Department and the employee cafeteria. Mattel, Inc., is the world's largest manufacturer of toys.

All-adult Fernhill in Huntington Beach offers planned development living adjacent to Meadowlark Golf and Country Club. Two and three-bedroom homes start at $22,400. Wide choice of exteriors includes this "Nice" styling.

Bicycle Safety Drive by VFW

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Veterans of Foreign Wars have distributed enough reflective tape strips for more than five million bicycles as part of a Lite-A-Bike program designed to promote bicycle safety.

The strips of reflective tape, visible at night from as far as 1,500 feet, are made available free to schools or civic groups participating in the VFW program.

Fernhill Features Golf Among Assets

All-adult Fernhill in Huntington Beach is a "golfer's paradise" according to Frank McFarland of McFarland and Mattocks, sales agents. The new planned development adjoins Meadowlark Golf and Country Club in Huntington Beach, and is five minutes from Huntington Beach Country Club. Both are public courses open year-round.

Due to the opening of a new link in the San Diego Freeway, Fernhill is now only 20 minutes from downtown Long Beach.

"The attractive assets of Fernhill are its proximity to Meadowlark Golf Club and the ocean, the smog-free climate and Fernhill's accessibility to major commercial centers," McFarland said.

The tract offers adult living with a difference. Designed for business couples, couples whose children have grown and left home and childless couples, Fernhill is a planned development with all exterior maintenance handled by professionals.

FERNHILL features all-electric Gold Medallion kitchens with premium built-ins by a nationally known manufacturer. Dishwasher is included, too.

Two and 3 bedroom, 2 bath models are offered at Fernhill from $22,400 to $25,000. Financing is available from 5% down.

To reach Fernhill, visitors take the San Diego Freeway to Bolsa Chica Road, and drive south on Bolsa Chica to Warner, then left to Fernhill. Models are open daily.

New Bank to Open in Hollywood

Hollywood National Bank has announced plans for its grand opening Dec. 14-15-16, launching the entertainment capital's only independent national bank with three days of special events.

Celebrities and government officials will take part in ceremonies at 9:45 a.m., Monday, Dec. 14, formally opening the doors of the new financial institution at 6225 Hollywood Blvd.

The 10,000-square-foot bank quarters on the northwest corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Argyle Avenue have been rebuilt, inside and out. J. Norman Jones is president. The bank is owned by some 500 stockholders who live in the Hollywood area.

Good Exchange

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (UPI)—Faced with a coin shortage, a local bank offered to exchange new Kennedy half dollars for 49 pennies. The new 50-cent pieces are not easily found in circulation in some areas and one local collector asked $1 for them.

Rossmoor Townhouses Equity Values Noted

In the early 1950's, a veteran of World War II was able to buy a home with a small down payment and by 1960 discover that his property had doubled in value.

With today's high cost of land, real estate experts have been predicting that the only type of housing which may possibly see a similar type of equity build up over the next period of years is in the realm of townhouses—particularly those within walking distance of urban conveniences and shopping facilities.

In this category of homes on the market today, Rossmoor Townhouses in the well-established community of Rossmoor stands out as an outstanding sub-community of in-town residences designed for carefree Southern California living.

THE LUXURY two, three and four-bedroom units priced from $19,950, provide a grant deed and full homeownership tax advantages. Better still, the Rossmoor resident has all the advantages of a home owner with none of the everyday maintenance worries, via a professional maintenance staff.

Luxury features to enhance each Rossmoor home include wall-to-wall nylon carpeting; two car garage; private concrete patio with provision for individual garden for the green thumbs; and a complete electric kitchen with built-in disposal, dishwasher, oven and range and combination washer-dryer.

Rossmoor Townhouses may be reached via the Long Beach and Harbor Freeways to the San Diego Freeway, south to Los Alamitos north exit; turn left five blocks on Los Alamitos to Rossmoor Center and models. The sales office is open daily, 10 a.m.-8 p.m.

Key Factors Drawing Buyers to Cinderella Home Selection

The three factors which seem to draw homebuyers to the Royal Cinderella Homes development in Yorba Linda are quality of construction, outstanding location and realistic prices.

According to sales agent Gordon Tripp, these have been the motivating factors to the development's success. He said, "When the family has selected the area, they then study the quality of the home, the reputation of the builder and the price range."

"After comparing," he said, "they select Cinderella." Construction characteristics equal or surpass many homes in the $60,000 to $75,000 price range. Royal Cinderella Homes are priced at $31,900 with 5% financing available.

SITUATED in the beautiful scenic hills of Yorba Linda, the luxury development offers the sophisticated home-buyer (the spaciousness and spectacular design which has won national acclaim.

According to Tripp, "We only have a handful of gorgeous homes left at a savings of $2,500."

Earnings for the third quarter after taxes increased to $20,114,264 from $15,179,724 a year ago, an increase of $4,934,540.

These net earnings were equivalent to 81 cents a share on each of 24,933,351 shares of common stock outstanding on Oct. 31 against 61 cents last year.

THIRD QUARTER sales amounted to $544,493,954 against $476,312,520 last year, an increase of $68,181,434.

Net earnings for the three quarters totaled $43,636,414, or $1.75 a share. This compares with net earnings for the nine months ended Oct. 31, 1983, of $33,079,607, or $1.33 a share, a hike of $10,556,807.

Variable 2nd Floor Plans Highlight Fairway Park

FIREPLACE CHOICE

Fairway Park homes have wood-burning masonry fireplaces in a living room corner, in a wall between two windows or free-standing near the entrance foyer. Some models have raised hearths or hearths which run the full length of one wall, and each has a built-in gas log lighter.

A choice of two plans for the second floor of the Outrigger model home has helped make it a popular attraction at Fairway Park in the East Long Beach area, reports H. C. Pease, marketing director for Robert H. Grant & Co., the builder-developer.

Situated over the living quarters, the second story is available either as a large recreation room with a third bath, or as two bedrooms, choice of 17 exterior stylings and storage closets, Pease noted. Three bedrooms and two baths are located on the main floor in one wing, with a living room, formal dining area, family room, breakfast room and kitchen in another wing next to the two-car garage.

OTHER THREE and four-bedroom Stardust Homes, in one and two-story models, have also been built in the new walled community. A provides a wide selection to meet varied tastes, Pease pointed out.

Priced from $24,250 on VA, FHA or conventional terms, every residence in Fairway Park is covered by a one-year warranty on workmanship and materials, provided by Robert H. Grant & Co., builders of more than 5,500 Stardust Homes during the last 10 years.

Special features of the dwellings include solid oak hardwood floors on raised concrete foundations, slate and terrazzo entries.

Five furnished models, open daily from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., are located opposite Los Alamitos Public Golf Course.

They may be reached by taking the Los Alamitos Boulevard off-ramp from the San Diego Freeway north to east to Moody Street, or by taking the Valley View Boulevard off-ramp from the Santa Ana Freeway south to Cerritos Avenue and turning west to Moody.

FAMILY ROOM

Typical floor plan at Sunshine Homes-Lakewood has comfortable family room separated from kitchen by breakfast bar. A built-in double door oven, counter-top range, range hood with light and fan, automatic dishwasher, disposer and pantry are also included in "wife-engineered" kitchens.

Sunshine - Lakewood Sales Move Rapidly Past 100 Units

One hundred homes have been sold in as many days at the planned development of Sunshine Homes - Lakewood, reports Wally Dalzell, community manager for S. V. Hunsaker & Sons, the builder-developer, a subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum Corp.

"When the community opened Sept. 1, there were 132 balanced power residences available," said Dalzell. "As of today, only 32 are left, and we have reservations on four of these."

Prime factor for the development's popularity, according to Dalzell, is its close-in location, 20 minutes from Los Angeles civic center and 10 minutes from downtown Long Beach. In addition, Lakewood shopping center is four blocks away and Bloomfield Park is three-quarters of a mile away on Pioneer Boulevard.

CHURCHES of most denominations are located within a three-mile radius of the community, and such industries as Douglas Aircraft, North American Aviation and Aerojet General are nearby, he noted.

Elementary, junior high and high schools are within walking distance. Sunshine Homes-Lakewood consists of one and two-story balanced power dwellings with three and four bedrooms and up to three baths. Five floor plans have 16 different exterior stylings.

COMPLETE front - yard landscaping, underground sprinkler system, rear-yard fencing, wall-to-wall nylon carpeting in a choice of nine colors, and living room traverse draperies are located at no extra cost.

Purchase prices begin at $22,995 on conventional terms, and the builder pays all closing costs and escrow fees.

Each residence carries a one-year warranty on materials and workmanship, provided by S. V. Hunsaker & Sons, one of the nation's largest residential builders.

Other Sunshine Home communities are located at Fountain Valley, Walnut, Covina, Chatsworth, Newhall and Camarillo.

Furnished models at Sunshine Homes-Lakewood are open daily from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and may be reached by taking the Pioneer Boulevard off-ramp south from the Santa Ana Freeway to Centralia Road, turning west to Gridley Road, north to Chadwell Street and west again to the community.

The California Real Estate Association will install officers for 1985 during a directors meeting in San Francisco Wednesday.

New president will be David N. Robinson of Berkeley, who will succeed Art S. Leitch of San Diego.

Committee and subcommittee meetings are scheduled for Thursday and Friday. The annual Officers' Training Program for board presidents and executive officers will be conducted Friday morning.

Track Star

CHICAGO (UPI)—Jointless track welded into virtually unlimited lengths is resulting in smoother train travel, less damage to the rolling stock and reduced maintenance costs for many U.S. railroads, reports Chemtron Corp.'s National Cylinder Gas division. It has introduced a German process here, said to be the best system of its kind in producing weld metal to match the steel of the rails being joined.

Custom Extras Key Factor in Premier Homes' Success

Hi-Jinks Party

Builders' Exchange of Long Beach will hold a Past Presidents' Hi-Jinks party the evening of Dec. 14 at the Lafayette Hotel. Manager Jack Horner of the local office said reservations must be in by Dec. 11. The evening will be dedicated to fun and entertainment, he said.

Custom-type extras included in Premier Homes' "4 Ways Better" sales formula have been a substantial factor in the success of the new Huntington Beach subdivision, according to Frank McFarland of McFarland & Matlocks, sales agents. The Premier package of custom extras includes a tiled, atrium-type entry, ceramic tile in kitchen and baths, wall paneling and complete landscaping and fencing. McFarland said that complete roof guttering and Premier Homes' "Premium Area"—a fully-finished room with plumbing roughed in for a third bath—has held special appeal for buyers.

EMPHASIZING that each family had a highly individual set of needs, McFarland said the "Premium Area" has been included in Premier Homes' designs to give the homeowner flexibility in meeting these needs. The inclusion of complete roof guttering in the Premier Homes purchase price had met with favorable response from second or third time homebuyers, McFarland said. The other three ways in which Premier Homes are held to be "4 Ways Better" are FHA-guaranteed quality construction, "Total Convenience" kitchens, and "below-market" pricing. Premier's price structure was settled only after a detailed survey of the Huntington Beach-Fountain Valley home market.

Premier Homes are offered in 3 and 4 bedroom models, all with 2 baths, in a price range starting at $23,400. FHA minimum down and VA no down financing are available, and there are no second trust deeds. McFarland termed the pricing and financing arrangements "extremely competitive." Situated off Warner Avenue just a mile east of Bolsa Chica Road, Premier Homes are 35 minutes drive from downtown Los Angeles. Visitors take the San Diego Freeway to Bolsa Chica Road and drive south on Bolsa Chica to Warner, then turn east on Warner to Premier Homes.

Crafted Exteriors Featured

A wide selection of custom-crafted exteriors is an important factor attracting home buyers who want a feeling of individuality. This is the opinion of Alexander Graham, sales manager of Ballerina Homes.

"The problem of achieving individuality and at the same time keeping costs within buyers' budgets," Graham said, "was solved by the artistic blending of stone and sculptured wood."

Among the 13 distinctive exteriors is the 3 bedroom "Overture" model, its cozy seclusion enhanced by a walled garden and gate at entry way.

California architecture is evident in "The Sugar Plum" model, one of the five models in the 2 story Firebird series, combining the feeling of spaciousness with a touch of the rustic. Upstairs may serve as an extra bedroom, a game room, or a guest room.

INTERIOR features in all homes include planned traffic patterns to help in upkeep, spaciousness combined with realistic planning to assure maximum utilization of space, and extra room added by breakfast and dining areas, pantries, and laundry rooms.

The large bedrooms have generous wardrobe closets, and master suites include a dressing room and private bath.

Kitchens are completely furnished with Roper's top-of-the-line "Charm" appliances.

The 64 home community, a development of Oka Brothers and Hudson Buchanan, were designed by L. C. Major. Ballerina Homes are located on Bushard Street, off Brookhurst, on Huntington Beach.

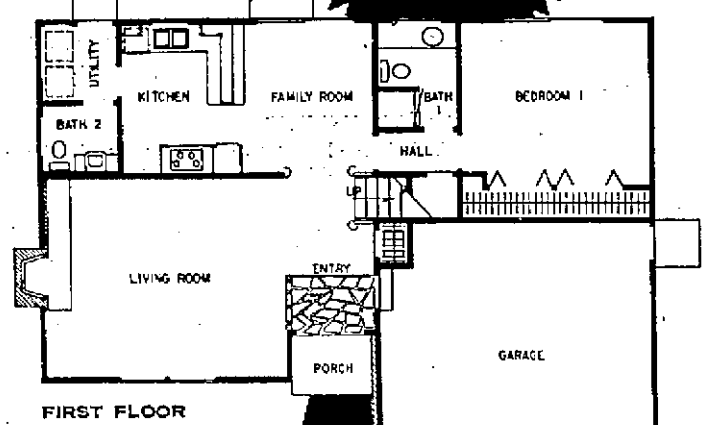

Owens Glass Gives Early Yule Gifts

Owens-Illinois Glass Co., with 11 plants in California, gave retired employees an early Christmas present Saturday by announcing most of its 2,800 retirees will receive pension increases, effective Dec. 1.

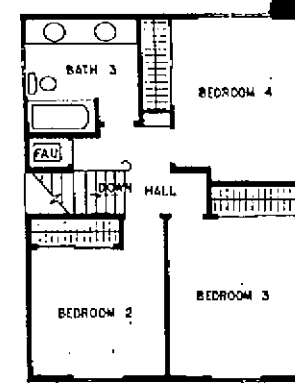

The increases are the result of changes the company is voluntarily making for retired employees in both its service retirement plan for salaried and hourly employees and its contributory retirement plan for salaried employees. The amount of individual increases will vary in accordance with a number of factors, including length of credited service and time of retirement.

"The increased pensions in effect will give retired employees the benefit of improvements in our pension plans previously made for employees still on the payroll," R. H. Mulford, president of Owens-Illinois said.

Bob Grant's plans for Christmas are the kind that win awards!

Showcase Homes Offer Variety in Layouts, Features, Elevation

Enjoy your holidays in a Showcase Home, says developer William Krueger. While the development is 85% sold out there are still many elevations and floor plans available to interested homebuyers.

They may select homes with growing rooms that enable expansion up to six bedrooms and three bathrooms; and they may choose from 15 elevations.

The new Showcase series also offers choice of gas or electric kitchens, draperies, carpeting, decor and other features that increase the individuality of each home.

IN THE NEW SERIES, outstanding features include underground utilities, front yard landscaping with sprinklers, exteriors enhanced with stone and used brick, slate entry halls, preparation of each home for air conditioning, back yard, fencing, wall to wall carpeting, oversized storage spaces, forced air heat with summer ventilation systems and architecturally de-

SPACIOUSNESS

This is the keynote to living in the Showcase Homes in Anaheim. Spaciousness in the kitchen is reflected in the scene above. Showcase Homes, now over 85% sold out, still have a wide variety of floor plans (over 2,000 square feet) and elevations.

McFarland and Matlocks, sales agents, reported that 18 homes were sold before the preview, because of the success of other Showcase Homes developments in Orange County.

The second Showcase Series, on Hazard Street, near Bolsa Avenue, sold out a few months ago and created the interest in the new series that resulted in new sales.

Furnished models are open daily for inspection.

Custom Design El Dorado Feature

PLENTY OF ROOM

This beautiful two-story home in El Dorado Park Estates, Long Beach, has four bedrooms upstairs and one downstairs that can be used for den or maid's room. There are 35 exteriors available.

In-built beauty in construction and design is an integral part of El Dorado Park Estates, according to a spokesman for S & S Construction Co., builders.

No unsightly power lines exist to mar the community's natural beauty, and 35 different exteriors provide a custom-design look in the neighborhood, the spokesman said. Even further diversity in profile is achieved in the varying heights of the split-levels, one-story and two-story homes.

Plan No. 202 a two-story five bedroom model has proven particularly popular for those with large families. Four bedrooms fill the upstairs, three of them serviced by a full bathroom. The master bedroom has a fireplace, dressing room, and its own private bath.

The fifth bedroom downstairs, can be used as a den or maid's room. Other El Dorado models have three and four bedrooms.

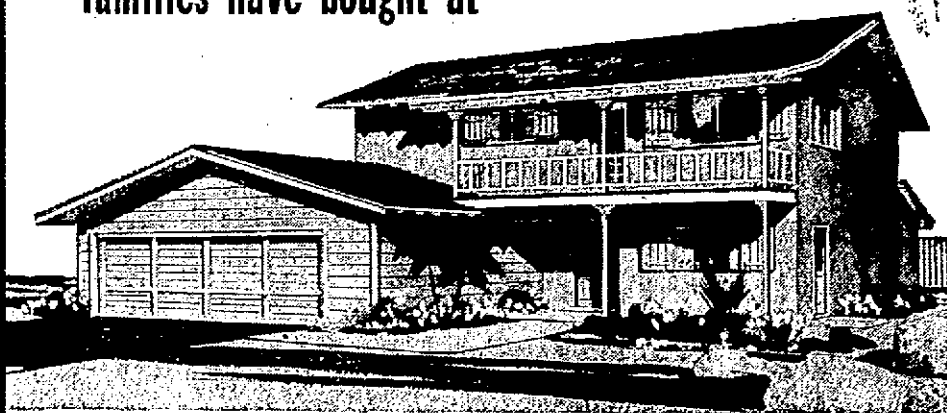

EL DORADO'S bathrooms offer genuine marble-topped pullman lavatories, American Standard plumbing fixtures with a full-size cast-iron contour tub, and Hermosa tiled walls over the showers and tubs.

neer and Norwalk Bldgs., can be reached from the Bellflower turnoff of the San Diego Freeway, then east on

She Has the World in Her Backyard

ADOPTION of two Aleut boys, a French girl—and a yardful of pets—has added new meaning to the lives of Mrs. Jack Lewis (above) and her husband.

THREE ON A SWING . . . David and Cathy, foreground, and brother Ray, pump away in backyard of Jack Lewis home in Stanton.

Two little Eskimos and a French Miss add up to a swinging trio at the Jack Lewis home in Stanton.

The three, who share one backyard swing set, are the adopted offspring of this couple, who lost their own son eight years ago.

They include: Cathy, 5, part French, part German—a perpetual skipper with a flip of dark hair; David, 6, the scholar, half Aleut, half German—a first grade whiz at arithmetic; and his brother, Ray, 4, a robust charmer with an outgoing grin.

"The doctor tells me I'm rearing a couple of half backs," says Mrs. Lewis of her north-of-the-border boys. "I'm not surprised. Aleuts, descendants of the Tartars, are big, tall and good looking."

"Watching them and Cathy develop is fascinating. I look forward to each new day."

MRS. LEWIS and her husband haven't always had reason for such a bright outlook.

Eight years ago they were on the verge of collapse; the edge of bankruptcy.

Their son, Edmond, 6½, was found to have a brain tumor. Operated on, he never regained consciousness but died the following year—a few weeks before Christmas.

"Jack and I were completely shattered. But somehow we knew we had to keep going."

To "keep going," they decided to offer their home to a hard-to-place child—perhaps an older boy or girl of mixed parentage.

"We signed with the Children's Home Society and prepared for a long wait."

THERE WAS no wait.

Newborn David came to them from a totally unexpected source. He was earmarked for adoption by another couple, then, (when that fell through) was slated to be picked up by welfare.

Says Mrs. Lewis, "The circumstances that finally brought him to us still give me a spine-tingling sense of thrill. It seemed as though he were meant for us."

"All down the line people told of the strong feelings they had about him—feelings that involved delaying his transfer for a day here, a day there—time that allowed us the chance to have him."

The adoptions of Cathy and Ray followed similar patterns. Cathy came as an early Christmas gift the next year; Ray joined his brother the following November.

BESIDES CARING for the chosen three, the Lewises have been foster parents 16 times over in the past seven years.

And, as if this weren't enough, they also are involved in kindergarten work at St. Paul's Church; Mrs. Lewis is a board member of a Fellowship Home for girls; is treasurer of Stanton's Women's Club, president of its Chamber's Women's Division; keeps five sets of books and paints to the tune of a current one-man show.

Jack holds two jobs—a bakery route from 5 a.m. to 4 p.m.; a position in a collection department, 5 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

"All our activities are aimed in one direction," explains Mrs. Lewis. "We want a better society for the young—we worry about the unhealthy trends we observe around us—trends that lead to delinquency."

Say "Feliz Navidad"

ROMANTIC Mexico can be wrapped-up and put under the Christmas tree this year. It's all part of "Operation Amigos."

Looking for an off-beat gift for the person at the top of your Christmas list?

Children's Dental Foundation has come up with a dandy.

Say they, "What could be more off-beat, and exciting, than finding tickets for an off-the-beaten-track tour through Mexico under the Christmas tree?"

With this in mind, they're offering "Operation Amigos" (April 22 through May 2), a tour that will cover Mexico City, Chula, Oaxaca, Mitla) Tlacolula and Monte Alban.

First, there will be a gay champagne party, then a sleek jet will speed the traveler on the way. Following two nights at the luxurious El Presidente Hotel in Mexico City, the tour will head by air to Cholula, the city of 365 churches.

Next on the agenda—a visit to Oaxaca, a city famed for its market place; then travel to Mitla, the burial place of the Zapotec Kings and a day at the 15th century ruins at Monte Alban.

Unlike most "turistas," tour members will meet native people and even will be invited for lunch in a home in the El Pedregal Section of Mexico City.

Mrs. Sidney Exley, endowment chairman, Children's Dental Foundation, 5490 The Toledo, is in charge of reservations.

Included in the $425 cost of the trip—hotel rooms, the majority of meals, service and tips; entrance fees to places of interest; an English speaking guide and air conditioned bus travel.

For Yule . . . a Festival of Yore

An old-fashioned Christmas—with international overtones—is theme of Downtown Opt-Mrs. 13th Annual Holiday Festival.

The event, Tuesday noon in International Ballroom, Lafayette Hotel, will include a fashion show-luncheon (California designs and furs from Lockwoods), with the Phil Horton Trio providing background music.

The international touch? Globetrotting members of the club will present guests with gifts they personally selected while touring such countries as England, Italy, Japan, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

As in years before, 12 persons attending will be awarded gift-laden Christmas trees. These trees, donated by local merchants, will be on display in the French Room preceding the luncheon.

Money from the Festival will be donated to Optimist Boys Home, Long Beach Cancer Service Fund, YWCA Camperships and Salvation Army Christmas Fund.

The fest is being directed by Mmes. William Harlow and Robert Waldron with Mmes. Eric Bollin and Harry Hose in charge of decor and Mrs. Franklin Steinko to be mistress of ceremonies.

Holiday Race Begins on A Fast Track

By Jola Masterson
I, P-T Women's Editor

IT'S OFFICIAL—the holiday Christmas season is off and sparkling and if, like myself, you haven't bought gift one (or even made out a shopping list, for that matter) that's enough to give you the Dec. 25th fidgets.

The starting flag to begin the Yule race was waved by Rick Rackers, who traditionally begin the holidays with their Winter Wonderland Ball, an event of Saturday in International Ballroom of the Lafayette Hotel. Close to 700, in the glad rags of the glad season, were there to admire each other and the bedazzling decorations. Pictured, below with a minuscule number of the dozens of handcrafted ballroom adornments are Barbara (Mrs. Tim) Spangler, left, decor chairman, and her co-chairman, Pat (Mrs. Donald) Ewing, who were work session bosses.

Did they add magic ingredient—the mistletoe?

The two are putting finishing touches on white velvet kissing rings, bound with silver beads which topped three foot gold fountains. All were hung from the ceiling to sway and shimmer like the aurora borealis. It required a huge transport van to ship the delicate, tall decorations to the ballroom.

Silver manzanita trees, aglow with lights, were used at entry and around the bandstand. Everybody in RR worked like Trojans (er, Beavers?) to make the dreamy party scene reality.

NOW THAT the time of year has come when door bells don't ring, they jingle, and party dates are turning Noellish, Bev and Dick Matlock will play Santa to friends, giving them a cocktail buffet party gift Saturday. Feverishly, hostess Bev is trying to work herself into a December mood (she and Dick just recently returned from a langorous vacation in Hawaii). At my note taking she didn't know what she'd use to give the house the holiday look—but, knowing her, by Saturday it will have it—and gaily.

Intermingling with guests as they assist the host and hostess will be Marcia and Ty Ellis, "Genie" and Lyle Murphy, Waula and Seibert Pearson, Gennie and Rex Welch, Margaret and Bob Sully, Dixie and Noble Millie, Sue and Art Buell and Bea and Jack Matlock.

ANOTHER holiday-inspired, totally for fun affair, will be the cocktail buffet Marilyn and Jim Crocker will give for neighborhood friends next Friday in their Park Estates home.

They're having their patio enclosed and if it is all decked out in its new glass finery party can serve as initiation. If rooms seams aren't quite all stitched up, well there's still ample space for festivity in the "old" part.

IF, AS the old saying goes, variety is the spice of life, then Betsy and George Taubman are certainly living in a world of zesty change—and not so much on cloves as in clover. They flew to New Orleans for Thanksgiving Day, on to Charleston, W. Virginia, to attend the debut of her niece and namesake, Elizabeth Wilson Clare, and parties pursuant thereof.

Then, in this order, they are (or will be) vacationing in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Jamaica (here they'll be chauffeured from Kingston to Montego Bay with stops at colorful places en route.)

Finally they'll go to the Isle de Pinos just off Cuba, to a name dropper club and resort owned by Nelson Rockefeller, so exclusive that I don't know the name. So I can't drop it. They'll be home in mid-December.

WHEREVER there was a snowy hill it was dotted with skiers over long last weekend. Accounting for four of those dots at Badger Pass (on the Fresno side of Yosemite) were Borgny and Woodrow Baird, daughter, Brynn, 15, and son, Marshall, 12. They stayed at Swiss Melody Inn (run by a Swiss couple, which figures); place features great home-cooked food they said. Snow conditions (at that time) were great.

CALLING to find out when they'd leave, discovered Helen and Bob Clampett had already up and done went. Bob flew away first to that city that stutters, Schenectady, N.Y., and Helen, leaving a little later, routed herself through Seattle to visit relatives. Bob will be in a training program for General Electric for about a year; hopes when he's assigned it will be in Southern California.

IT'S THE kind of a house that only the kind of a guy Bill Boyd is would immediately fall in love with and buy. That, in essence, was wife, Posie's, gentle joke at her husband—but between the words you could tell she's as enamored of it as he is.

Their new home is on Strawberry Point in Mill Valley across the Golden Gate Bridge from San Francisco. With views that won't quit of Bay and city, it is split level with decking all around to provide scenic vantage points.

They'll move into it in January. In the meantime, Bill (who is now administrative vice president of the Greater San Francisco Chamber of Commerce) has been a working commuter between there and home Posie and baby, Becky, still occupy here.

THAT WAS the weekend that was for Lee and Jack Stanley. They planned to have a great last long one in the mountains. Wednesday night, however, Jack announced business would have to keep them here. Bright ray shone when they were given tickets for the USC-Notre Dame game—on the 50 yard line in the guest section and tickets for the alum dance that night. Also had fun party plans for Sunday. Friday Jack came home from office in such pain Lee whisked him to the hospital for treatment. In her rush, she backed her car ('64) into wall and dented fender. Sunday (Jack much better by then but still under wraps at Community) she decided to take the younguns to church and, in settling them in car, left purse on fender and it rattled off somewhere en route. And then came Monday, which just happened to be Lee's birthday. Like I said, that was the weekend that was.

It got better. An honest soul found the purse and returned it and Jack was able to go home.

WHEN "Jo" and Dr. Bob Gumbiner and their four children went to the mountains last weekend, it wasn't just a family outing, it marked a family milestone. On a lot they bought about 10 years ago in the Moon Ridge area out of Big Bear they watched, even helped a little, as the stakes were placed for an A-frame cabin they're having built. Weather permitting, this dream about to come true could be finished as early as February. Then, let it snow so they can ski.

TWO BIG busses will be eased into position in front of the 271 Argonne Ave. home of Debby and Dr. Charles Fabish this morning. To relieve the curiosity of neighbors, the scoop is the Fabishes have invited 80 friends for brunch after which they'll board those busses to be buzzed into Hollywood for a matinee of "My Fair Lady."

And Chuck insists he'll personally scramble every egg needed despite the fact that he'll be up at 4 a.m. to help, as usual, his son deliver the I, P-T.

WHEN YOUR DAD is a Colonel in the Army and he's here from Washington, D.C., on an official Army inspection tour and he's going to be a houseguest in your home for the first time since you were married over a year ago—well, polish that brass and scrub that floor.

Actually, I don't think Col. Marion C. Dorney will worry too much about running a white glove on any window sill at the home of daughter and son-in-law, Nancy and Dan Hall, during his stay with them from last Friday through tomorrow. Even if he does, Nancy's housekeeping will pass muster because she put it in—you'll pardon the expression—ship shape order.

BRUSHING ASIDE the tinsel, four hostesses chose to start December off with an exotic Balinese themed party—a brunch at League House, with its Oriental atmosphere—Wednesday. In authentic costumes from Indonesia, Ann (Mrs. Sid) Exley, Rita (Mrs. Mark) Mardel, Betty (Mrs. Homer) Grant and Dorothy (Mrs. William) Ellery greeted guests. Three of the four, from left below, Rita, Betty and Dorothy, set the scene with an extra special conversation piece Rita brought back with her from Indonesia (where she and Mark lived for a year), a beautiful wood carving of a Bali maiden.

Although they sent invitations with the charm of the Near East which stated welcome in graceful, unfamiliar words, selamat datang, wore costumes and decorated handsomely, they still reverted to good, old Americana for entertainment. Everyone played bridge.

Selamat Datang they said—meaning welcome!

Take Solemn Church Vows

Baker-Strickler

Immediate family members gathered Friday evening at First Baptist Church to witness the marriage ceremony uniting Barbara J. Strickler and Richard E. Baker of Camp Pendleton.

Attending the couple were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Minnis. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Maxwell, 390 Wisconsin Ave., the bride wore a street length white lace sheath with a seed pearl tiara holding her shoulder length veil. Her flowers were white carnations.

The newlyweds will reside in Long Beach on return from a Laguna Beach honeymoon trip.

Mrs. Baker was graduated from Wilson High School and attended Long Beach City College. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Aldrich of Springfield, Ohio.

Smith-Dooley

Lonnie-Jean Dooley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dooley, 149 Corinthian Walk, became the bride of Dennis LeRoy Smith in a nuptial ceremony Saturday witnessed by 250 guests.

Escorted to the altar of North Long Beach Christian Church by her father, the bride wore a gown of peau de soie with chapel length train. Seed pearl and appliqued lace adorned her dress. She carried white roses and stephanotis with lilies of the valley.

Molly Turner was maid of honor and Nancy Christensen, Christine Matthews, Glenda Smith and Cindy Murray were bridesmaids.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Smith, 1625 E. Plymouth St., asked his brother, Jerry Smith, to serve as best man. Ushers were Jim Dooley, brother of the bride, Rick Kurthy and Barry Murray.

Residence in Long Beach will follow a three-week honeymoon trip to Lake Tahoe and San Francisco. Both young persons studied at Long Beach high schools, she at Wilson and he at Jordan.

Forst-Brewsaugh

Now honeymooning at Lake Arrowhead following their marriage Friday evening in First Presbyterian Church of Lakewood are Mr. and Mrs. Terry Alan Forst.

The former Diana Lee Brewsaugh, the bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Brewsaugh of San Clemente. She chose for her vows a gown of Chantilly lace over white satin trimmed in crystals and pearls. A crown of crystals and pearls held her veil and she carried a cascade of carnations and stephanotis.

Preceding her to the altar were Mrs. Kenneth Southworth, matron of honor, Mrs. David Milam, Vicki Clune and Beverly Brewsaugh. Attendants for the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Holloway, Lakewood, were Michael Forst, best man, Edward Todd, Jeffrey Thornton, Daniel King, Kenneth Southworth and Tom Burch, ushers.

Both young persons were graduated from Lakewood High School. He also attended Long Beach City College.

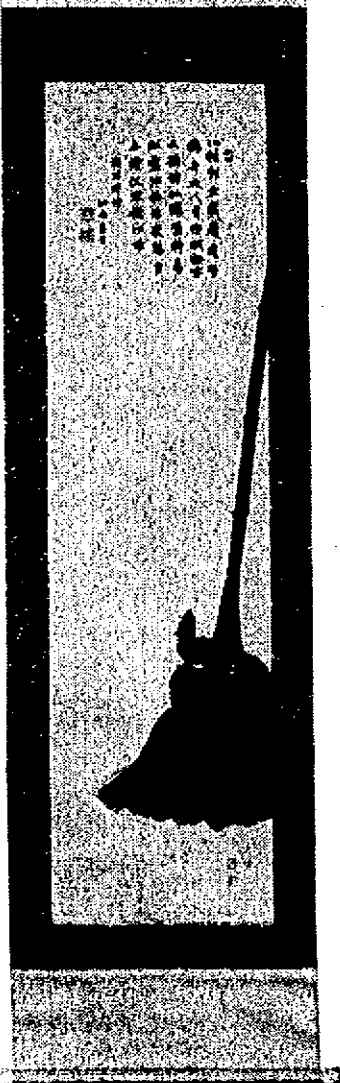

Jewelry Topic for League Meet

A Christmas buffet luncheon for Women's Architectural League, Southern California Chapter, will place at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday in the Los Angeles home of Mr. and Mrs. Burnett C. Turner, 3730 Amesbury Road.

Patrick Dennis Sieler, artist-designer, will display examples of unique and individually designed jewelry. Election of officers will take place during the business session.

Reception to Honor Mr., Mrs. H. M. Baker

Mrs. Vincent W. Jones and Mrs. Charles F. Shaw have invited 250 guests to a reception this afternoon honoring their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Baker, on their golden wedding anniversary. The event will be given in the Shaw home, 1857 Ashbrook Ave.

Hostesses will include three of the Bakers' four granddaughters, Mrs. Samuel Kelly, Mrs. Richard Crain and Miss Jeanna Jones, and two nieces, Mrs. Russell Fewell and Mrs. Rex Edmonson.

Mrs. Baker, the former Mary Alice Carter, was born in Manteca and Mr. Baker was born in Turlock.

AT THE TIME of their marriage, Dec. 21, 1914, in Stockton, both were teachers and were graduates of Western Teachers Normal School. Mrs. Baker resigned from teaching to devote the next 50 years to homemaking. Mr. Baker took graduate work at the University of California at Santa Barbara, San Jose State Teachers College and Stanford University. He continued his career as teacher and principal in San Joaquin Valley schools and for 10 years was district superintendent of the Beardsley schools in Kern County. After retiring from school administration, he became chief clerk for Petrolane Gas Service, Inc., in Corcoran.

MR. AND MRS. BAKER have made their home in Long Beach for the past six years and are active members of Lakewood Methodist Church. He is affiliated with the Masons and is promoter of a chess by mail activity in the Western states.

Junior Programs to Present 'Amahl'

"Amahl and the Night Visitors," a Christmas opera composed by Gian-Carlo Menotti, will be presented by Junior Programs of Long Beach Saturday at 10 a.m. and noon at Long Beach City College Auditorium.

The UCLA Opera Workshop production will have more than 40 performers, with Natalie Limonick, musical director; William Vorenberg, stage director; Archie Sharp, set and costume design, and Claudia Hood, choreography.

The opera, inspired by the painting "Adoration of the Magi" by Bosch, tells the story of the Three Kings, who in search for the Child, ask for lodging for the night at the cottage of the little lame boy, Amahl, and his mother.

A few single performance tickets will be available at the box office.

Shhh--They're Keeping a Silver Secret

Women CAN keep a secret, despite men's claims to the contrary.

Dramatizing this point are (from left) Assistance League provisionals Mmes. Neal D. Williams, Logan M. Fleming, Charles A. Chandler and Floyd H. Todd. They are among the 20 league provisionals who have carefully guarded their secret for months.

Although it is no secret that Assistance League will stage its annual Silver Ball at the Petroleum Club Saturday evening, it is not known publicly what the decorations will be.

Deciding on the decor for the colorful Christmas event is a project assigned each year to the league provisionals. They met and made their plans early in June but, in keeping with past practice, are not announcing what the decisions were.

"We can only say that the setting will be beautiful and truly fitting for the holiday season," said Mrs. Harry Fulton, Silver Ball chairman.

In the receiving line will be Assistance League president, Mrs. James V. Keipp, with Dr. Keipp, and Messrs. and Mmes. Fulton and David N. Eagle-son. Also receiving will be the provisionals and their husbands, Messrs. and Mmes. Don Barden, Williams, Douglas B. Benwell, G. E. Wilcox, Gene Bishop, John S. Watkins, Chandler, Louis G. Visscher, C. Roy Conn, Harvey G. Doody, Cecil Evans, Fleming, J. S. Jacobs, Joseph K. Kellogg, Edward C. Losch, Max E. Nicols, Burt K. Marter, Mrs. Edison J. Demler, and Drs. and Mmes. Samuel A. Reese and Todd.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

No, Mother, You Cannot

DEAR ABBY: My daughter came crying to me that her husband mistreated her, so I did what my mother would do—I told her to leave him. She left him and then she had a nervous breakdown. Then I was blamed and told I shouldn't have "interfered" in my daughter's marriage.

She now goes to a "doctor" and pays him $25 an hour. They sit around and talk about sex for an hour and close with a prayer. (I wonder what they are praying for?) I asked her if he was a medical doctor and she said, "I don't know and I don't care if he never got past the fifth grade, he is wonderful and he is helping me." Is there anything I can do to save my daughter from this quack?—UPSET

ABBY

DEAR UPSET: If your daughter doesn't care about her "doctor's" credentials, there is nothing you can do to save her. You must remember that your daughter has been ill, and the chances are she is not yet fully recovered, so don't undermine her confidence in her "therapist" unless you check him out and find that he is indeed a "quack."

CONFIDENTIAL TO ALL TEEN-AGERS: J. Edgar Hoover, the Director of the FBI, set down the following rules, which deserve to be read thoughtfully—and remembered:

1. IF ANY STRANGER—OR EVEN A SLIGHT ACQUAINTANCE—MAKES IMPROPER ADVANCES, TELL YOUR PARENTS IMMEDIATELY.

Young people are too often kind-hearted about such things—they dislike the idea of getting an offender into "trouble." Just remember that if you DON'T report him, he'll probably get into worse trouble later on—to say nothing of the harm he may cause.

2. IF YOU KNOW OF ANY PORNOGRAPHIC PICTURES OR LITERATURE BEING PASSED AROUND, NOTIFY YOUR PARENTS IMMEDIATELY.

Obscene reading matter is a favorite habit of degenerates. If the authorities can run down the source and trace the material, they may be able to rid the community of danger before it starts.

3. KNOW YOUR DATE! DON'T GO OUT ON "BLIND DATES" UNLESS ANOTHER COUPLE IS ALONG—AND EVEN THEN BE CAUTIOUS.

If someone phones and says he's a friend of Jack Jones, tell him you'd be glad to have Jack Jones introduce him.

4. STAY OUT OF LOVERS' LANES. It's natural to want to be alone with your date, but experience shows that "Lovers' Lanes" are favorite haunts of sex criminals.

5. DON'T WANDER AWAY FROM THE CROWD AT PICNICS AND OUTINGS. STAY WITHIN CALLING DISTANCE.

Sex criminals are easily attracted to any group of young people, and given an opportunity they can strike with frightening speed.

6. DON'T ASK FOR TROUBLE—DRESS SENSIBLY. Provocative clothing may attract the attention of a potential sex criminal.

7. BE CIVIL TO STRANGERS WHO ASK DIRECTIONS, BUT NEVER GO PART WAY WITH THEM. The "directions" trick is a favorite among sex criminals. They count on the natural helpfulness of young people.

8. BE VERY CAREFUL ABOUT ACCEPTING WORK FROM A STRANGER.

This is another insidious dodge. Always make sure that the person is a respectable businessman.

9. DON'T GO ABOUT THE HOUSE HALF-DRESSED. This may seem harmless, but it's an invitation to "Peeping Toms"—who may later become something more dangerous.

10. NEVER, NEVER HITCHHIKE! And never, never, pick up a hitchhiker!

Problems? Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Designer Pattern

MOVE LIGHTLY INTO A NEW YEAR in a pleat-activated princess—a beautiful shape to be in now and when Spring arrives. The little turtleneck vestee adds the casual touch designer Stella Sloat loves—it's separate so you can enjoy a diversity of necklines. Misplay Is Costly Boards 14 to 19 of the final match in the World Bridge Olympiad saw Italy work back from its 31 International Match Point deficit until it almost caught the United States team. On those boards, we went down on a rather poor slam bid while Italy stopped at game. One of our declarers miscounted tricks on a game contract. On another hand, Italy made a vulnerable game at one table and beat our declarer at the same contract at the other table.

Disaster struck us on board 20 when South decided to compete against a club partial. Then, after he was doubled at two diamonds, he stood by his guns and misplayed the hand to go down an unnecessary 800. All seemed very bad from the sidelines but it is the

He Thinks: Don Juan; They Think: Don Wan

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

We live in a neighborhood where there are several young married couples. My husband, in his 60s, is quite smitten with the young women and it has become a big joke—the old fool who thinks he's Don Juan!

I couldn't care less but I'm wondering if I should tell the old fool just what they really think or let him continue to provide them with entertainment by making such a fool of himself?

Even if he reads this, I doubt if the stupid jerk would wise up! — UNDECIDED.

DEAR UNDECIDED:

You could tell him but I doubt that he'd believe you. He'd probably just think you were jealous. If it came from one of the "young women," he might be convinced.

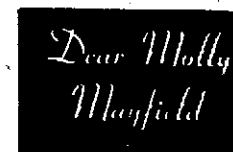

He isn't the only man in his 60s who just won't admit, even to himself, that he is no longer the answer to a maiden's prayer. It's pitiful to watch the silliness of these tired, old lovers, but I've yet to hear of one of them "wising up"—it's a blind refusal to grow old gracefully.—M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I guess I'm what you would call the black sheep of my family. They all look down on me because I divorced my first husband and remarried.

I was married 20 years to a man who was pretty good up until the last three years. We had five children. If I had done the crazy things he wanted me to do during those last three years, I would have been a very poor mother.

My present husband is very good to me and the children—he is right for me, not cruel like my first husband. That is why I can't understand the attitude of my relatives. They think I have done wrong by leaving the father of my children and marrying another man. Why can't they see that it is best for all of us?—M.E.H.

DEAR M.E.H.:

If you and your husband and children are happy, don't fret about what the relatives think. They are not nearly as important as your own family.

Perhaps as time goes by and they see how well things work out, they will change their minds. Right now, all the talking in the world won't help convince them.—M.M.

NOTE TO HAIRY: On the market right now there are several good products to remove hair. Check with a reliable beautician about bleaching the hair so that it isn't so obvious.—M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

What would you do with a husband who was so irresponsible that he had to be reminded again and again to do what has to be done? Many times he will lie and say he has already done so—and so when he really hasn't. Then when I tell him about it, he gets angry.

He is self-employed and refuses to tell me anything about his business. I can't see how he can continue to make a go of it when he refuses to pay his bills for months at a time. He always says, "Let 'em wait!"

He has become so hateful and disagreeable, I'm about to leave. I might be flat broke if I did because he could put in a bill for all he has spent on me—room, board, etc. (so his lawyer told him). Do you suppose that's true? What would you do with such a husband?—

DEAR FED UP:

If you are determined to get out of this downhill marriage, by all means get a lawyer to handle your af-

CHEF OF THE WEEK

He Braves the Baseball Circuit

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
L. F. T. Food Editor

He's a scout—not a cub—not an Indian—but a scout for the Milwaukee Braves. Today's Chef of the Week, Harry M. Minor, was actually instrumental in the discovery of Long Beach's Bob Bailey, even though Bob did eventually sign with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Born in San Pedro, Minor's family brought him to Long Beach when a baby. He attended Willard Grammar School, Jefferson Junior and Wilson High Schools, before enrolling at Long Beach City College. He had completed one year when HE was discovered, and scouted, into the Pittsburgh Pirates Farm Club in 1947.

THE NEXT 15 years Minor took part in a medley of baseball activity which included the Philadelphia Athletics, and a hitch as first baseman and catcher with the Salinas Club in the California State League during the 1957 season. He was also a playing manager of the Milwaukee Braves, Wellsville, N.Y. Farm Team in Class D, New York-Philadelphia Baseball League.

Two years, 1951-52, were devoted to Army duty in the Korean War.

Minor has been Southern California area scout for the Expert to Lecture

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Page Editor

The public is invited to a free illustrated lecture on Japanese ink drawings to be given by Dr. Jon Covell Tuesday at 10:15 a.m. in Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Dr. Covell is a professor at California State College, Long Beach, and at USC Art Foundation at Idyllwild. Her lecture is sponsored by the American Association of University Women and the museum.

Richard Sargent, recently appointed museum curator, will speak on the one-man exhibition of non-representational oil paintings by Arthur Secunda now on display. Secunda is a Southern California artist on the staff of Art Forum magazine.

THERE'S a new look to the main floor of Los Angeles County Museum in Exposition Park. Now on display in cases which once contained art objects are examples of statuary and other three-dimensional pieces created by Yoruba tribesmen of Nigeria as well as an 8th century Pre-Columbian Mexican ceramic figure.

The Yorubas number 5 million and constitute one of the major tribal groups in Western Nigeria. The objects on display have been selected from the collection of 45 pieces given to the museum by Dr. Justin J. Stein, member of the UCLA Medical School faculty. They were created during the latter half of the 19th century and include a variety of art styles and materials.

The Pre-Columbian figure, excavated in Vera Cruz, was given to the museum in 1962 by Julian Royce Goldsmith, professor at the University of Chicago. A Rerajades classic hollow figure, it stands 21-inches high and depicts a man in ceremonial dress.

The museum is open daily except Mondays, Thanksgiving and Christmas from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

COLORFUL puppets from the Allen Cook collection, marionettes by Bob Baker and art from the peninsula intermediate school make up the Christmas showing at Pinos Verdes Art Gallery. A daily Punch and Judy show by Preston Hibbard will be featured Dec. 19 and 20 from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The Christmas exhibit will continue through Dec. 30.

COLLAGES by Jean Varda go on view Friday at Downey Museum of Art, 10419 Rives Ave. The public is invited to the opening reception, which the artist will attend, from 8 to 10 p.m.

Varda's life has been as varied as the materials with which he works and he has acquired several languages in his travels in the Near East and in his native Greece. Long a member of the Monterey peninsula art colony, he now has his home and studio aboard a picturesque houseboat at Sausalito in San Francisco Bay.

The museum also will present its annual Christmas art sale with gift items by artists of Los Angeles County priced from $5 to $50. The museum is open from 2 to 5 p.m. each day except Mondays.

A RECEPTION at Naples Gallery of Fine Arts, 5604 E. Second St., today from 2 to 6 p.m. will introduce a show of semi-abstract oils by Blanche More. The exhibit will hang through December. The 30 large and small canvases combine fact and fantasy and her work has been described as "poems in color."

Film Series to Spotlight
'Finland'

Hjordis K. Parker, specialist in documentary films on the Scandinavian countries, will present "Look to Finland" at five local high school auditoriums this week in the third program of Long Beach City College's 1964-65 International Film Series.

Opening at 8 p.m. Monday in the Wilson auditorium, the film-lecture will be repeated Tuesday at Jordan, Wednesday at Lakewood, Thursday at Polytechnic and Friday night at Millikan. Season books and single tickets will be available at the door.

DAUGHTER of a former Norwegian consular official, Mrs. Parker once attended grade school in Long Beach. After becoming a U.S. citizen, she attended the University of California and the University of Washington. She now lives in Sierra Madre with her husband and two children between film-making trips to Europe.

Her latest film opens with a panoramic view of a typical forest in Finland, then goes on to show how closely the great forests tie into the daily lives, industry, arts and customs of the Finnish people.

Flute Recital

Martha Jane Lowe, flutist, will play a recital Friday at 8:30 p.m. in Room 127, California State College, Long Beach. She will be accompanied by Helenclair D. Lowe, pianist.

Choir Concert

Art of Feudal Japan Extraordinary Display

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

An extraordinary display of fine arts and decorative objects from feudal Japan will be on display in Buffums' Interiors, Broadway at Pacific Avenue in Long Beach, Monday through Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m., and will then be in the Santa Ana store Dec. 14 through 19.

The works include hanging scrolls, large screens, furniture, and china; all are authenticated and are from the years 1600 to the 1800s.

Two Japanese art forms have had tremendous impact on Western painting. In the 1870s, shipments of porcelain, and pottery to France were wrapped in Japanese block prints. These were discovered by the Impressionists; the flat planes of solid color bounded with sinuous line influenced Toulouse-Lautrec, Manet and many others as well as the Art Nouveau movement itself. There are several of the original block prints in this collection.

MORE RECENTLY, Zen painting in monochrome ink has attracted Western painters and collectors. This is a philosophical art, depending as much on empty space as on the deft, seemingly casual brush stroke for its power and eloquence. It is created by a kind of Gestalt intuition which follows long periods of meditation.

Among several examples of this work in the Buffums' exhibit is an exquisite hanging scroll by famous Sengai. A few strokes describe Mt. Fujiyama and suggest a pair of sails in the left foreground. On the right is a calligraphic inscription which translates roughly: "Between Heaven and Earth is but one line, the Snow Mountain." Another is a long scroll (kakemono) of a mouse perched on a broom in ink and slight color by Shirai.

Art Patron's Goal: to Aid Students

Because a little boy lived a night of magic 58 years ago in Bari, Italy, the Frank V. de Bellis collection of rare literary works is on display in the art gallery of California State College, Long Beach.

"That night shaped my life," de Bellis explained when he visited the exhibit at CSLB.

He was 8 years old, living with his family in the south-east Italian city on the Adriatic, when he learned that a theatrical troupe had arrived and would perform the stage-play version of "La Tosca" that night.

Wild with excitement, he pleaded with his mother to let him attend. At first she refused because it was a school night and she didn't want him to stay up late. He was so insistent that she yielded and he entered an enchanted world.

"I HAVE NEVER been away from the arts since that night," he said, his brown eyes glowing at the memory. "The theater, opera, symphonies, chamber music, literature, painting, sculpture—these have been my greatest interests."

The family came to the United States when de Bellis was 11 and he attended schools in Boston. In 1923 he moved to San Francisco where he still resides. During his business career in real estate and the construction field, he maintained his interest in the arts. When de Bellis retired in 1941, he began adding to his early Caruso records and now has 22,500 disks which span the history of the recording industry.

NEXT HE collected music, treatises and manuscripts. "But there were so many cross references to incunabula—works printed before 1500—an other subjects that one field led to another."

The huge collection now includes manuscripts, musical scores, recordings and rare editions which historically document Italian contributions to Western culture. The volumes span 800 years in origin and document 3,000 years of one people's history.

"They represent a fantastic contribution to our civilization," de Bellis said. "They mark milestones in man's mental development."

ALL THE TIME he was collecting, the art patron knew he would one day give the treasures for the benefit of young people.

In February of this year, the collection was presented officially as the first major gift to California State College. It is housed permanently at San Francisco State College and one of the stipulations of the gift is that the collection be available for the use of students, faculty and other qualified persons.

"I want to revive the faith and conviction in young people that today presents beautiful, wonderful opportunities to become the humanists which accented the Renaissance. Now the balance is over-weighted toward the commercial and mechanical."

"IT IS IMPERATIVE for man's satisfaction and better direction that the material and spiritual be in equilibrium. We need the spiritual values in life to fulfill our roles better and to avoid becoming just a number in a mechanical world."

THE COLLEGE gallery regularly is open Mondays through Fridays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., but for this show only it also will be open Saturdays and Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m. through Dec. 19. Special arrangements may be made for group visits.

Said de Bellis, "I hope the giving of this collection to California State Colleges will stimulate others to make gifts to the state colleges. There are those who cannot do all that should be done for young people. Therefore, it is imperative that those who can, do more."

PRICELESS COLLECTION

For more than 20 years Frank V. de Bellis has collected a treasury of Italian culture; in February he donated the collection to California State Colleges. Many of the pieces are now on display at California State College, Long Beach, where they will remain through Dec. 19. The collector is shown with a music manuscript dated 1450.

Symphony Offers Christmas Gala

Saturday at 8 p.m., Henri Temianka will be guest conductor for Long Beach Symphony Orchestra's Christmas Gala Concert in Long Beach City College Auditorium.

Special guest soloist will be the distinguished pianist, Jakob Gimpel, who has made many appearances in the United States and Europe as soloist with major orchestras. He will play the Rachmaninoff "Concerto No. 2."

LONG BEACH City College Choir with Wayne Gard as director, Cerritos College Concert Choir with Stanley Porter as director, and the Choir of California State College at Long Beach with Frank Pooler as director will join to make up a 300-voice choir which will perform festival music of the religious faiths of America.

Selections will include "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing" by Helpman, "Run, Shepherd, to the Light" by Haydn, "Pastorale" from "The Book of Mormon Oratorio" by Robertson, and "Jubilate Deo Omnis Terra" by Peters. Soloists will be Allan Keller, tenor, and Susan Cashman, soprano.

Ogren to Sing in 'Messiah'

Because of laryngitis, Carl Robertson has been forced to withdraw as bass soloist for Civic Chorus' production of Handel's "Messiah" today at 3 p.m. in First Congregational Church, Third Street and Cedar Avenue.

The role will be sung by Donald Ogren, soloist for the St. Francis Episcopal Church, Palos Verdes. He has made many radio and television appearances and has been soloist for Los Angeles County Museum concerts and for the Kjellberg Pro Musica.

Other soloists will be Janice Groh, soprano; Ruthanne Lorenzen, contralto; and Carl Hoover, tenor.

A presentation of the Long Beach Recreation Department, the oratorio is directed by Frank Ahnold. James Weeks is guest organist.

MISS CASHMAN has sung leading roles with many Southern California opera companies. She will sing the Haydn music with chorus and orchestra.

The symphony also will play the "Christmas Concerto" by Corelli and the colorful "Scorcher's Apprentice" by Dukas.

Magnolia to Produce 'Forest,' 'Little Foxes'

Magnolia Theater will establish a first in theater when it presents two classic works by Lillian Hellman, "Another Part of the Forest" and "The Little Foxes" in succession. The two plays span a 20-year development of the Hubbard family.

"Another Part of the Forest" is set some 20 years before "The Little Foxes." It will open Thursday at 8 p.m.

THE DRAMA is an emotional expose of a wealthy, strong Southern family, of their rise to power, their conflicts and their turning on one another.

The central figure is the father, Marcus Hubbard, who rules the family in an absolute, dictatorial manner. He is portrayed by Carl Yates, who has played major roles in more than 100 productions.

ROMOLA TEMKIN plays Lavinia Hubbard, wife of Marcus and mother of Regina, Benjamin and Oscar. She is the weak link in the family. Mary Ayers will appear as Regina.

Men Make Fashion Splash!

Zany Hats, Surfer Look In ... shirts are out (worn out, that is)

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON
I, P-T Fashion Editor

Cowabunga! It's the surfing look that's making a big splash in men's fashions for spring and summer.

Just as parkas and turtleneck sweaters sloughed off ski slopes into male wardrobes, now the casual attire of gremmies, hoe-dads and surfers has hit the men's fashion world with the impact of a big breaker crashing on the shore.

OR—in the desert.

At recent spring-summer showings by the Men's and Boys' Apparel Guilds in California—held at Desi Arnaz's Indian Wells Hotel in Palm Desert—the surfer influence showed up in everything from swimwear to go-anywhere-wear.

THE THRILL of taming a wave with a piece of wood and riding it triumphantly back to shore started in Hawaii and California, then swept over the Rockies to whet the appetites of inland teenagers.

Now it's spreading around the world—carrying with it a surge of California-inspired fashions.

Inland fans are no longer limited to reading their surf magazines. They're flocking to lakes and rivers for "wake" surfing. (This is done by riding the wake of a slow-moving boat. As soon as the surfer feels the wave pushing him, he releases the tow line and rides the boat-made surf.)

Like skiing, surfing has developed a group of followers who want to look the part—even though they've never been a-board. For them, surfing is a social activity. They're quick to pick up surfing terms.

AND—with the help of California menswear designers—they're setting a trend in fashion.

NEW FOR THE COMING season is the "competition look," borrowed from custom styles designed for surfing teams.

In swimwear it's characterized by distinctive banding of single or double stripes on trunks, parkas and sleeves. Ashore, the look appears on tee shirts and sports shirts via laced necklines, team stripes and laced-side vents.

Completing the look: walking shorts in wide wale corduroy, white jeans and light blue Polyester cotton slacks (many with permanent press), crew socks and tennis shoes.

ACCORDING TO ONE manufacturer, 60 or 70% of the sports shirt production will be in riding-the-hips shirt jackets, introduced in California last year. They're in bold bright prints, competition stripes, checks and plaids.

Sportcoats, characterized in California by the concave forward pitch shoulderline, emphasize the single and double-breasted closing.

Most often they're in compound colors—such as mixtures of "Pacific blues and citrus hues"—and are closely coordinated with dress and casual slacks.

Other trends: Western-style jackets and pants topped by LBJ hats . . . sophisticated, lightweight suedees, often shown with knit backs and sleeves . . . alpaca sweaters mated with harmonizing knit shirts . . . and a wide variety of surfer-inspired (who else, except LBJ) hats.

It's a season when men will be riding a new wave of wilder, brighter fashions!

"We hope at some time to do some leisurely traveling. Would studying French be the best for a language?"

IT ISN'T the working language of the world anymore. The working language is English. For the Western world, the greatest number of people speak Spanish—a statistic that is not important really. South America is the reason. Very few tourists go to South America. And most of the few go to Rio de Janeiro where they speak Portuguese.

What you want are the working words—for restaurants first, taxis second, hotels third. I've found a set of similar phrase books is the easiest way. You can point to the phrase if you can't pronounce it. I've been using "What You Want to Say and How to Say It" in various languages. Published by McRae-Smith Co., Philadelphia. Usually available through Brentano's of New York or their agents.

"How do we join one of those clubs that charter planes for cheap flights to Europe?"

I WOULD ASK the overseas airlines for the names of clubs that use charters. The rule is that clubs cannot be formed for the purpose of travel. And you must be a member for six months before you can travel with them.

"What can I give for a present to a person going to Europe? She will be flying."

"I'VE SEEN a small ball-point pen with a built-in flashlight. You're always making out landing cards and customs' declarations between countries.

"Would some electrical kitchen thing like a can opener be a good present for any husband to take to friends in England?"

NO. WRONG current and too much trouble to adjust. A kitchen gadget that I've found good is the blackboard or reminder pad with magnetic pencil that clings to it.

"I wrote to several government tourist agencies for information but got nothing."

TRY THE NATIONAL airline of the country. They're in business. Tourist agencies are usually staffed by a country club of government employees.

"I wrote to you and you didn't answer..."

I HAVE a half dozen letters with names but no address. You?

"...the cheapest way for a couple who want a leisurely, one-time trip around the world."

BY CRUISE SHIP. I saw one recently of three months for $2,200 all-expense and a lot of time ashore between ports. You shop for these. Buy when you find it.

Over the Pole

The best flying weather in the world is ahead of Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS) pilots when they take an intercontinental DC-8 jet out of Copenhagen and follow the polar route to Los Angeles. Weather experts say the Arctic resembles a desert, with generally light winds, low humidity, infrequent and thin clouds and little rain or snow.

Yosemite Packs 'Em In

Yosemite National Park has surpassed its previous record year for total number of visitors, according to acting superintendent Elmer N. Fladmark. The count through early November was 1,505,502. The record for a full year is 1,505,496, set in 1962. Park officials had estimated earlier that the 1964 visitor count might reach 1.6 million. Two other records were also established by the park during the summer. A new mark for a three-day holiday period was set over the July 4 weekend when 45,761 visitors passed through the four entrances. The previous high had been 44,218 for the Memorial Day weekend in 1960. August 1964 proved to be the biggest month in the Park's history with 377,102 visitors.

SOUTHLAND TRAVELER

Mexican Christmas Just 3 Hours Away

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT
Travel Editor

Would you like to spend Christmas in a foreign land, where customs are different, yet where the Yuletide spirit exists unforgettably in ceremony, laughter and song?

In a land where there are certain paganistic overtures to the Santa Claus-Christmas tree motif?

Sounds remote, doesn't it?

Well, Mexico is all of that and more, and only three hours by jetliner from Los Angeles International Airport.

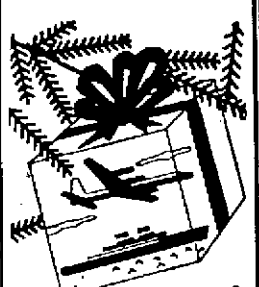

The Mexican Christmas, a continuing round of merriment lasting 20 days, starts nine days before Dec. 25 when the natives reenact the search of Joseph and Mary for shelter before the birth of the Child.

PILGRIMS, or guests, arrive at homes where nightly parties are being held. They carry lighted candles and sing songs beseeching lodging at these posadas, or lodging places. The hosts first pretend to deny the invitation; then the singers are admitted and the parties begin.

A pinata often forms a hilarious part of the festivities. A pinata is a large container, usually ceramic or papier-mache, decorated with tissue to resemble fruit, an animal, or even a person filled with candy and other good things to eat. It is suspended by a string above the guests. Blindfolded guests are provided with a stick and given a chance to hit the dangling target. Laughter greets each futile swing as the "stocking" is manipulated out of reach. When hit, the pinata breaks, scattering its candy and other good things to eat for everyone.

MEANWHILE, the Nativity Scenes are displayed everywhere. There are a few Christmas trees, of course. Shops rival each other with immense pinatas and myriads of colored lights twinkle in the streets. In private homes, Christmas Eve is celebrated with lavish banquets. Midnight mass on Christmas Eve climaxes the posadas. Later there are fireworks, the blowing of little clay whistles and the ringing of bells. Gifts for the children are not forgotten, but they come Jan. 6—the Day of the Three Wise Men—and they are found in the shoes and not in the traditional stockings. For the visitor, Mexico City is a gourmet's paradise, especially at Christmastime. Restaurants you should try include: Focolare, at Calle Hamburgo 87; La Fonda El Refugio, Liverpool 168; Chalel Suizo, Calle Niza 37; and Delmonico's, Calle Londres 87. There are hundreds of others, if you are the adventuresome type and like to take a chance.

MEXICO CITY, at an altitude of 7,349 feet, is not a warm city in December. The temperature runs from a high of around 65 degrees to a low of about 43. Take warm clothing for nighttime wear. Another tip: Make reservations in a hotel where rooms are heated. The better hotels include the Marie Isabel, Del Paseo and Del Prado. They cost more, are close in and worth more.

A new archeology-anthropology side trip is catching on among visitors to Oahu Island, Hawaii.

It's called the Folkways Hawaiian Tour, and on the 160-mile Volkswagen bus trip visitors see lava rock temple ruins, ancient fish ponds, legend-steeped taro patches and breadfruit groves. Also, there's a stop at the Polynesian Cultural Center at Laie. During the tour, the driver tops off his own stock of legends with taped Hawaiian chants and history.

The tour leaves daily from 1387 Queen Emma St., Honolulu.

Delta Widens Magic Circle

Delta Air Lines has put a new wrinkle into its Magic Circle.

The air line announced that its unique West Coast-East Coast-Caribbean 8,000-mile vacation plan offers a new arrangement for vacationers interested in visiting Washington, D.C. or Baltimore.

Heretofore, for the $325 special fare, a traveler had to follow a route from the West Coast to Atlanta to New York to Puerto Rico to Jamaica to New Orleans and back home. While he could stop at any in-between city on the Delta system, he had to hit these key points.

It meant that someone who wanted to visit Washington also had to go on to New York.

Now Delta will arrange for a flight directly from Washington / Baltimore to Puerto Rico so a vacationer can skip New York entirely.

A Delta spokesman reports that some reservations have already been made by persons planning to be in Washington at winter holiday.

BERT'S EYE VIEW

TV Authors Don't Understand Women

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

The trouble with authors who write for television is that they're men.

They simply don't understand women.

They're not concerned with the "whys" of femininity.

That's the way Patricia Barry feels. Patricia, starring in NBC-TV's Monday night "Harris Against the World" series, has been fighting a one-woman war to put femininity on the video map.

From her personal standpoint, she has succeeded.

IN A "DR. KILDARE" drama, for example, the thrice-nominated Emmy Award actress played a woman who didn't want to have a baby.

The original script, according to Patricia, didn't explain why the woman felt as she did.

The finished product, after Patricia consulted with the author and the producer, included a scene explaining the relationship between the husband and the wife.

The scene documented why the woman didn't want to have a baby.

IN A "BEN Casey drama, she played a socialite who was overly ambitious for her husband. The original script didn't clarify why. The drama that hit the air did—after another Patricia consultation with producer and author.

She's following the same consultation lines in preparation of scripts for her current series.

"Writers write for men," she said.

"Women? Oh, they can be a motivation or just a gimmick. Very rarely is the woman's story really told.

"Men are inclined to write pedestrian, superficial women that men react to—the sweet, loving housewife, the typical glamour girl, the standard witch.

"Whatever happened to all those wonderful writers who wrote the Joan Crawford woman stories?"

THE WRITERS with whom Patricia consults are themselves "wonderful" in the way they listen to her point of view.

"There are no hard feelings when you're dealing with talent," she said, "and I'm talking specifically about the authors, not myself."

Talking about herself reveals another reason why her relationship to the authors works out so well even though she's suggesting changes.

"I think women are more inclined to figure out men than the other way around," she said.

Figuring out why Patricia took a role in a situation-comedy series when she has been noted for her dramatic portrayals wasn't difficult—when she explained why.

"I NEEDED an image," she said.

"With all my Emmy nominations and all my juicy parts, I don't have an image. I must get my name and face together."

There's another reason.

"I was playing nothing but neurotics. I was always suffering. That takes something out of you emotionally."

There was one drama, for example, in which Patricia spent most of her time experiencing simulated labor pains. It took eight days to tape the drama.

"I felt terrible when it was all over," she said.

She's found a new birth of character in her situation comedy.

Excerpted Reviews on Recent Television Programs

Program: "NBC Follies of 1965," aired Nov. 27 on channel 4.

Steve Lawrence has come a long way from the raw lad with the big voice who went through high school in New York and was picked by Steve Allen as the male singer on the old, old "Tonight" show.

He's a star on Broadway in "What Makes Sammy Run." He has talent, style, poise and last night he presided over a relaxed, cleanly produced, fluff-devoid variety show that could have been picked right out of the 1920's or 1930's.

This is not an attempt to knock the 1920's. What a decade. Maybe it's the answer to television's current woes.

Lawrence headlined the first "sneak preview" of the season, an hour-long melange of song, dance, skit, comedy and music-hall nip-ups.

Joining Lawrence were Juliet Prowse, the dancer; Jill St. John, the actress; Nipsey Russell and Allan Sherman, the comedians, and the Bitter End Singers, a new group.

Altogether a pleasing hour—if you're contented with the usual.

Critic H. D. Quigg of UPI

If this was supposed to be the image of a series of "sneak preview" specials to come, it would be best for the network to forget about it and try for something else.

The advance publicity called it "a novel concept" and whatever this means may still be bugging those who sat it through the hour.

Critic Helm of "Variety"

It would have been more appropriately titled "NBC Folly of 1965."

If Jill St. John is a singer, then give me Minnie Mouse as a prime candidate for "Carmen."

Even host Steve Lawrence recognized that to permit Miss St. John to sing was a mistake. However, in deference to her physical qualifications, he said:

"Go ahead and sing, dear. I'm all eyes."

Comedian Allan Sherman should have felt like he was all ears—donkey ears. For a seasoned performer to get the giggles is like Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer blowing a nose-fuse.

Allan partially recovered with a clever dissertation on "Children of America, I got fat as a public service."

NBC could have performed a better public service by skipping its folly.

The best performer was John Cameron Swayze. He did the commercials.

Critic Bert Resnik of "TeleVues"

Program: Various ones aired Nov. 30.

One sometimes becomes bored with television and starts thinking of it as an endless stream of silly situation comedies and melodramatic soap operas occasionally interrupted by a routine variety show.

The next time such dour reflections occupy this viewer's mind, I shall recall last night's programs.

For one hour early in the evening we were treated to an enchanting concert by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, enlivened by the comments of conductor Leonard Bernstein.

A short time later, Andy Williams turned up on his own program with delightful Julia Andrews in tow and there followed a happy 60 minutes of tuneful music and gentle good humor.

And finally there was an hour's appreciation of Sir Winston Churchill, as a statesman but primarily as a Sunday painter.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

NOT 'DUMPY'

Ruta Wants
'Bit of Flash'

Ruta Lee is on a one-at-a-time campaign to bring glamor back to the lives of performers. None of that girl-in-blue-jeans-next-door stuff for perky, pretty Ruta. She lives in a 25-room house in Hollywood with her parents and grandmother, and she dresses with an eye to style.

The actress guests through-out the week starting Monday on "You Don't Say," 2 p.m. on channel 4, and appears on "Stimulus" at 8 p.m. Friday, channel 5.

"I'M FED UP with little girls in little gingham dresses," she says. "I think it's tragic that Hollywood is not what it used to be. I'm for bringing back the era of Pola Negri. I think you can good taste yourself right out of business in Hollywood if you are too chic, too understated. An actress has to put a bit of flash into her appearance. I think it's nice to be able to look at someone walking down the street and know automatically that you are looking at an actress. Most actresses today look dumpy, and that's not the image I like for Hollywood."

RUTA, who hit front pages earlier this year when she personally telephoned Khrushchev to get her aged, ill grandmother out of Lithuania, is able to afford all this flash through her numerous appearances on television. "It has given me a very nice living for the last seven years," Ruta smiles.

For Jerry, It's 'My Son, the Comedian'

By JOSEPH FINNIGAN

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Jerry Lewis' 19-year-old son Gary makes his television debut Sunday night (8 p.m. today, channel 2) on the Ed Sullivan Show, a program on which the comedian scored his first big hit in 1947.

It is a debut filled with sentiment for Lewis who is being honored at an American Guild of Variety Artists banquet in New York City that same night.

And to make the evening an even more personal affair, Gary's godmother, Sophie Tucker, will be on Ed's CBS-TV show.

The Sullivan show will feature Jerry playing a minor role to "My Son, the Comedian," and his five-piece band. Gary sings, plays the drums and does comedy. He made a Liberty recording of "This Diamond Ring."

Jerry describes Gary's comedy as "better funny" than his own talent was at 19 years of age.

Jerry's pride in his son is the natural pride found in any father whose offspring is following a family tradition. Jerry's father was an entertainer. Gary makes it three generations in a row to choose a show-business career. Gary's mother, Patty, was a singer.

BUT THE COMEDIAN is not unaware of the fact that Gary may have to be better than any other youngster making his show business debut.

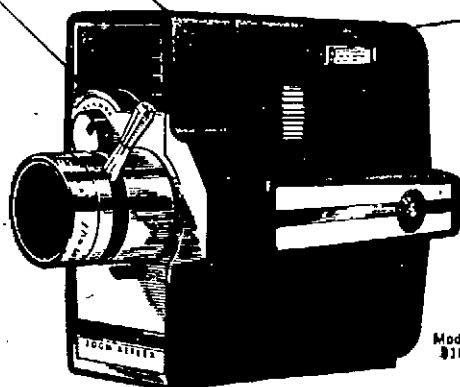

Gary is Jerry Lewis' son, and he may be judged, compared and even criticized on that basis. The sons of other Hollywood stars have never escaped such comparison.

Gary, oldest of the six Lewis boys, has been appearing at Disneyland in recent months.

After Gary, there are five other Lewis lads waiting in the wings.

Littlest Network Aims for Prestige

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—In television, balanced programming means that some of it is good and some of it isn't. ABC, which has shot into new ratings prominence with such shows as "Peyton Place," "Bewitched," "The Fugitive" and "The Addams Family," is now about to aim for the prestige market. On firmer competitive ground, the littlest network has made it a three-network race.

Whether this turns out to be beneficial to the viewer depends entirely on the networks themselves. In the past, such keener financial competition has sometimes meant a lowering of program quality in the fight for mass audiences. The viewer would seem to be protected now, however, against such a happening since the program quality cannot get much lower than it already is.

IN ANY CASE, the ABC-TV upsurge is a fairly remarkable event in the broadcasting business. The ABC-TV news department, competent as it is, has not thus far been able to break the ratings dominance of NBC-TV and CBS-TV in this area. Nevertheless, last season virtually the only spots in the ABC-TV schedule that drew major attention were occasional documentaries, such as "The Making of the President, 1960" by David Wolper, and the "Saga of Western Man" series and other efforts by John Secondari and his wife, Helen Jean Rogers. This season ABC has been making news only with its comeback, but now with the forementioned prestige drive, aimed, supposedly, at the future.

THUS THERE IS great interest in ABC-TV's plans for next season for a new series of hour-long original dramas, "Crisis!", to be produced on videotape and on location. The network says it is trying to line up top names, and unearth new writing talent, for the series.

SPECIAL

I'VE GOT A SECRET — When host Steve Allen put words and music to the show's title, he started an avalanche. After Eagles half-back Timmy Brown recorded a different song with that title, Allen assigned the show's panelists to create "Secret" tunes. Results are unveiled at 8 p.m., ch. 2, as Betsy Palmer uses a folk song style, Bess Myerson employs a Noel Coward technique and Bill Cullen borrows strains from other tunes. But Henry Morgan tops 'em all with a composition that calls for special guest Robert Merrill and a full operatic treatment with a 100-voice chorus.

ANDY WILLIAMS—Three of today's top male recording stars pool their talents in an hour of song and fun when Robert Goulet and Bobby Darin join Williams at 9 p.m., ch. 4, in color. Skits involve the trio as members of a bachelors' club (though in real life married to Carol Lawrence, Claudine Longet, Sandra Dee), stalled in a Las Vegas elevator, and hitting the big-time as a rock 'n' roll group. The Grasshoppers (a title Joey Bishop used last season on a spoof of his own). In the informal spot is 8-year-old Donna Butterworth of Hawaii. Billed professionally as Eleu, Donna is the first child performer to appear in the main room at the Royal Hawaiian.

DEC. 7: DAY OF INFAMY — David Wolper's hour-long documentary looks at the decade preceding Pearl Harbor, as Hideki Tojo replaces Prince Koyohito and Japanese militarists plot to take over East Asia. Richard Basehart is narrator, at 9 p.m., ch. 11.

SPECIAL

SEGREGATION, Northern Style—The trials of a middle-class Negro family seeking to buy a $30,000 house in a white suburban neighborhood of New Jersey are told through hidden cameras and microphones as the couple is rejected by two-thirds of real estate offices and by many home owners. The family finally turns for help to a local fair housing committee, whose white "tester" is shown houses by an agent who had declined to show anything to the Negro couple. Mike Wallace is reporter for the 7:30 p.m., ch. 2 hour, which looks also at an integrated, stable neighborhood in New Rochelle, N.Y., interviewing residents of the Glenwood Lake area where 59 Negro and two Oriental families live scattered among 114 white families.

Tony Bennett is guest singer, and Imogene Coca joins Kaye in a comic interpretation of the "Swan Lake" ballet and in a Kinderspiel Light Opera production of "The Fleder-Mikado."

Sitting Pretty

If you expect to see green-eyed Chris Noel in a bikini when you tune in "Bewitched" at 9 p.m. Thursday, channel 7, don't waste your dial time.

She's in the program, all right, but the bikini isn't.

CARTOON BEATLES

Television animation rights for a cartoon series of Britain's famous singing Beatles have been acquired by King Features Syndicate. This is a half-hour weekly series aimed at night-time network presentation next season. The cartoon characters will, of course, be recognizable caricatures of John, George, Paul and Ringo. The voices of the real Beatles will be heard on the sound track.

You don't need glasses...

You need a new WINEGARD COLORTRON ANTENNA

You need a more powerful TV antenna to clear up that picture. One that takes more of the signal from the airwaves, and amplifies it before it reaches your set. When your set receives a strong, clean signal from the antenna, your picture becomes sharp, clear, bright... more enjoyable.

Model for model, Winegard's new electronic Colortrons are the world's most powerful antennas. Distant stations come in clearer and sharper. Snow and interference are reduced or eliminated.

For color or black & white, you can't own a finer antenna for best reception. Priced from $64.90. Antenna without electronic amplifier $24.95 up.

OUR COVER

Millions of dolls will be found under Christmas trees in the United States this year. All across the land the ritual is the same—the rustle of the wrapping paper, an excited squeal, a fond hug. But from there the scene varies radically, for there are so many different kinds of dolls in the toy stores these days that a little girl can choose one to suit her own personality. There is, for instance, our cover doll today, named Shrinkin' Violet. She is the shy type. But there also is Scooba-Doo, who is a swinger who urges her mistress to "Play it cool." There's a Chatty Baby that talks incessantly. And for the boys? A tide of weirdies that are startlingly ugly, revoltingly noisy, but they're in big demand. See Jerome Hall's story, "Shockers of Toyland," on Page 7.

Stilts and towers . . . islands and atolls . . . the quest for oil marches out to sea. Southland tidebands have already witnessed the arrival of offshore drilling for petroleum and, apparently, "we ain't seen nothin' yet" if all the plans develop. Opening up off-shore areas to oil drilling by the state has led oil companies to take the big gamble on finding oil, with rock-and-sand islands and Texas Towers in the making, just how many is still speculative. For more about this new development of the Long Beach-Orange County coast, see "On Stilts and Piles of Stone" in next Sunday's Southland Magazine.

Christmas Trees Fight Back--and Live!

By Lana C. Phelan

HOW desolate the Christmas tree on January 21! The ball is over. Stripped of finery and glitter, drooping and exhausted, the Cinderella of the tree world waits to be carted away by the disposal truck to her fate in the ashes. Is there mourning for her? Indeed there is, for who has not felt the sharp twinge of remorse at the sacrifice of a living tree for so short a period of glory.

Cheer up! A new Christmas tree is with us. This one does not die for you: It merely "blows its top." This growing process is termed "stump culture" and the top "tree" is harvested, while leaving the stump alive to bear from three to four such "trees" in its lifetime.

MOST of the Christmas trees are grown in the Pacific Northwest. In the past two decades, this strictly seasonal, little-noted industry has become a highly sophisticated system of agriculture rather than a consistent destruction of magnificent natural forests.

Washington state alone markets more than 3 million trees annually, bringing in more than $4 million, or one per cent of the state's crop total. The harvest season, from Thanksgiving to mid-December, employs some 600 extra workers, usually local residents—housewives, students, moonlighters, and loggers unemployed during the cold winter season. The trees are carefully selected, cut, and tied in bundles of about four for their trip to market via truck or train.

THE FINEST SOIL for growing Christmas trees is often infertile, sandy, gravelly, well-drained loam, as found in coastal Washington and Oregon. The seedlings are painstakingly planted, nurtured, thinned and shaped. Growth is slow, about one foot per year. Tree crews work year round one man pruning an acre each five days, his full-time efforts caring for approximately 80 acres of trees. The complete growth cycle covers seven to twelve years, providing a new crop of thickly-branched, symmetrical, vibrantly colored trees for market each year. The average tree is six to seven years old.

To enable the living stump to bear again, several suitable branches are left on when the tree is cut. A year or two later, they turn upward. The most promising one is selected to form the new "tree" and the others removed. While the pines adapt nicely, some firs are reluctant to form a new "tree" from an upturned branch. With these, the lower branches are left on to sustain the root system until a newly-formed stump sprout is developed.

A MAIN advantage of stump culture is perpetuation of production from trees having superior qualities of shape, thickness and color. One enterprising Washington grower has developed a forced-growth process resulting in larger, more abundant pine cones on his trees, greatly enhancing their value.

Thus, while Christmas was far from your mind, a flurry of activity was preparing your tree for this year. If you have a good eye, look sharp, and you just might find your same beautiful tree to share this Christmas season!

Second growth yule tree is ready. Man shows first cut. Stump will yield two more trees.

Scientific Christmas tree culture, in simplified form, shown in diagram.

Startlingly ugly,
revoltingly noisy

Shockers of Toyland

By JEROME HALL

A LITTLE LAD with a fresh-scrubbed smile clambered excitedly onto Santa's lap. He didn't wait for the old fellow to ask.

"I want," he began with wide, innocent eyes, "a Horrible Hamilton and a Spooky Spider and a Grizzly Gruff, and if you don't have any more Horrible Hamiltons left then I want a large Mystic Skull."

The next little fellow was a bit more shy and Santa had to prod him. "Well, I want a bicycle that makes a loud v-r-r-r-o-o-m noise and an exploding car for my train and a machine gun that goes 'rat-tat-tat-tat' real loud."

Ah, but fortunately the third little tyke had long blonde curls and she told the white-bearded old gent most demurely: "I should like you to bring me a Hansel and Gretel doll set, a nurse's uniform and a new fur coat for my Barbie."

AH, YES, this is the season when parents take their little darlings on exploratory safaris through the toy departments—not to find out what they want on Christmas morn, but to make sure the little brats haven't changed their minds since Mom and Pop hid the things in the garage last week.

This is a bad year for parents of young boys, for the hot toys this season seem to many parents to be either startlingly ugly or revoltingly noisy.

"What does it do?" asks the mother of a 6-year-old whose fondest desire is to own something green and gruesome. It is as difficult for youngsters to understand the idiosyncrasies of oldsters as the other way around, so junior explains very patiently: "It looks at you Mom, it looks at you real ugly."

THE BUSINESS of supplying today's youth with toys has changed immensely since the parents of today were playing with rubber guns and kick the can.

Today, an average of $35 per year is spent on each child for toys in the Long Beach area, according to latest available figures from a survey conducted by the toy manufacturing industry.

Last year, it is estimated, about $1.5 billion was spent on toys in the United States. The total for 1964 will exceed that, the toymakers say.

To stay ahead of today's children, the toy companies expend large sums of money in super-secret research. Behind locked and guarded doors work highly-paid engineers. They have been recruited from General Dynamics and North American and Rocketdyne. "We compete with all the large national defense contractors for the best engineers," says an official of Mattel, Inc., of Hawthorne, the world's largest toy manufacturer.

ABOUT 90% OF Mattel's employees at Hawthorne reside in the greater Long Beach area, the company says.

These engineers already have completed the designs for next year's Christmas shopping and for the 1966 holiday business. They are now working on 1967 at Mattel, a company that has grown in 15 years from a back-yard operation to the top of the industry with 1963 sales of $97,000,000.

There are more than 400 toy manufacturers. A dozen of the giants of the industry maintain extensive research and development departments. This year they have come up with a doll that burps after it has had its bottle, bicycles that roar like motorcycles, mechanical hockey and football and baseball games that seemingly would require an electrician in attendance at all times, and a doll with hair that grows.

There also are remote-controlled rockets and space ships, a pint-sized kitchen for Miss Muffet in which everything works, including the dishwasher, and an infinite variety of guns that do everything short of permanent damage.

IF YOU'LL LOOK real close up and down the aisles of the toy stores you will still find marbles and checkers and Monopoly games. There is a wide assortment of trucks (the new models sound like the real thing) and of trains. The new thing is auto racing on tracks, you know.

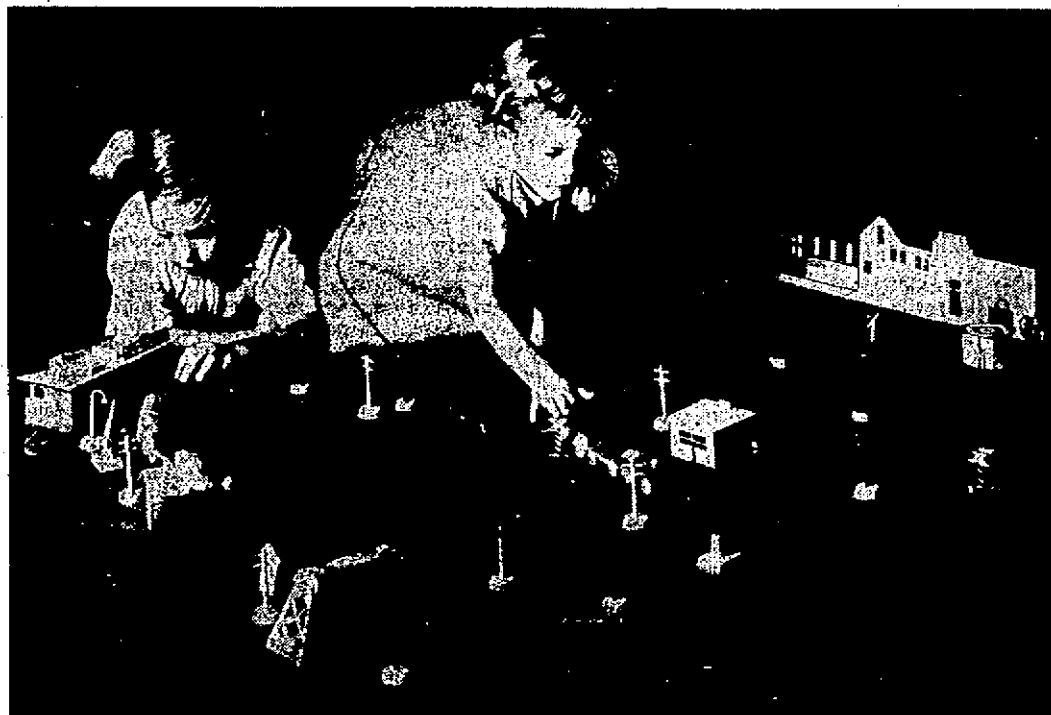

Most modern parents don't realize it, but good books make good Christmas presents, too.

There are, generally, two kinds of toys—educational and entertaining. Elliot Handler, founder and president of Mattel, Inc., and generally considered a genius in the toy business, says a toy should do something to stimulate a child to do something. He considers his talking dolls and noisy trucks to be both entertaining and educational.

Parents who will be assembling bicycles, wagons, doll buggies and ultra-vibrant, clear-toned xylophones the coming three weeks can take heart, however, that toys of today are of better quality than toys of yesterday.

THE REASON we don't have many antique toys (Continued on Page 16)

Even a dainty little girl sometimes wants to make a little noise—toy, right, does it. Toys like these are made of wood and they are unbreakable... well, almost unbreakable.

The pupil weighs in at close to a ton, won't eat, won't sink or swim; just stares. What does the teacher do? First, he makes her eat. Then she's taught to shake hands, retrieve, dance and sing, and she's ready for show business.

Whale College

By LEW ALLISON

WHAT do you do with a pupil who, when she's turned over to you, weighs pretty close to a ton, won't eat, won't sink or swim, stares at you balefully and acts generally like a fish out of water?

First, of course, you have to make her eat. The rest is easy—teach her to shake hands, retrieve, dance and sing, and put her in show business.

That's the way Dave Brown educated the world's first trained whale.

David H. Brown is curator of mammals at Marineland of the Pacific. When he was handed the first pilot whale ever captured for live display in February 1957, he undertook to apply all the teaching techniques he had developed in his work with Marineland's troupe of dolphins.

Dolphins are highly intelligent, great comedians and ham actors. So with this sort of cast, trainers had developed at Marineland a dolphin show including basketball and baseball games and dozens of other acts, and the dolphins and crowds alike purely loved it.

But what to do with a doggone whale?

Bubbles was ensnared by Frank Brochto, skipper of Marineland's collecting vessel Gerontino, five miles off Catalina Island. She fought for nearly six hours while other pilot whales and striped dolphins swam around her, sounding, surfacing to breathe, blowing in unison with their companion who was in distress, until the captive was hauled alongside. Towed ashore, she became the first whale to be captured and put on display. She didn't like it.

FOR DAYS the whale floated on the surface of the holding tank, about 35 feet in diameter and 6 feet deep, refusing to eat, refusing to sound, uttering soft, squealing noises that might have indicated fright, homesickness or just general misery. She developed a bad case of sunburn over much of the top of her 12-foot body, and that took a lot of zinc ointment which, applied liberally, seemed to help.

The first step, necessarily, was to get her into a larger tank — no mean task in itself, and accomplished only after the administration of a whale-size shot of tranquilizer. In the 100-foot fish tank, 22 feet deep, she still refused to eat or to submerge, but cruised slowly around the surface. Here Bubbles got acquainted for the first time with Man, in the person of Dave Brown, who undertook to consult with her on her own ground — under water. The whale was not exactly unfriendly, but she wasn't having any of the dead squid that was offered.

To the curator, this wasn't an unfamiliar problem. All of the mammals—seals, sea lions, dolphins, walruses or what not that Marineland has gathered for display—at first are wary of the dead fish offered them in captivity, and they fast for many days or weeks before they will touch such unfamiliar fare. Once they've found out that they can enjoy food other than what they've caught themselves, half the battle has been won.

IN BUBBLES' case, Brown descended with skin diving equipment, carrying a pair of 16-inch tongs, which he forced between the clamped lips of the pilot whale. After a few times, she started snapping her jaws when he approached, although she showed no other signs of unfriendliness. Then the curator, diving with a supply of squid, began shoving in a squid every time she snapped those huge jaws. To hear Dave tell it, it sounds simple — and it's probably not much worse than shoving your head in a lion's mouth. Anyhow, after spitting out most of the squid on every try, the whale finally got a few down and found out they weren't so bad.

In the next 72 hours she managed to put away 210 pounds of them. She didn't know it, but she'd just signed a contract to go to work. From then on, the squid or mackerel she got were in reward for performance.

Once the newly arrived Bubbles got over her emotional trauma, recovered from her fright, sunburn and great unhappiness, during which she faded away to a mere 1,300 pounds, she turned out to be no shrinking violet. Fish that followed her to her feeding platform irritated her, and one large intruder that attempted to snatch food from the trainer's hand often was pursued with intention to do violence. A couple of sea turtles that couldn't flee so quickly suffered real damage — one was butted high out of the water and another was shattered.

THE WHALE doesn't amuse itself in the water like the playful dolphin. Its only game seems to be to stand on its head and smack the surface with its fluke. But under the trainer's direction Bubbles quickly learned games, adapting herself to life in captivity more quickly even than the more intelligent dolphins.

There are two key factors in a whale's education, Brown explains — a reward, in the form of food, for each accomplishment, and sound, the stimulus of a whistle that quickly is associated with the reward.

Brown, with head whale trainer Joe Beazie, head dolphin trainer Ray Cribbs and the other specialized staff trainers, puts each animal through a training program that any college would be proud of. Within 10 days after Bubbles started school she had learned to swim up to the platform to accept her food from tongs held by her instructor, picking off about 60 pounds a day this way.

Then the platform was raised, and Bubbles learned to raise her head out of water, standing on her gently waving flukes to receive her reward. Eventually she raised a third of her body out of the water to reach a tasty morsel. She was out of first grade.

IN SUCCEEDING weeks the training progressed rapidly by raising the feeding platform, her trainer induced her to lunge higher, and higher. Finally the whale learned to swim to the surface, sight the food held high in the air, dive to the bottom of the tank and swim furiously up — leaping completely out of the water to pick off her reward.

The whale quickly learned to retrieve, but this trick nearly led to disaster. On one of her dives after an inner tube, she came up without it. A search of the tank confirmed the trainer's fears — the 18x4-inch tube was in Bubbles, and Bubbles was in trouble. Over the next few days she lost appetite, and within a week was not eating at all. Drastic measures were called for, and when the patient is a whale the word drastic is an understatement.

Over a period of the next three days Brown managed to crowd down Bubbles' throat something like 100 pounds of squid that had been filled with mineral oil.

TWO WEEKS after the disappearance of the tube, and three days after treatment began, the tube reappeared in the tank, still inflated, and Bubbles felt a lot better, now deflated.

Learning to shake hands was easy for the whale. Bubbles never minded being touched, anyhow, and when she swam up and Dave seized her flipper, blew the whistle and gave her a fish, she quickly caught on — there was a reward waiting any time the whistle blew if she'd stick up her flipper.

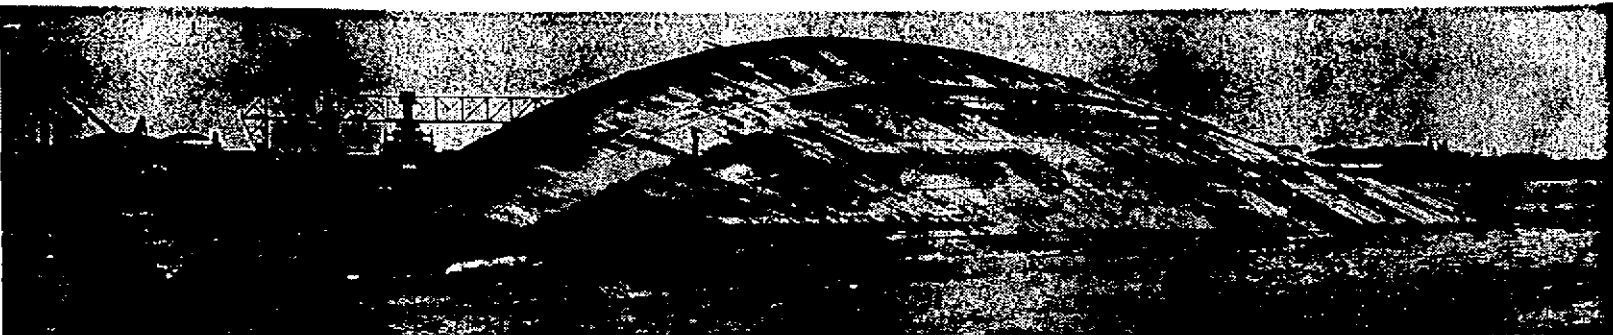

And then she learned to sing. In a remarkably short time, Brown claims — although the patience required actually must have been unbelievable—the whale learned there would be a reward if she would clap her jaws, purse up her blowhole and blow what best is described as varying tuneful Bronx cheers. The spasmodic, noisy blasts thus produced on cue probably are less harmonious than the Beatles, but they go over with an audience.

WHALES are social creatures who enjoy their own kind, certain other sea creatures, and human company. As a matter of fact, to take the curator's word for it, they just about get to be one of the family.

Bubbles in her first year of captivity proved to be most tractable with divers and trainers, and at one period became even amorous, insisting on rubbing against the divers in clumsy bursts of affection most discomfiting.

But after 14 months of tank living, she got irritable. If a diver made an attempt to feed any of the fish in the tank, she snapped at his hands and butted him around vigorously. One diver barely escaped unharmed when she tried to ram him against the wall of the tank.

Untold Secrets of Pearl Harbor

Second of two articles

By HOYT McAFEE

AS AN eye-witness to the devastating Jap raid on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941, I could fully appreciate the secret fear of top American commanders on the spot. It was that the Japs might be poised to storm ashore with landing forces in an all-out bid to capture the paralyzed Hawaiian Islands.

With the major airfields and most of the U.S. Pacific Fleet on fire or sinking, Lt. Gen. Walter Short and Adm. Kimmel decided that the desperate emergency called for martial law — immediately. After its imposition, U.S. intelligence agents launched "Japanese Alien Roundup" in Honolulu and elsewhere in the Islands.

On that "Day of Infamy," there were close to 10,000 Japanese aliens in the territory of Hawaii. Many thousands of other Japanese had become American citizens and had shown loyalty to the country of their adoption.

Not so, however, numerous aliens of Japanese ancestry. In the days preceding Pearl Harbor, they conducted and attended Japanese language schools in the Honolulu area. These subjects occupied their attention: Japanese customs, music, ideals, folkways, and language. Not a word, anywhere, about the privileges and benefits they had received in Hawaii Nei under the American form of government!

SHORTLY AFTER the Pearl Harbor debacle, all of the more dangerous Japanese aliens were arrested and placed in confinement. American intelligence agents found much incriminating evidence on them. For instance, secret codes, signaling devices, inflammatory pamphlets from Jap warlords, and "Damn America!" correspondence from fanatical Japanese societies.

Careful questioning brought to light the secret sympathies they still felt for their mother country — Japan. Since these alien agitators posed a definite security risk in a wartime emergency, they were transported to Sand Island and held there without benefit of trial.

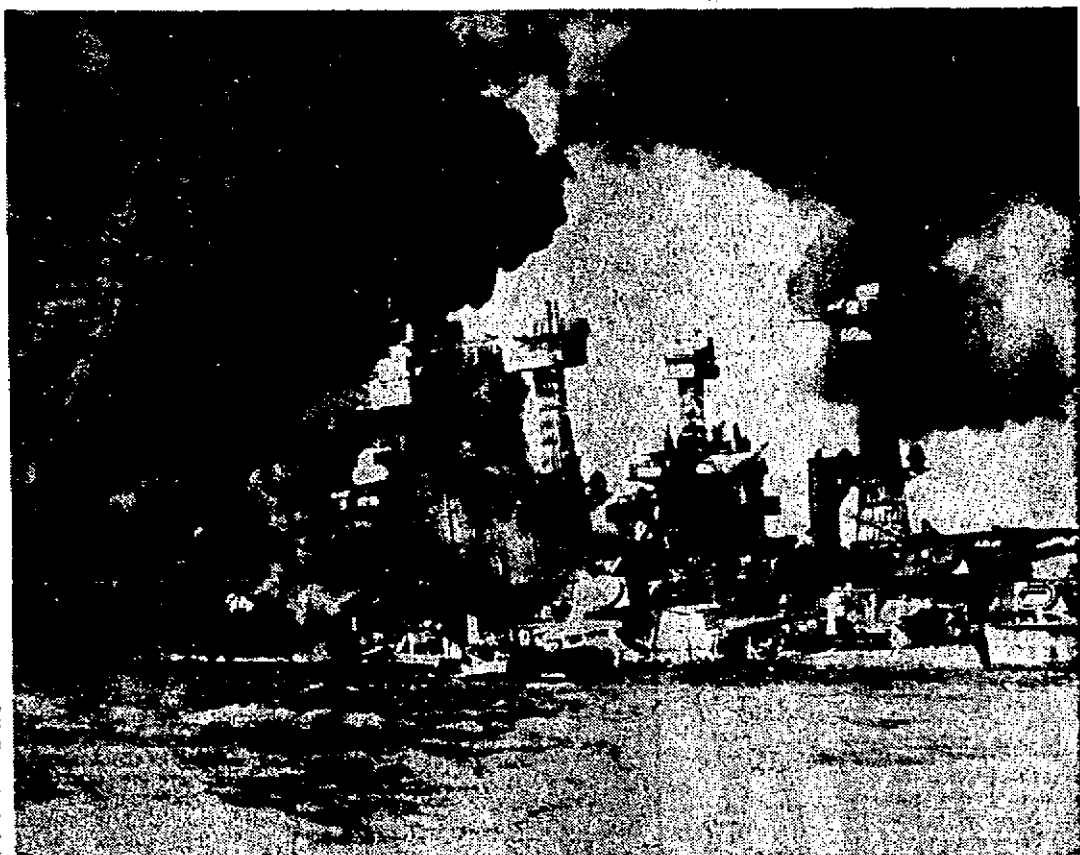

(Later in World War II, the U.S. Supreme Court lambasted American military and naval commanders in Hawaii for keeping martial law in force long after the emergency had passed. Likewise for denying suspects—Japanese aliens and others — the right to a fair trial under the 14th Amendment (due process of law) clause of the Constitution.)

BEFORE Pearl Harbor Japanese geisha houses in Honolulu had operated on the theory that "the boys like their entertainment hot and spicy." Swarms of U.S. servicemen gravitated to these cozy retreats for music, food, and "back-room sex. Their whoopee sprees often started on Friday night and lasted till the wee hours on Monday morning.

American counter-intelligence agents had good reason to suspect some of the Japanese geishas. For in their moments of intimacy with U.S. servicemen, they frequently switched the conversation from sex to military and naval subjects.

There was a clamp-down on the geisha retreats immediately after Pearl Harbor. After rounding up the suspicious Japanese butterflies, intelligence agents grilled them relentlessly. With stoic calm the holhouse geishas protested their "innocence."

Even as they were denying that they had transmitted military information to Japanese intelligence, however, praise for their "useful services" came from unimpeachable sources. In brief, from raiders who had flown with USS West Virginia and Tennessee after Japanese attackers struck. Three Navy men, trapped aboard the West Virginia, survived for 16 days but died just a few hours before rescue team finally reached them.

Capt. Mitsuo Fuchida in the Jap assault on Pearl Harbor!

ON THE RETURN to Tokyo, thousands of people poured into the streets and deliriously hailed them as "national heroes." At one giant victory celebration four of the bomber pilots made it a point to mention the "cooperation" of Japanese geishas in Honolulu. They added: "Our glorious Empire of the Rising Sun has a right to be grateful for what they did!"

While the Pearl Harbor raiders acknowledged the acclaim of their Japanese countrymen, American rescue crews sprang into action at the devastated U.S. Navy base. It was up to them to save, if possible, the lives of men trapped inside the compartments of burning and sinking ships. Also, to salvage as many battered vessels as they could.

Some of the grisly sights they came across, amid the shambles at Pearl Harbor, made them blanch. They recovered bodies caught between chunks of broken steel. About them swirled billowing masses of smoke. Gritting their teeth, the rescue men tied handkerchiefs over their noses and mouths and got on with their grim task.

From the outset the odds were heavily against them. For that reason they managed to respond to no more than a small number of appeals for help. By fortunate chance they heard the rapping and tapping against one side of the submerged Oklahoma. Hastily they answered the distress call of that ship's still-alive crew members.

IT WAS THEIR good fortune to rescue all except 415 of the Oklahoma's complement of 1,350 men. In the face of so many other losses and setbacks, that feat represented one bright spot amid the inferno of death and disaster at Pearl Harbor.

But for the rescue teams there was no pause, no breathing spell. Much still remained for them to untangle and pry loose. In fact, the saddest and most shocking discovery of all was still ahead of them. They stumbled upon it through a combination of curiosity and sheer luck.

In explanation, almost under their noses three sailors trapped aboard the sunken West Virginia continued to live, to breathe with difficulty, and call out for help at intervals. Their only hope rested on the off chance that someone would discover and rescue them. Tragically, no one could hear their feeble cries.

TWICE THIS reporter made the rounds of gutted Pearl Harbor with rescue crews. A few days after the shattering Jap assault, I asked one of the rescue leaders this question: "What about the West Virginia?" This was his response: "That one baffles us. We've been unable, so

Cary Grant Plays His True Self

Cary Grant plays an unshaven character in "Father Goose."

THE real Cary Grant finally stood up.
The unshaven, bibulous beachcomber Grant portrays in "Father Goose" is, the star says, "closer to my own character than any role I've played."

It took 32 years and 63 motion pictures for Grant, long recognized as one of the screen's most suave, sophisticated gentlemen, to achieve the millennium.

Now, in the words of his co-star, Leslie
Caron, he's a suave, sophisticated bum.

For both Grant and Miss Caron, this offbeat, dress-down adventure comedy was a challenging change of pace. Cary insists it's something he had wanted to do for years.

"THE AMOUNT of thought and effort
I spent in dressing so carefully for so many years," Grant explained, "was, in itself, indicative of a deeply hidden desire to do the opposite."

To the casual moviegoer, the Grant of "Father Goose" may seem more Ulysses than Cary. The erstwhile Prince Charming is seen as a bearded dissenter from society who is caught up in World War II in the South Pacific.

He is unwillingly pressed into service by the Australian Navy as a coast-watcher on an isolated island. During a series of misadventures, he finds his bachelor outpost taken over by Miss Caron, who portrays the war-displaced daughter of a French consul, and her seven school girl charges.

Adding to the fun and discomfiture of "Father" are the seven girls in his "instant family." The youngsters, 5 to 14, chosen in an international talent hunt.

"Father Goose," a presentation of Grant's own Granox Company, is Universal's Yuletide release and has been selected as the Christmas attraction at New York's Radio City Music Hall.

This will be the 27th Cary Grant film to play the Music Hall. His aggregate playing time there more than doubles that of any other screen star. His pictures have grossed more than $12 million at Radio City. "Father Goose" could be a synonym for Santa Claus. Why the title? Seems that Grant is given the code name of "Mother Goose" in his spotting role for the Nigh-vy.

When he is suddenly afflicted with the invasion of femmes, a change of gender is imperative. In due course, Father becomes a proper gender.

Leslie Caron trades glamour dress for Grant's clothing.

Talents Unite to Build Home

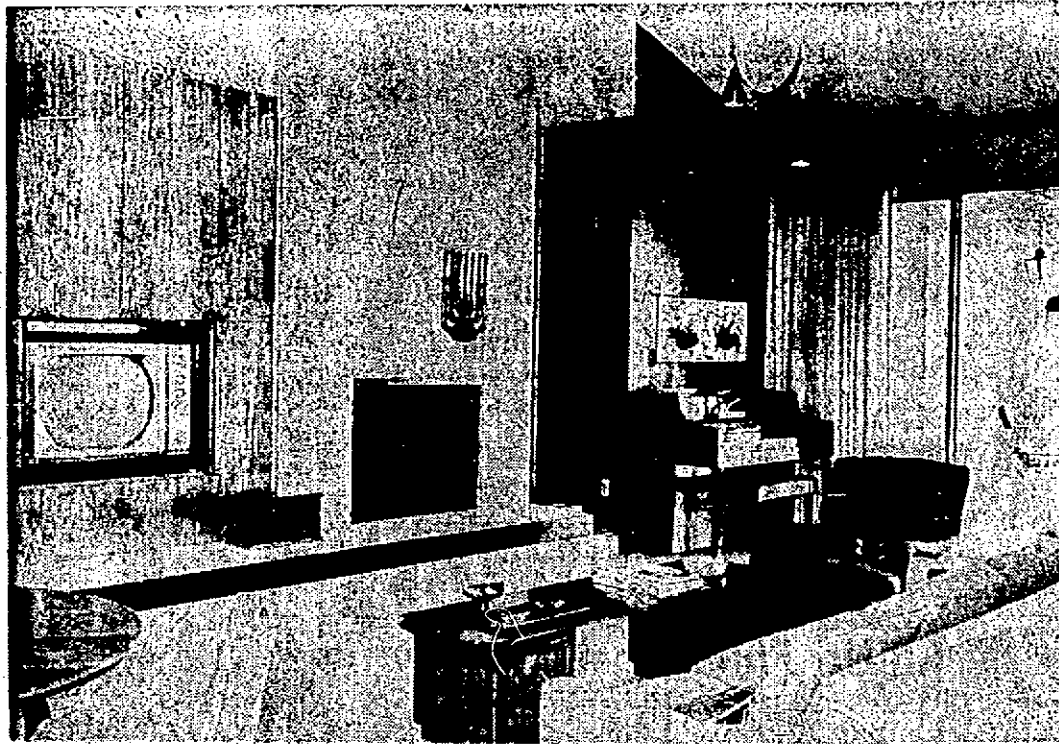

By Stella George

WELL-PLANNED by owners, Dr. and Mrs. David Eglit, 3426 Warwood Road, and designed and executed by Stanley Val Goldin, AIA, the Eglit home is customed for the best of living standards. Mrs. Eglit engaged the services of Don McNeely, NSID, to assist with details of interior decorating, although the over-all decor is definitely her own.

The subtle use of color accents plays an important part in the decorating theme of the Eglit home. Tones of orange, amber, avocado and gold are predominant.

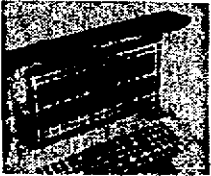

Older furniture pieces left over from the former Eglit home were united with new and exciting items skillfully blended.

The entrance hall has a terrazo floor. The living room is at the right, the family room straight ahead, Dr. Eglit's Preparation is made in the family room for complete enjoyment of modern features. Furnishings in the home are a blend of items cherished and retained from a former residence and interesting pieces especially purchased.

Santa's Silver Coin Hoop

Christmas money gift sets tongues wagging as Saint Nick makes presentation in a unique way

By Muriel Mercer

AT CHRISTMAS many money gifts often demand a twist to keep them from becoming repetitious. For a large table decoration to set tongues wagging, try a Santa on a rocket, flying through a ring of dangling silver coins; half dollars, quarters and even dimes and nickels. Adding to this mint, Santa is shown releasing a green net sack of colorful gifts from a parachute. Snowy rooftops and church steeples with their crosses, nestle in the village below.

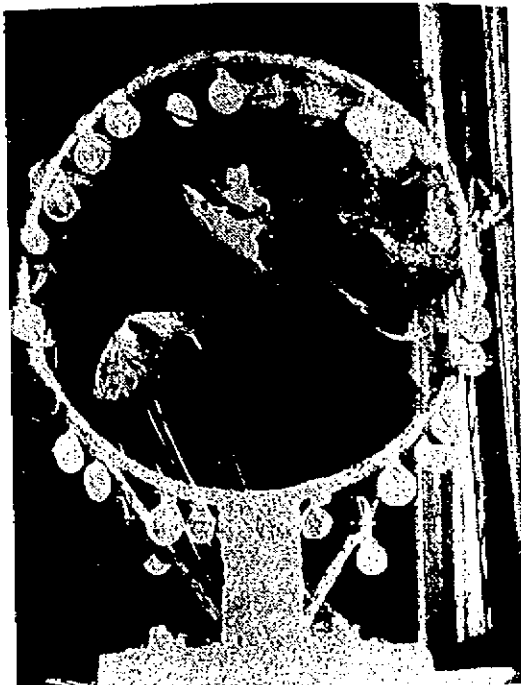

The hoop from which the money is suspended, must be sturdy. The one used here is an old basketball hoop, which was removed from the garage door. Scrubbed and sanded, it was then covered with foil which had been cut in strips, wrapped around the ring and scotch taped at the ends.

A two-inch-thick block of wood, 10 inches across and 16 inches long was placed flat. On this, the brace which is attached to the ring was fastened solidly with screws about four inches from one end of the wood block. This holds the hoop upright.

PURCHASE an inexpensive rocket from a toy store. The thinnest of copper wire, that used to make flowers, suspends the rocket from top center of the ring. Attach one wire to front and two near rear. Separate wires to prevent rocket from twisting in space. Drop rocket to middle of ring.

The Santa pictured was made of cloth and stuffed with cotton. The legs were wired. However, wired figures may be purchased.

For a money gift, use washed and, if possible, polished coins. Cut strips of transparent, magnetic mending tape, five to six inches long for silver dollars (if you can find any) or measure tape to whatever coin you use, before cutting. Put coin in center of strip edgewise. Press material around edge and flatten on both sides. Do not bring tape together when finished. Instead, just barely have ends meet. Then tape over hoop, using both ends flat. Otherwise coins will turn on hoop. Dollar bills may be folded and enclosed in foil balls. Suspend from ring with silver cord, or colored strings.

A PARACHUTE partially opened is made of heavy wire. In illustration wire coat hangers were cut with wire cutters and covered with red cloth. Each wire end of chute has a ribbon attached to its point, with cement. Ribbons are as long as you wish them to be from the net sack you have made and filled with foil covered candies and bright ribbon tied dummy packages. Ribbons attached to the chute will be graduated in length, as the chute is arranged to look as though it is being dropped from rocket. Prepare this in advance of coating wooden base, as it is fresher if coated as late as possible to presentation of gift.

To cover base, buy a small amount of plaster of Paris. Mix half a cup at a time, as large masses may harden and become unusable. Mix with water. Spread all over base including sides and foot of bracket. Throw sparkle on while plaster is wet. Press glitter lightly with flat of blade. Cover upper part of bracket with cotton or foil.

For village miniatures, foil covered cardboard, such as that sold with packages of sweet rolls, may be washed off and dried. Cut into three quarter inch wide strips.

Also have some narrower bits. Cut tiny pieces, folding in half to resemble roofs. While plaster is wet on the base, press these cardboard edges into mixture lightly in attractive groupings.

THE CHURCH steeples and crosses are cut from the cross sections of plastic tomato baskets and inserted in plaster in front of larger "roofs."

Suspend parachute from center of top with thin copper wire. Attach to top of hoop and weight down with candies, with net sack on its side. Spill candies and packages on base. Have a tiny gnome standing at sack opening. Pull ribbons taut, using common pins to secure sack.

Straddle Santa over the rocket tucking his wired legs around the space ship. Arrange his beard and scarf to look windblown. Place a piece of hard transparent plastic over his face for a space helmet. Fasten this with tape around figure's neck. Cover this with his coat collar and scarf.

For the finishing touch, use blue angel hair. Feather it to resemble clouds and sky and to hide suspension wires. Spray on snow flakes to cover any undesirable features and enjoy a real silvery snowy.

MERRY, MERRY CHRISTMAS!

The Navel Establishes Beachhead in Fashion

By Mary Ellis Carlton

Southland Magazine Fashion Editor

A FEW MONTHS ago it appeared that, come summer, the female population would be sailing off for the beach at half-mast.

But now the "Navel Look" is taking over where Rudi Gernreich and his much-publicized topless bathing suit left off.

"We had to come up with something," said one fashion commentator at recent press week showings in Los Angeles of new resort-summer swimsuit collections.

So California bathing suit designers have slashed suits to the navel, barely covered the hips and bust with black velvet strips and veiled the feminine body in provocative see-through lace.

THE FIRM of Rose Marie Reid introduced a whole line of bathing suit accessories, explaining:

"The suits are so bare, we came out with hats, bracelets and necklaces so the girls can be wearing a little something."

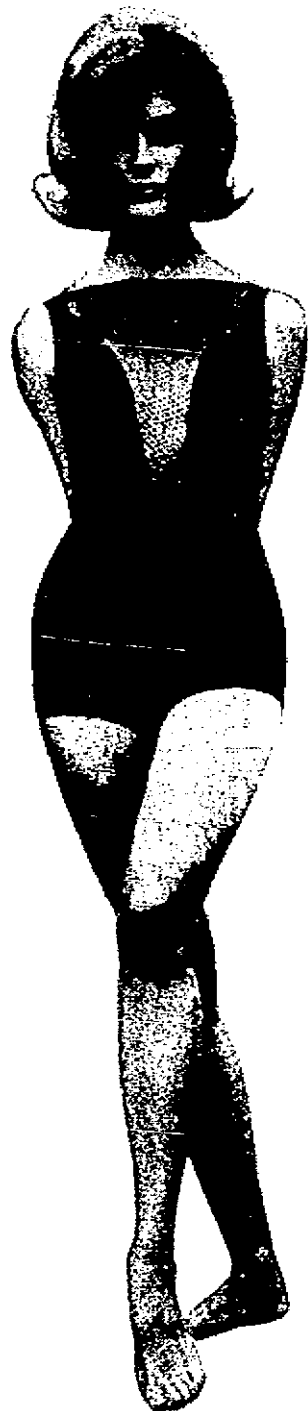

Cole of California showed a collection of "Scandal Suits." One number in black had a navel-deep V, splitting wide to the shoulders and baring the inside half of the bust, then filling it in again with black peekaboo fishnet.

Cole cut the hips out of another suit, bared it to the armhole and inserted some more fishnet.

Then there was the one-piece bikini, a couple of strips of fabric joined in the middle with transparent nylon, fishnet or nude-colored fabric.

DeWeese showed the "lapel look." The suit looks high-necked at first glance but zips down below the navel to form wide lapels over the bust.

BARE SHOULDERS are set for love affair with sun in this strapless matte knit by Rose Marie Reid. Relaxed fit and unique qualities of arnel and nylon moves suit provocatively with lines of the body.

 left," says Jerry Rockwell, one of America's foremost toy designers (and, incidentally, brother of artist Norman Rockwell) "is that in the early days people thought toys were meant to break. Today, we know the durability of a toy is one of its most important values. There are bound to be some disappointments come Christmas morning, for not even a jet-propelled Santa Claus can handle the long lists of modern American youth. But don't worry about the kids. Most of them have already got their lists made out for next year."

DID YOU KNOW... THE SOUTH AND WEST SIDES OF YOUR HOME WEAR OUT FASTER THAN THE OTHER TWO?
 YES, IT'S TRUE. THE SUMMER SUN and the WINTER WIND and RAIN deteriorate those sides faster because they are exposed to the elements more directly and longer than the other two sides.

Thin slices of veal, mushroom gravy and sour cream are among the chief ingredients of this tasty dish that is fanned around a center of rice.

By Mildred K. Flanary
 Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

THERE'S no fussing in the kitchen with today's quickie. Viennese Veal starts with thin slices of veal, so invitingly brown and crisp around the edges that it's hard for the cook or kibitzers to keep from nibbling in advance. For party serving, fan steaks on top of a big bowlful of cooked rice. And because it is showy fun and so-good eating, keep the rest of the meal simple—buttered vegetables to go with the main dish, fruit-filled cookies for dessert, and lots of good, hot coffee.

Viennese Veal
 1½ pounds cubed veal steaks
 2 tablespoons salad oil
 1 can (about 10 oz.) mushroom gravy
 ½ cup water
 1 carton (8 ounces) dairy sour cream
 ¼ cup chopped parsley
 Cut veal into serving-size pieces; saute in salad oil in large frying pan over medium heat 5 minutes on each side, or until tender; remove veal to a heated platter; keep hot while you make the gravy.

 Pour all excess fat from pan; stir in mushroom gravy and water; heat to boiling, stirring constantly; simmer 2 to 3 minutes.
 Remove from heat; stir in sour cream and parsley until well blended; pour around meat; serve at once, for sour cream may curdle if reheated. Makes 6 servings.

Recipe of the Week

BEAN SOUP is a hearty winter dish and it is made especially interesting in this week's prize recipe submitted by Clyde E. Osborne, 1840 Stearnlee Ave., Long Beach 90816, because it has seven different kinds of beans among its ingredients. The recipe:

International Bean Soup
 (3 cups of seven different kinds of beans)
 ½ cup soy beans (China)
 ½ cup mung beans (India)
 ½ cup large lima beans (Peru)
 ½ cup garbanzos (Mexico)
 ½ cup lentils (Israel)
 ½ cup small white Navy beans (U.S.A.)
 ¾ cup kuromame (Japanese black beans)
 19 cups of water
 1 cup celery stalks and leaves, cut in small strips
 ½ tsp. celery seeds
 1½ large onions, chopped
 1 large clove garlic, chopped fine
 ½ tsp. cloves, ground
 ½ tsp. ground pepper
 2 ham bones with some meat
 Combine beans and soak overnight. Combine all ingredients and cook in 6-quart pressure-cooker for 40 minutes at 15 lbs. pressure. Let cool to down position of pressure indicator slowly. Remove ham bone and cut ham into small cubes; return ham to soup.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90812.

Cheating Rife

By Howard E. Kent

QUESTION: Is there much cheating among students in our schools and colleges?

ANSWER: Unhappily, the evidence indicates that American students do a great deal of cheating. In one study of scholastic cheating, a group of 78 college students were placed in three different situations in which they had opportunities to cheat on examinations.

Forty-six of the students cheated in at least one exam, and most of these 46 cheated on more than one occasion.

Research on cheating also reveals:

Persons with low grades tend to cheat most.

Cheaters are less self-sufficient than their fellow students.

Cheaters are more neurotic than other students. Sorority membership seems to be associated with an increased incidence of cheating.

QUESTION: Why do students cheat?

ANSWER: For one or more of many reasons, including these:

They fall behind in school work.

Too much pressure is exerted on them to succeed.

They realize others are cheating, and they don't want to be at a disadvantage.

They have never been taught that cheating is immoral.

QUESTION: What is the remedy for the cheating habit?

ANSWER: Cheating can be reduced by eliminating the opportunities for cheating in the classroom. But reducing the opportunity does not necessarily reduce the inclination. The true answer lies deeper.

The youngster must be taught to stand on his own merit, for better or worse. He must realize that he, himself, is the one who suffers when he cheats; for cheating defeats the essential purpose of school—which is not, after all, to make grades, but to acquire knowledge.

Finally, schools should avoid overloading the student and putting him in a position where he feels he must choose between failing or cheating.

meaning "lions." The term Loven was used by an ancestor whose shop was trademarked by a sign composed of two lions. The shield for these lineages, held by the Van Lovens of Holland, is silver emblazoned with a red fleur-de-lis below a small silver fox on a red stripe.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the source of LERMA.—A. L., San Pedro.

A. L.: LERMA originated in 12th century Spain. Two root words evolved into Lerma, the archaic "Erm" meaning "wild or deserted home site," and "Hermo," denoting "ermine fur," used by the noble progenitor to embellish his clothing. The Lerma shield from Castile is divided in four parts. Two are blue, decorated with an inverted silver crescent; the others are gold centered with a gold cross with a fleur-de-lis at the end of each arm.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the background on MOORE. — R.R., Huntington Beach; B.R., Lomita smashed photographic equipment and chased them out of the tank. After she all but drowned another diver, the crew decided to stay out and let her alone.
R.R., B.R.: MOORE is basically English, given to a family living on a moor, an area of uncultivated pastureland. Thirteenth century ancestral records list Adam Aite (at the) More or Moore of Oxford, England. The Moore shield granted in 1216 is covered with ermine, decorated with three gold roses on a blue chevron. English Moores settled in Ireland in the late 1200s and became prominent historically. Early American settlers include John Moore, born about 1610 in England, who later settled in Massachusetts.

However, when Marineland added another smaller female to its exhibit, the two were placed in the same enclosure along with two striped dolphins. Within a month the two whales were bosom pals, playing together and lunging out of the water, sometimes standing on their heads together making sounds to the accompaniment of streams of bubbles at each other. It was the end of Bubbles' period of bad temper, and it sealed the success of the pioneer school for whales.

When Bimbo — 17 feet long and about 3,000 pounds. — joined the cast at Marineland, he quickly adapted himself and became as skilled as any of his fellow thespians. Now a veteran of six years on stage and a little old and bored with it all, Bimbo is in semi-retirement, performing only occasionally.

OTHER WHALES have been lost before reaching their retirement age, for their afflictions are varied and there are no handy medical books on whales. Brown has had the untiring help of veterinary pathologists of the Los Angeles County Livestock Department in postmortem research. Drug manufacturers have cooperated to supply medicines for experimenting.

Bubbles' trouble with the tube is a common danger for once the mammals learn to accept unfamiliar foods, they are willing to swallow anything lying around loose — metal, rocks, divers' gloves. Impacted digestive tracts on a number of occasions have been handled as was Bubbles', often successfully. But the staff scours the tanks constantly to keep out foreign objects. A case history is kept on every mammal, and a mass of data is piling up in a brand new field of research.

Although David Brown is being recognized as one of the foremost men in his field, he claims no degrees, no specialized studies at famous schools, and deftly changes the subject when the conversation turns on himself. He came to the United States from England after he got out of the Royal Navy, he says, and learned what he knows by working with and studying marine life. He has been at Marineland since its beginning, more than 10 years ago. Publishers have asked him for a book, but his time and his interests so far have been applied elsewhere, leaving little enough opportunity to enjoy his home, wife and two children.

Marineland's next project is a killer whale, when the Geronimo can find one. A killer whale was captured recently in Canada, but has since died. Similarly, one captured a few years ago in Newport Bay had come into shallow water to die. The killers are not common off Southern California, but sooner or later one will find its way into the classroom of the world's first whale college.

New-Type Flu Seen

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

A FLU epidemic stemming from infection by a new-type influenza virus is predicted by a New York scientist.

Dr. Daniel Widlock explains that 90% of New York's population now has antibodies (disease-fighting substances) against Asian, or A-2, flu. The antibodies are carried in the blood.

Past experience has shown that antibody saturation has preceded a change in viral type, he says.

"This population is now fertile soil for the emergence of a virus variant," he states.

Flu vaccines currently in use won't protect against a new virus, he says.

Dr. Widlock is deputy director of the bureau of laboratories of the New York City Department of Health.

The epidemic should be expected "in the near future," he says.

THAT NEW technique of transfusing blood to unborn "Rh babies" continues to offer promise, a New Zealand researcher says.

Its use in the first 35 cases has resulted in survival of 10 healthy babies, says Dr. Graham C. Liggins of the University of Auckland.

These 10 infants otherwise might have been stillborn or have died soon after birth, he says.

"Rh babies" are those with a serious blood disorder stemming from an "Rh factor" in the blood.

ABOUT ONE in every 15 persons with measles suffers from a potentially serious complication, a new study discloses.

The finding is based on a survey of 53,008 measles cases in large cities in England and Wales.

Thirty-eight of every 1,000 suffered severe bronchitis or pneumonia, 25 of every 1,000 had middle-ear inflammation, and 4 per 1,000 had neurological disturbances. One of every 1,000 had brain inflammation or impaired consciousness.

Which shows once again that measles isn't always a benign condition, says a report in British Medical Journal.

However, these adverse conditions can be prevented. A measles vaccine now is available for general use, although many parents are not aware of this.

A TABLET containing malic acid, which occurs in apples, appears to be as effective as toothbrushing in cleaning the teeth.

The finding is that of three Liverpool, England, researchers who report on trials with 1,500 children aged 11½ to 13½ years.

In the British Dental Journal they say the test showed that the tablets appear to reduce tooth decay. The malic acid in the tablets stimulates the flow of saliva to keep tooth surfaces clean.

AN EXPERIMENTAL drug called TFL (trifluoroleucine) has been able to check lymphatic leukemia in laboratory mice.

Twenty mice have been without symptoms since they were treated with TFL and now have begun to die of old age.

The compound, prepared by researchers at the University of Chicago, has been turned over to the National Cancer Institute for screening.

DOCTORS ARE reporting cases of abnormal babies who cry like a cat in pain.

The infants are said to have the Cri Du Chat Syndrome. Cri du chat is French for "cry of the cat."

Babies with the strange disorder have severe mental retardation, an unusually small head, a downward slant of eyes, a flattened nasal bridge, small low-set ears and a small lower jaw.

The condition is related to loss of genetic material—absence of a fragment of a heredity-carrying chromosome.

Some of the victims display a softening of the vocal chords which might account for the cat-like cries.

Dana's California

By Vera Williams

Southland Magazine Book Editor

IN 1840, an extraordinary book appeared on the east coast, extraordinary because it was written by a literate seaman who not only had sailed from Boston around the Horn into the Pacific and return in 1834-36, but who had a good deal to say about life in that remote Mexican province called California.

The sailor's name was Richard Henry Dana, Jr. and his book was called "Two Years Before the Mast." The book became a "best seller" in its time because personal accounts of sea adventures made good reading—almost as good as revealing glimpses of California, then only a dream of many men.

As the years passed, Dana hungered to see California again, and he made another voyage in 1859-60.

Now, more than a century after that second sailing, a new edition of "TWO YEARS BEFORE THE MAST" has been published by The Ward Ritchie Press, Los Angeles, in two handsome, profusely illustrated, slipcased volumes. It is the first publication in the complete manuscript form as Dana wrote it, restoring portions omitted in previous printings. The restored portions appear in brown ink, while the text as published in 1840 appears in black, without interrupting the continuity.

The volumes also contain portions of Journals and Letters, edited with notes by Richard Haskell Kemble; more than 100 illustrations, including original two-color drawings by Robert Weinstein, eight paintings in full color from Dana's time, numerous historical prints, charts; and a glossary of nautical terms used by Dana in his text.

The new edition is being distributed by Lane Book Co., Menlo Park, Calif. at $19.95 until Christmas; $24.75 after Christmas. For the book collector, historian, scholar, sailing enthusiast and interested layman, it would make a wonderful Christmas gift.

on nature and wild-life.

Winner of many writing honors and author of dozens of books, Montgomery has spent three score years tramping the back country and studying the out-of-doors.

His is no encyclopedic dissertation on animals, but stories spun by a man who knows first hand and intimately the creatures who inhabit the American mountains, deserts and wildernesses.

Elizabeth Mavor has written a lively historical biography of Elizabeth Chudleigh, 18th Century belle in "THE VIRGIN MISTRESS" (Doubleday, $4.50) inaugurating the new "Women of the World" series. Elizabeth began life as the daughter of an impoverished colonel, and ended it worth three

DON'T LOOK on the map for the desert kingdom of Al Khadra . . . it isn't there. Al Khadra is the name Edward R. F. Sheehan has given his mythical kingdom in his stimulating new novel, "KINGDOM OF ILLUSION" (Random House, $4.95). Sheehan is qualified to write about international power politics in which Al Khadra is enmeshed, having witnessed first hand the wheeling and dealing of great nations with a small nation as a pawn. From 1957 to 1961, Sheehan served as press officer at the American embassies in Cairo and Beirut. Following graduation from Boston College and service in the U.S. Navy, he spent three years abroad as a foreign correspondent working in Europe, North Africa and the Middle East for New England newspapers. He covered such events as the Hungarian uprising and the Suez crisis.

Vibrant action amid kaleidoscopic color and pagentry dominate the "KINGDOM OF ILLUSION" as the author unfolds an amusing tale concerning political figures and their struggle for individual power and fame. The story revolves about the American ambassador Sean Sebastian Fitzgibbon and Al Khadra's young prime minister, Mustafa ibn Mabrouk. Both the American ambassador and the Russian ambassador are trying to woo the young prime minister with promises of gifts for himself and his country in order to get control of Al Khadra.

EPIC IN sweep is "THE LONG DEATH, The Last Days of the Plains Indians" by Ralph K. Andrist (Macmillan, $8.95), the story of the Indians of the great plains and the white men who came as traders, soldiers, miners, ranchers, and drove them from the Apalachians to the Rockies and the sea. "The Long Death" is a roll call of titans whose names are history: Red Cloud of the Sioux, Black Kettle of the Cheyennes, Crazy Horse, Sitting Bull, Chief Joseph of the Nez Percés.

Snow Lanterns for a Tree

By Lorena Fleissig

DECORATING a tree has exciting possibilities for handicraft. Even a few ornaments made by the family members will make the tree seem more important. They will be the ones that are pointed out with pride of accomplishment.

Snow lanterns are home made sparklers that will be effective foils against the freshness of an evergreen tree.

To make these six-inch ornaments requires the center sections of the long, white, pressed-paper egg cartons which hold the extra large eggs. Look in the carton when purchasing to note the 3-inch-tall row of center dividers.

EACH CARTON provides for 2½ finished ornaments. To make 24 of these shimmering lanterns save up 10 of the egg cartons.

With the scissors, cut down through the centers of the egg cups on either side of the middle dividers, then cut straight across between each one. Trim away any ragged edges and place one on the reverse of the other.

With white liquid glue placed on the triangle and around the rim, clamp together with clothespins to dry. Allow ample time. In the meantime, make the loops for hanging. They may be made of fine wire strung through a needle and forced into the side of the extreme end, forming a long loop. Or as in the illustration, on this page, use the regular ornament hangers which are available in small packets. They are in hook form.

OPEN THE HOOK so that the wire resembles a big C. Simply press the center of the wire over the thumb to bend into an open triangle, the C's bent inward. Pierce through the top end of the lantern with a heavy needle or safety pin to make holes for the C ends of the wire. Use another hook for hanging to the branch.

The ornament is now ready for painting. Hold firmly by the wire while brushing on thick white gesso, an already mixed white water paint to be found in paint stores.

Apply the gesso richly, slide the brush in the openings of the lanterns and creamily into the crevices of the slightly bumpy paper. While paint is wet, sprinkle on white or glass glitter, keeping an adequate sized box below to catch and save the excess glitter.

Glitter is available at hobby shops and most dime stores. Glass glitter is more expensive than other types but gives an especially icy or glistening effect. It is applied from a seasoning salt shaker with a perforated plastic lid.

The ornaments should be pinned to the bottom of a curtain in order to dry without touching anything. When dry they will be prickly and should be wrapped in squares of tissue to protect the hands.

Note: After using the gesso, soak and wash out the brush as directions advise. A two-inch paint brush is adequate—and seal the top of the paint can extra tight. Gesso is a great help to the crafter who wants to get a quick effect for it will cover almost any type of wood or other material and dry in minimum time.

1. ROCKING HORSE

2. STICK HORSE

3. WIGGLE-WAGGLE DOG (it goes around corners)

There's fun for the kids in these toys, but also pleasure for the elders in making them.

MANY happy hours are ahead for the preschooler who has one or more of these playthings to enjoy, and the satisfaction of seeing the kids enjoy such action toys as the stick horse, rocking horse and the wiggle-waggle dog, all in Sketchbook plan S-189, is more than adequate compensation for a job well done by Dad.

These colorful, simple-to-make action toys are planned for Dad's workshop.

The operating principals of all three toys are extremely simple and familiar. There is no "magic" in making them work beyond reasonable care in fitting pieces together and keeping glue off moving parts. The Sketchbook plan shows parts and materials lists plus step-by-step directions for all three projects. Full size patterns for the horse and dog heads are included as well as finishing and painting instructions.

TO OBTAIN Sketchbook plan S-189 for making these pieces, send name and address and 50 cents to Building Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90812.

Light Up With Harmony

By Steve Ellingson

WHEN Thomas Edison invented the incandescent light bulb, his object was solely to provide illumination, and he did just that without beauty or frills. Interior decorators, however, soon took a vital interest in the new mode and found that electric lighting has many esthetic applications beside just casting light.

Lighting today has much to do with the mood and decor of any room and can quickly change those features. Areas can be made stimulating, exciting, gay, restful, dreamy... all with lamps.

THE LAMP pictured on this page is dramatic and versatile as a decorating tool, and is made in the manner of basket weaving. Strips of medium weight drawing paper are woven into quarter-inch dowels (sold by all building material dealers). You may use other materials such as ribbon, rick rack or flexible wood trim. The full size pattern for making the lamp gives complete details.

To obtain the pattern, specify No. 356 and send name and address with 50 cents in coin, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

Versatile lamp, shown with Patricia Blair of NBC's Daniel Boone show, is product of one of man's ancient arts—basket weaving.

DOG PARADE

All Jolly Pals

By Eleanor Avery Price

WHEN my phone rings, about half the callers on the other end of the line are going to ask me to tell them what kind of purebred dog they should get that is medium-small in size, short-coated, nice to have around. And, of course, that doesn't cost too much. As to the cost, I can only say that a good puppy does not come cheap. The breeders have spent a considerable sum in keeping the dam in good health, stud fees are costly, and raising a litter of puppies on wholesome food and having a veterinarian check them and give them inoculations takes money.

There are several breeds of dogs that are medium-small in size and short-coated. Pictured with this article are basenjis, the barkless dogs native to central Africa and once of ancient Egypt. The basenji stands around 16 or 17 inches at the shoulders and weighs not more than 24 pounds. His coat is short and silky, either chestnut red, pure black, or black and tan, all with white feet, chest and tail tip.

THE BASENJI is not mute and can make himself heard in other ways than barking. He is very intelligent, speedy, proud, a fine hound for pointing, retrieving and hunting. By nature he is obedient. He can be trained to stay in his own yard, but is so active he can walk right up a chain-link fence and on over—when not trained.

Another medium-small dog with no coat problems is the short-coated border collie, a little doll for children and a fine dog for controlling sheep, chickens, etc. The breed also includes a long-coat. In either case he is black and white with a little tan. He has very expressive eyes, and the ears are semi-pricked or pricked. He is not registered with the American Kennel Club but with a sheepdog association. There are not many border collies around, sadly enough. The most noted breeder in California is James Shearer, 6391 Southside Rd., Hollister.

THE BEAGLE is another good, not-too-large, smooth dog. He is great with kids, makes a good rabbit, and is one of the most popular of breeds.

The smooth-haired dachshund is also popular, and a very merry fellow, vigorous and tireless in spite of his short legs. Indoors he is companionable and affectionate, and is quick to announce strangers.

Also high in the popularity poll is America's own Boston terrier, a graceful, intelligent dog. He is not a fighter, although he can well defend himself if need be. His greatest love is his home and the members in it.

The smooth fox terrier is gay, active, inquisitive. He makes an especially good pal for a boy.

As you check your Christmas list, don't overlook the humane organizations. Give, if you can. Or maybe someone on your list might appreciate a paid-up membership.

Time to Start Thinking of Roses

For a beautiful golden rose that holds its color well, it's hard to equal the Buccaneer for Long Beach gardens. It is a hardy one.

By Joe Littlefield

MONTHS OF December, January and February witness the big push for bare-root planting of roses, deciduous fruit trees, and deciduous shade trees.

Ida D. Boyington, who does an excellent job of editing the monthly Pacific Rose Society Bulletin, publishes interesting rose comments by W. S. Hillman Jr., who won the district trophy and several others at the past October American National Rose Show held in Phoenix, Ariz. Hillman names some of the teas which have done well in his garden despite obstacles of mildew conditions and winds at times. If you haven't made up your mind which new roses you plan to add in your garden ... check this list of roses.

HYBRID TEAS: Angel Wings, Autumn, Capistrano, Charlotte Armstrong, Chrysler Imperial, Christian Dior, Eclipse, First Love, Fred Howard, Helen Traubel, Peace, President Hoover, Sutter's Gold, and Tiffany.

GRANDIFLORAS: Buccaneer, El Capitan, Montezuma, Pink Parfait, Queen Elizabeth, Roundelay, Startire.

FLORIBUNDAS: Circus, Golden Slippers, Heat Wave, Lillibet, Little Darling, Roserelf, Tom Tom, and Winifred Coulter.

BEFORE PLANTING bare-root roses or trees, remember—it isn't what you see on top of the ground that helps the plants as much as what sort of a home will the roots have to grow in. If the soil is hard, extremely porous and sandy, or just poorly, the roses will not grow their full maximum performance, or yield best bloom production.

Work some planting mix or conditioned humus into the soil to make it soft and crumbly, which will be about half of the organic material and half of the soil dug to make the holes for the roses which means you've added some organic matter, which improves the soil for best plant growth.

After bare-root planting, whether roses, fruit trees or shade trees, the most important factor to establish is to firm the soil thoroughly so it holds water long enough to soak the plant roots thoroughly. Plants must be kept moist until new growth sprouts.

One of our readers, Lorenzo W. Barton, tells why he likes two old-timer roses. He has discarded hybrid tea roses, Kings Ransom, White Knight, Montezuma, Chrysler Imperial, Queen Elizabeth, Peace, and some others, as well as several older varieties.

HIS FAVORITE rose is Maman Cochet (1893 introduction), a tea rose, not a hybrid tea, not approved by the AARS he's sure. He finds the foliage good, as with tea rose Rosette Delizy (1922 introduction), and both have the tea scent. Maman Cochet is pink, Rosette Delizy is yellow in cool weather and changes to dark pink. Unlike some hybrid tea roses, these two have not been sprayed or dusted with any insecticide or fungicide, nor pruned, except to shape the bushes. Barton believes Maman Cochet can be kept blooming 12 months of the year.

Established deciduous fruit trees should be sprayed early in December. The spray ingredients mixed with water should be an oil and fungicide spray combined. Oil spray to control the overwintering pests, the fungus spray for shot hole fungus. Soil should be thoroughly moist before spraying. Trees should be drenched with spray, also the soil around the trunks.

Fungus spray should be used again, just as the buds swell and before they open, which is January or the forepart of February.

Roses should be sprayed with the combined soil spray and fungus spray in January or the forepart of February.

Roses should be sprayed with this same combined spray when they have been pruned. Soil too, for roses, should be thoroughly moist before spraying, then ground sprayed after the roses have been spray drenched.

How to Dwarf Trees

Tree dwarfing, or bonzai, is a hobby being taken up by hundreds of the country's gardeners, professional and amateur, and rightly so. To be successful, one must be a perfectionist and follow complicated rules, but the end result is worth the effort.

Just issued is "Bonzai—The Art of Dwarfing Trees" (Appleton-Century, 60 E. 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y., $5.95) in which Ann Kimball Pipe translates the mystique of an ancient Oriental art into modern American terminology, and takes the new approach of explaining causes and effects instead of setting down complicated rules. The reader emerges with an understanding of how a tree grows, the whys of pruning, shaping, underfeeding and underwatering as well as a knowledge of the hardness and special needs of each species.

More than 250 illustrations show stage-by-stage shaping procedures, and line drawings illustrate detailed procedures.

Troubles We Don't Talk About

What Troubles? Complaints so personal that few people talk about them—burning, irritation and itching in the sensitive perianal (rectal and genital) area.

What Causes Them? Many things, but especially the lack of hygiene. Doctors say that lack of proper cleanliness often prevents the condition from clearing up. This is true because the perianal area is repeatedly contaminated with potentially harmful bacteria and fungi.

What Do Specialists Recommend? Thorough and regular cleansing, particularly after each bowel movement. This halts the vicious "itch-scratch" cycle. In many cases, this alone will solve the problem of burning, itching, and irritation.

Why Not Plain, Ordinary Soap? Because soap washes away natural skin oils. Frequent and repeated use of soap can cause dryness and irritation, resulting in itching.

What Should Be Used? A new, foamy aerosol medication called ANULL. It is a gentle but thorough cleanser to be used on toilet tissue or cotton. ANULL is an antibacterial, antifungal cleanser—soothing, emollient and protective. Soothes burning and irritation. Helps to protect against secondary infection of raw, irritated skin.

The Best Way to stop itch-irritation is never let it get started. Begin regular use of ANULL this week. Or if you suffer now, begin relief in seconds with ANULL. It relieves itch-irritation without local pain killers that can mask symptoms and postpone sound medical treatment. If your discomfort persists by all means see your doctor. Ask your doctor whether it isn't wise to use ANULL with other medications.

Effective Deodorant: Women especially, can be troubled with embarrassing odor. ANULL is an effective deodorant foam because of its superior cleansing and antibacterial actions. Makes you feel fresher. Secure. Completely groomed.

Most people, after they have tried ANULL, never use toilet tissue without it. And so inexpensive. You'll find ANULL in your pharmacy.

In Fashion

CATALINA disguised a black bikini in a billowing blouse of transparent nylon. Tied in the back, it can be untied for suntanning.

A black lace show-stopper by Rose Marie Reid was worn by a bare-bosomed model. It featured strategically placed sequins for modesty.

Elisabeth Stewart draped fabric over the shoulder and bust but exposed the middle to below the navel.

The suit didn't have a back, either.

A long-sleeved, black lace overblouse by Cole could be worn with sunglasses—or a nude-colored form-fitting bathing suit underneath.

THEN THERE were bathing suits for swimmers.

Surfing, a big sport in California, inspired many suits with laced-up trunks and bras that couldn't be lost in the pounding surf.

Inspired by the men's business suit with two pairs of pants, Rose Marie Reid came up with "mix-and-match" bathing suits.

The trunks and bras, along with such accessories as skirts and tops, can be purchased separately in matching or contrasting colors.

What fabric there was to the suits included gold-plated jersey and silver lame, stretchable synthetics, cotton and—with Catalina—shaker knits that looked like sweaters.

And there was DeWeese's Indian Squaw suit—complete with feather headress—and a pirate suit with knee-high black boots and a parrot.

But it's plain to see, the bare look will rate the most aye-yi-yi votes at the beach next summer.

HAVING KNOWN slim, conscientious Hal Solomon for more than a dozen years, I was extremely pleased a few months ago when I learned that he was the new host and owner at the Coral Room, 4130 Paramount Blvd., near Carson Street.

I knew this meant that the Coral Room's patrons would encounter rewarding new standards of excellence in the cuisine and service at this establishment, long known as one of the Long Beach-Lakewood area's better restaurants. All of this has come true, with Hal—drawing on his experience of 15 years in the restaurant field—improving the Coral Room in numerous direct or subtle ways. He has redecorated the banquet room, which seats 60, and enhanced the walls throughout the restaurant with thought-provoking oil paintings by artist Mario de la Cruz Jr.

Recently he introduced a new menu with such epicurean pleasures as prime rib au jus with creamy horseradish sauce ($3.50 on the dinner), marvelous Monterey abalone sauteed in butter ($2.50) and such succulent broiled steaks as the large filet wrapped in bacon ($3.95) and the petite filet, for smaller appetites ($3.50). These are accompanied by selected relishes, gigantic salads, steaming baked potatoes with cheese sauce, light and dark sourdough breads and beverage. Also featured are a lobster-steak combination, fancy varieties of chicken and other sea food specialties.

SUNDAY TREAT—Painstaking attention to detail, use of the finest food ingredients and lots of imagination are some of the reasons behind the success of Moreno's Restaurant, Long Beach's newest Mexican restaurant at 3490 Long Beach Blvd. Host Norbert Moreno and his attractive brunette wife Doris have created a beautiful, original restaurant which offers such artistic cuisine as enchiladas Sonora-style ($2.95), prepared with ground corn, cheese, eggs and sour cream; camaron de la Parrilla ($2.95), giant marinated shrimp in a red sauce; and gallina a la Moreno ($3.25), marinated chicken in a scrumptious sauce. Sunday dinners are served from 3 p.m. on.

KILLING HEELS. Women who wear high, stiletto-heeled shoes need be afraid of no man. Their shoes constitute lethal weapons. Any woman standing in such a shoe exerts more force on a small area than an elephant's foot on the surface it treads. Dr. Ahmen, a surgeon in the Liverpool Hospital, tells of two cases in which women caused fractured skulls with blows from their heels. In the first case a young woman hit a 31-year-old man on the head in a saloon brawl. In the second case a girl removed her shoe and pounded another woman on the head in a street fight. In both cases the injured parties recovered, but at first the man suffered fits and the injured woman lost her power of speech.

BRAIN DRAIN. Between 1949 and 1961 approximately 4,500 top scientists emigrated from West Germany to the U.S. The German government is now seeking inducements to lure them back to the homeland.

EUROPEAN WESTERNS. Several years ago Hollywood film producers abandoned low-priced Westerns -- in fact, turned over the genre to TV. But then European theater-owners began to wail, explaining that Westerns had almost always proved immensely profitable. They demanded the flow of Westerns continue. When Hollywood balked, Italian and German film producers decided to hire American actors, shoot Westerns in Spain, Yugoslavia and Italy. Seven from Texas, for example, was filmed in Spain by an Italian company. Gun Fight at Red Sands was filmed in Italy and Spain. Actors like Rod Cameron, Lex Barker and Bob Steele, long passed over in Hollywood, are finding renewed careers overseas in these new, cheap, European-made Westerns.

BULLFIGHTING is losing some of its popularity in Spain, especially among young adults. A Spanish government report reveals: "Our young people now prefer to watch football matches rather than bullfights." Eventually bullfights may deteriorate into a curiosity attraction for tourists.

FOREIGNERS OUT. Interracial marriages between Japanese girls and American GI's are on the way out. In contrast to the thousands of Japanese girls who were so eager to marry American soldiers following World War II, the present generation of Nipponese prefer to marry men of their own nationality through the mial, a meeting of prospective couples arranged by a matchmaker. There are still a few mixed marriages that do take place despite parental opposition, but for the most part, a Japanese girl's parents prefer to choose their daughter's mate from the families of Japanese friends.

OLDER CHILDBEARING. Women who give birth at age 50 and over are becoming more numerous. So reports British surgeon Dr. Donald Frommer. A careful study of hospital records reveals that the average age at which women's fertility now ceases is four years later than it was two generations ago.

PARADE CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

CHEAP RECORDS. There is only so much classical music in the world, and any symphony orchestra can record it. As a result, East European countries are now flooding the Western markets with inexpensive record albums. For example, Artia, the cultural organization of Czechoslovakia, puts out record albums which cost less than $1. They are undercutting prices in Great Britain and France.

FOR TEENAGERS. The British Medical Association, alarmed at the rise of venereal disease in teenagers, has prepared a booklet on the subject which is now selling in 1,400 British drugstores for one shilling (14¢). It's called V.D. -- The Facts. In this country the TV networks have killed programs pointing up the dangers of V.D. on the grounds that it is not a "polite subject."

BRIGHT GIRLS AND MARRIAGE. Of the 6,600 high school students who scored highest in the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test of 1957 -- 14% of the girls and 9% of the boys have quit college. Why do more bright girls than boys drop out? To these clever young women the MRS. degree means more than the B.A. or the B.S. The bright girl who attends a coed university largely populated by boys majoring in engineering or business administration is the bright girl most likely to leave college for marriage. Given a choice of marriage or further education, most girls choose marriage, not only in America but in every other Western country, too.

MANUFACTURING. Los Angeles County now houses 6% of all the manufacturing establishments in the nation. Only New York tops it with 6.5%, or 18,543 establishments.

by FRED BLUMENTHAL

Five-year-old girl standing on Nimbus shows relative size of the 10-foot satellite.

Most Americans think of infrared—if they know anything about it at all—as a mysterious heat ray that cooks our dinner or ruins our shore vacation with sunburn.

Up till now, its military applications, like those of the atom a decade or so ago, have been shrouded in secrecy. Like atomic energy, the infrared ray was initially harnessed for war. But now, thanks to a little-known American satellite that lived only three weeks or so in space, it has opened up a whole new dimension of human knowledge that promises to benefit all mankind. Tomorrow, it may warn us of impending natural catastrophes—earthquakes, volcanic eruptions and floods. It may uncover rich mineral deposits buried deep in the earth. Within the next few years, infrared weathermen will enable us to plan a picnic or a vacation weeks in advance; they will tell us when to plow, plant and harvest. And infrared will answer riddles about the structure and composition of our planet and our universe that have baffled man since the dawn of time.

What is infrared? In simplest terms, it is one of a vast array of energy waves that make up what science calls the electromagnetic spectrum. But essentially, infrared is a heat wave. Everything in the universe gives off infrared heat radiations—the human body, the oceans, the polar icecaps, the distant stars. Detection of these radiations was a major goal of our scientists when they launched their new weather satellite into outer space late last August, and they succeeded far beyond their highest hopes. Appropriately named Nimbus, after the ancient Roman god of weather, the satellite was equipped not only with the customary cameras for daytime observation, but also with infrared sensors that transmitted never-before-taken nighttime photographs of the entire earth. The infrared cameras were able to look at our planet during the blackness of midnight without the refraction and distortion caused by direct sunlight.

"NIGHT EYES"

The delicate instruments crammed into Nimbus detected minute differences in heat radiations emanating from various areas of the earth's surface. Nimbus could spot the difference between a plowed and an unplowed field hundreds of miles below her orbit in space. Her "night eyes" saw the birth of gigantic storms over the frozen Antarctic continent, storms that would soon lash South America, South Africa, New Zealand and Australia. They even photographed six mysterious "hot spots" on the South Polar icecap. No one knows definitely whether they are undiscovered volcanoes smoldering beneath the Antarctic ice or merely patches of open water. But they are of such scientific importance that special Antarctic teams are now being readied to study these polar hot spots close up.

So sensitive were Nimbus' infrared cameras that they registered differences of one degree in the temperature of various ocean currents, distinguished in total darkness between rock and soil, ice and water, clouds and snow.

But like the Wright brothers' feat at Kitty Hawk, the contribution of Nimbus lies not so much in what it did in the 12,000 infrared pictures it relayed back to earth, as in the new path of exploration it opened up. In the words of one official of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration:

"The Nimbus flight was a major breakthrough in the field of infrared observation. Future missions, with more sophisticated equipment, will multiply our knowledge of the earth and the universe beyond.

"Few people realize what temperature data can tell to a trained scientist. For example, a volcano usually heats up before it blows its top, and an earthquake generates heat in its formative stages. Tomorrow's infrared satellites can warn us of these impending disasters.

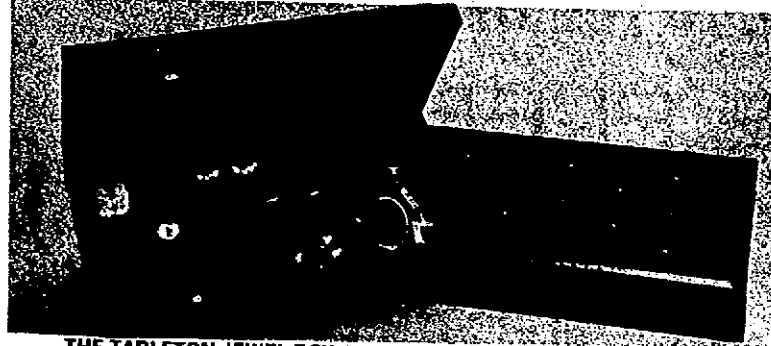

"Or take geology. Each mineral gives off heat at a different rate, detectable to infrared sensors. We may even discover underground waters in arid regions, because infrared can 'see' below the earth's surface. Again, it's all a matter of heat radiation."

DEATH OF A PIONEER

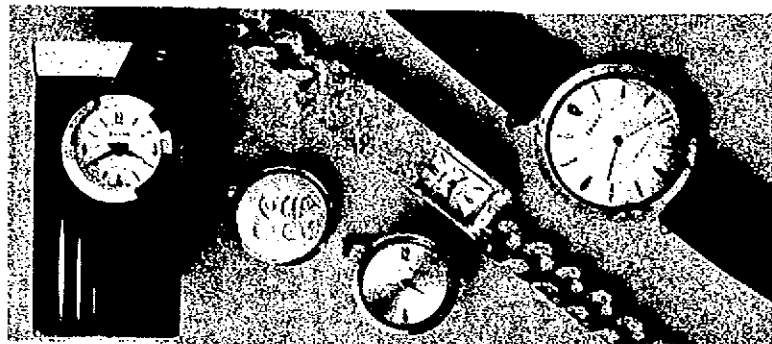

Nimbus was launched into space last August 28. On September 23, her solar-powered batteries died, and Nimbus became officially another 830 pounds of space junk. But her short flight will be long remembered by the handful of scientists who launched her into historic orbit. They are confident that the pioneer voyage will touch the lives of men everywhere. Her mission was a peaceful one. The information she returned and the doors she opened will be open to all men.

PARADE is the first national magazine to interview Dr. William Nordberg, the youthful Austrian-born scientist at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Goddard Space Flight Center, responsible for the infrared eyes of America's Nimbus satellite.

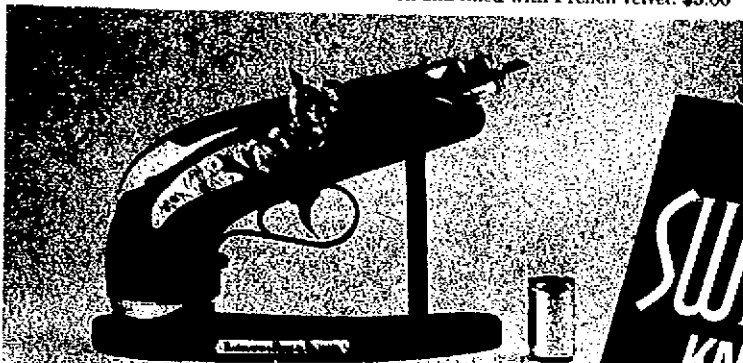

"We are now just scraping the surface of the potential of satellite infrared for peaceful applications," says Dr. Nordberg. "We are going beyond the fascination of seeing what we already know is there from other satellite photography. We now have the capability of picking out the tree in the forest."

FROM PEARL HARBOR TO TONKIN GULF: HOW THE FLEET GUARDS AGAINST SURPRISE ATTACK TODAY

Dedication and know-how: Landing signal officer and helpers await return of aircraft sent to spot submarine activity. All play an essential role in maintaining national security.

by ED KUESTER

PEARL HARBOR.

Exactly 23 years ago tomorrow, as many Americans recall only too well, a Japanese aerial force struck out of the dawn at the giant U.S. naval base here, devastating America's powerful Pacific Fleet as it lay at anchor and plunging the nation into the greatest war in history.

One of the Navy pilots who took off in search of the Japanese after that Sunday morning surprise attack was a 29-year-old lieutenant from Alabama named Thomas Moorer. Today Moorer, 52, is a four-star admiral commanding the entire Pacific Fleet (see cover). And as such, he was in command early last August when another surprise attack—the first naval action since the Korean War—was launched against the U.S. destroyer Maddox by North Vietnamese torpedo boats in the Gulf of Tonkin.

The "Tonkin war" episode, of course, was no Pearl Harbor, though the world held its breath for a few days, wondering if it might be the prelude to another global war. Then, when the attack was repeated, President Johnson ordered a retaliatory air strike against the PT bases. There were no more raids after that, and the tension gradually died out.

Yet the Tonkin attack left many questions unanswered—questions important to the U.S. government and to the people. How vulnerable to surprise attack is the world's greatest military power? What are the chances that a strike launched without warning might thrust us into a new holocaust? What would be our losses from such an attack? What defenses have been erected against it? Is there any possibility of a Pearl Harbor in the 1960's?

I put these questions to Adm. Moorer in his hilltop headquarters here. It overlooks Pearl Harbor itself, no possibility of any such warning."

Moreover, the admiral noted, the role of Pearl Harbor itself has changed. In 1941 it was the key front-line base of the U.S., but today it is supported by bases in Japan, the Philippines and other nations. "In my opinion," Adm. Moorer said emphatically, "an attack such as that executed against Pearl Harbor would not be feasible today. It would be risky, and it would probably be detected at the outset."

Yet, Adm. Moorer pointed out, the possibility of other forms of attack remains. Attack by nuclear-warhead long-range missiles is one. Attack by submarine—the Soviet equivalent of our missile-firing, nuclear-powered Polaris—is another. And there remains the risk of further lesser incidents, of the Gulf of Tonkin stripe, which might blow into a major showdown and eventually even a nuclear war.

Such attacks might be aimed at the U.S. mainland, specific U.S. bases or installations (or those of friendly countries) or at our ships or planes. In any case, our defenses against surprise attack here in the Pacific are drawn up to meet them.

From midway across the Indian Ocean, as far north as the Aleutian chain and as far south as the Pole, the Pacific Fleet keeps up a steady surveillance. Its domain consists of 80 million square miles, and in that area there are 425 ships, 3,000 aircraft and 275,000 sailors and Marines. There are radar picket ships on the Alaskan sea frontier, serving as outposts to warn against possible attack from that direction. Airborne early-warning planes fly from Japan and other forward installations. Destroyers do patrol duty between Taiwan and mainland Communist China.

ANTISUB DEFENSE

Everywhere there are antisubmarine task forces. Each of these is spearheaded by a carrier and includes surface craft, fixed-wing aircraft and helicopters equipped with "dunking sonar," which can detect the presence of any subsurface vessel. There are known to be about 80 to 100 Soviet subs in the Pacific, of both the conventional and nuclear variety. Mostly they remain in the Sea of Japan or near their bases at Vladivostok and Petropavlovsk. But many are to be seen in other parts of the ocean, and the Navy keeps an eye on them.

The Navy's defense against surprise attack is similarly all-encompassing. "Against long-range missiles," Adm. Moorer told me, "the main defense is to have a deterrent force which is relatively invulnerable, and for the other side to know you have it."

"Our Polaris submarines, our carriers with aircraft capable of carrying nuclear weapons, our Air Force serve as this deterrent. If someone should choose to attack the U.S., he knows the retaliation that would follow would not be a worth-while exchange."

What makes a submarine, or a carrier, a valid deterrent, as the admiral puts it, is its mobility—the fact that it is a "mobile launching platform" for weapons. This same mobility is the Navy's chief asset against other forms of attack. With no one the wiser, ships can quickly and silently be moved from one position to another to guard against attack. Thus, in times of tension, such as the Cuban missile crisis or the Tonkin incident, the Fleet quickly shifts into positions which best support action which could conceivably follow. At the time of Tonkin, for instance, the Navy put no more warships into the Gulf, but did move some into position to backstop those already there if necessary.

"The point is to anticipate what might follow—to get into the best possible posture for the worst possible situation," Adm. Moorer said. "It's like a baseball game. When it seems as if the batter might hunt, the infield moves in to be ready for it. Or, in a football game, when it's fourth down and a punt seems likely, the safety man drops back to receive it. Of course, sometimes the batter does not bunt or the kicker does not kick, and then you return to your normal position."

One thing the Navy avoids is concentrating its forces—particularly in port. This, of course, is what happened to the Pacific Fleet in 1941, when the cream of the Fleet was lined up like pigeons in Battleship Row and was easy prey for the incoming Japanese bombers. Today, as a matter of policy, half the fleet is under way at any given time, and in event of crisis every ship is ordered out of port. Moreover, the Navy goes to elaborate lengths to work out assignments so that only insignificant numbers of ships are in port simultaneously.

MORNINGS, DECEMBER 7

"I have a vivid memory of what happened at Battleship Row," Adm. Moorer declared. "I was at home, off the base, that morning when I heard the first explosions and dashed out of the house to head for my squadron. I arrived just as the second wave of bombers hit. I commandeered a boat and went across the harbor to my hangar, on Ford Island. I still have a clear picture of the bombing attack on the Pennsylvania, which was the flagship of the Fleet, and the Nevada, which was the only battleship to get under way, grounding right adjacent to my hangar."

"I went out on the first patrol that night to search for the Japanese fleet. Our instructions were to fly until daylight, then turn around and head back. The thinking was that we would fly past the fleet during the night—it had all been calculated by the range of the aircraft and the speed of the ships—and then we would find them in daylight on the return leg. Of course, we had no radar and could only search for them by eye."

"But we had very few aircraft in commission, because of damage by strafing—most of them had been strafed quite heavily—so we could not search everywhere. In trying to determine how we could best make use of our aircraft, it was decided we should search to the southwest, since the Japanese had probably come from Truk and Kwajalein and would head back that way. So we searched that direction, but now we know that the attack came from the north."

Adm. Moorer also remembers the Tonkin attack quite vividly. He was routed out of bed at 2 A.M. the morning of last August 2, when the first word came from the skipper of the Maddox that the PT boats had attacked. He hurried to his "flag plot" here and was in continuous touch through the night with his front-line commanders, with Adm. U.S. Grant Sharp, commander-in-chief of all U.S. Pacific forces, and with Washington. He remained there throughout August 5, when the crisis subsided.

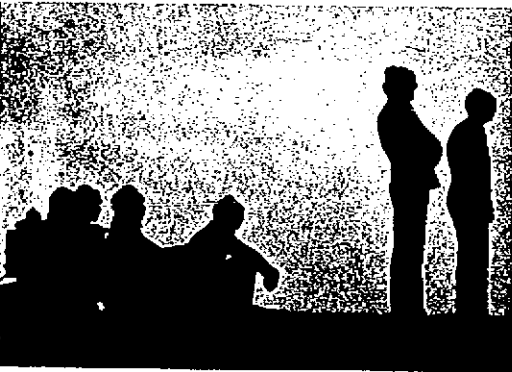

To this day, the admiral can offer no reason for the sudden and mysterious North Vietnamese attack. U.S. vessels had been in the international waters of the Gulf before, as had those of various other nations, including the Soviet Union. U.S. ships had previously spotted and tracked PT boats in the area, but these had always remained close to shore. The only explanation seemed to be an attempt to test the U.S. resolve and readiness.

To this end, the admiral was pleased with the way his men responded. "It was the first naval warfare since Korea," he said, "and many of the men had never been in any sort of combat. Yet they made a rapid adaptation. They showed they not only had the skill and know-how, but the dedication as well."

With men like these, the admiral concluded, the nation's interests in this part of the world are in good hands. They would be vigilant against a surprise attack—against another Pearl Harbor or another Tonkin—and if one were forthcoming, they would be ready for it.

Adm. Thomas Moorer, commander of the Pacific Fleet, is confident the nation's safety is in good hands.

Skilled and vigilant: Flight deck personnel relax at dusk, awaiting return of the last mission of the day.

and in the distance you can see the U.S.S. Arizona memorial to the Pearl Harbor dead, where more than 1,000 remain entombed. As we looked out at history, I wondered if it could repeat itself in this crucial and perennially explosive area of the world.

"Things have changed considerably in this area since 1941," the admiral said. "Speaking in terms of conventional naval warfare, at the moment there is no major naval force in this area comparable to the Pacific Fleet. Of course, in 1941 the Japanese had a very formidable navy in the classic sense—many aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers—not unlike our fleet today. No nation has anything like that now."

"The Pacific Fleet itself is considerably different. In 1941 we were not deployed nearly so worldwide. The Seventh Fleet wasn't in the Western Pacific, as it is now. This has given us more depth in detection and warning systems. Today we have warning systems virtually from the point from which an attack could be launched up to the point of the attack itself. In 1941, when radar was still in its infancy, there was what happens to the second wife?

Every morning at 8, five days a week, a young mother drops her two youngsters at her mother's house, then heads to work as a saleswoman in a specialty shop. At night, exhausted, she picks them up and goes home to cook dinner.

Why doesn't she stay home to look after her children herself and give them the guidance and care that only a mother can provide?

The answer is: She has no choice. The trivial, menial work she does helps keep her family together. Her salary and commissions, however small, are turned into food and clothing.

What about her husband? He works, to be sure, but a sizable chunk of his income goes to pay $135 a week to support his former wife and son, which leaves little for his second family. "She's got more money for the two of them than we have for the four of us," his present wife says bitterly.

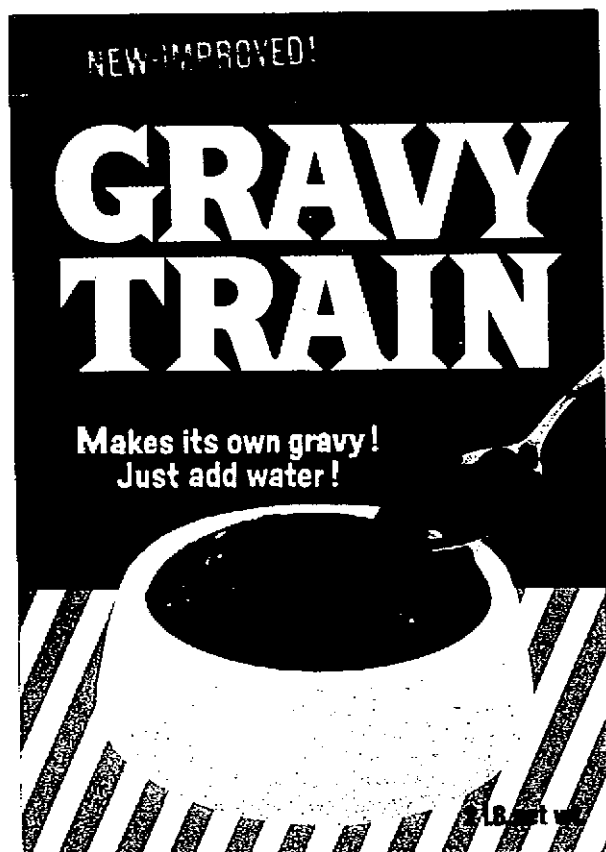

Yet what is happening to this family is not an isolated problem. Millions of other second families of divorced men are in similar financial straits, and millions more are moving in the same direction. In the last 10 years in the U. S., there were more than 4 million divorces involving 7,500,000 children. And statistics indicate that the continuing high rate of young mar-

Although divorce laws in the U. S. vary from state to state, generally the wife gets custody of the children, money for the children's support, a share of community property—and often alimony as well. If the husband doesn't disappear and the wife doesn't remarry, chances are he'll pay alimony for the rest of his life and child support until the children reach majority.

But what if the husband should remarry? What is his obligation to his second wife and second family? And what are the chances in a second marriage if he is financially shackled to the first? To try to solve some of the problems of second families, a group of second wives have banded together to fight for a more equitable solution to divorce settlements. The group, an affiliate of United States Divorce Reform, Inc., is called the Women's Division. It was established last year in Sacramento, Calif., to militate for a fair system of divorce in the U. S.

"The whole business of divorce is so rotten, so unjust and so unfair," says Mrs. Winifred Paine, director of the Women's Division. "The only ones who profit by it are alimony-seeking wives and attorneys who fatten on the fees husbands usually have to pay."

What's so new about new Gravy Train?

Everything!

New! Crunchier chunks! You can even see the difference. Now each and every chunk is bigger and tastier than ever! Made to stay firm and crunchy longer... won't get soft or mushy in the bowl.

New! Richer gravy! So much richer you'd think you'd simmered it yourself. The way your dog likes it best. No wonder new, improved Gravy Train now has the biggest flavor in dog food!

New! Delicious new recipe! Right on the new brown package. Now use less water—1 cup warm water to 2 cups Gravy Train. Stir to moisten. And presto! New, improved Gravy Train! A beef-tasty gravy dinner with perfect nutrition. (Who says you can't teach an old dog food new tricks?)

The hapless victims of present divorce laws are members of the second family, according to Mrs. Paine. "The overwhelming majority of second families just cannot cope with the problems of making ends meet for two sets of family units," she points out. The Women's Division feels that the needs of the second family should take legal priority over the claims of the ex-wife. And if the first wife remarries, they say her second husband should support her children—or send them back to the natural father.

Examples of how dire this problem is fill the case books of the Women's Division. One family whom Mrs. Paine knows is forced to dress their three school-age youngsters in second-hand clothing. And while other children their age are out playing, these three are busy selling newspapers and magazines. Their earnings go into the family coffers for the good of all.

Yet the first wife, who hasn't remarried and who has one child, receives $75 a week in alimony and child-support payments in addition to the $150 a week she earns working.

The Women's Division opposes child support payments, except in special circumstances. But perhaps the most effective way to deal with the inequities of divorce settlements is to abolish alimony, say the ladies of the Women's Division.

If alimony should be eliminated so should the unwritten rule about child custody, the Division claims. Why should the mother always get custody of the children? Youngsters should go to the parent who can support them, contends the divorce reform group.

HIS NATURAL MOTHER FAKED

"Being the natural mother is no criterion for custody," says one member of the Women's Division whose husband was supporting his first family. "When my husband and his ex-wife were divorced, years before he met me, his wife got custody of his child and my husband had to support the boy. When we got married, I wanted to stop working, but I couldn't. I had to help him meet his payments. I didn't mind him supporting his son, but what was happening to that kid was horrible. His mother didn't take care of him, and she didn't use the money for him.

"For five years my husband tried to get the boy. He spent $2,000 in attorney's fees and costs. We finally won custody recently, and when he came home with us he said to me, 'Would you be my mother?' He had a desperate need for mother's love which his 'natural' mother had never given him."

If alimony and many of the "fringe" benefits of divorce were eliminated, a considerable number of women would not seek to shed their mates, suggests the Women's Division.

Although somewhat extreme in its approach, the Division does point out that there is great need for a more humanistic and realistic solution to the problems posed by marriage and divorce. Members would like to see divorce taken out of the hands of the courts entirely and turned over to official family mediation boards. U. S. laws, they insist, must be revised to give second families equal consideration.

This world-famous hairdresser tells why why you should use a special colorfast shampoo if you color or lighten your hair

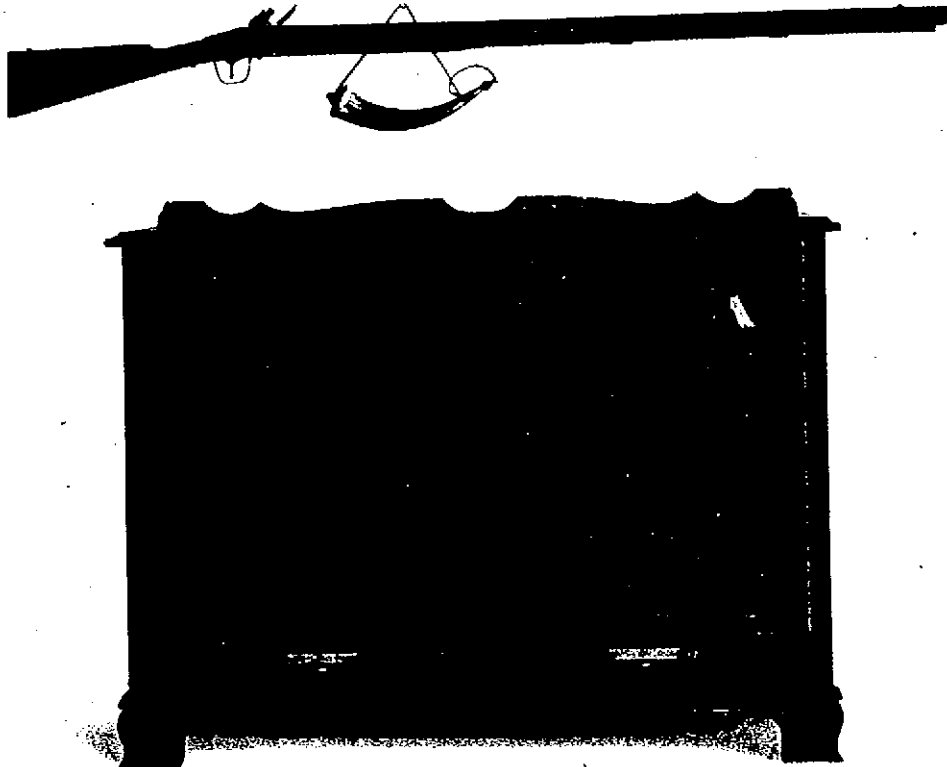

"Naturally, when you've found the hair color you're happiest with, you don't want to see it changed by shampooing," says John Garrison. "Using the right shampoo—colorfast shampoo—is especially important for the soft, muted colors most women prefer now. And Clairol is the colorfast shampoo—it won't change hair color." Very different from other leading shampoos, colorfast shampoo by Clairol was specifically created for women who color or lighten their hair. Two unique formulas: Clairol Blue for all light delicate blonde shades of lightened and toned hair. Clairol Green for all red, brown and black shades of tints and lasting rinses. ARE YOU A GOOD READER?

Do you know what kind of reader you really are?

Although there is no simple formula to use in evaluating your reading, you can find out whether you have the skills expected of a beginner, an intermediate or an advanced reader by spot-checking yourself on the following reader skills. Then read the 10 rules for good reading and improve your rating.

INTERMEDIATE SKILLS

1. Do you adjust your reading speed to suit the kind of material you are reading? yes ☐ no ☐
2. Can you skim-read to find the answer to a specific question? yes ☐ no ☐
3. Do you usually read straight through a selection without having to go back over what you have already read? yes ☐ no ☐

ADVANCED SKILLS

10 RULES FOR BETTER READING

A person who wants to improve his reading can help himself by following a few clear-cut rules. By working on one rule at a time, a reader should be able to increase his reading power markedly.

WORD RECOGNITION

RULE 1: Attack new words by sounding them out. English is an alphabetic language—that is, there is a correspondence between the sound and the spelling of a word.

RULE 2: Analyze words by breaking them into parts. Many words are composed of roots, prefixes and suffixes—for example, autograph: auto—self—plus graph—written = writing one's name.

RULE 3: Look up the meaning of unfamiliar words. A dictionary is a reader's best friend.

COMPREHENSION

RULE 4: Set a purpose. Knowing why you are reading and what you are looking for are your most significant comprehension guides. Your reason for reading sets your level of concentration, your speed and the effort you apply to remember what you read.

RULE 5: Concentrate as you read. Most people are meandering readers. They don't force their attention to stick with the topic. If you want to get the most out of reading, you have to focus your attention on the page and keep it there.

RULE 6: Organize your thoughts to get the main idea. Before reading intensively, ask yourself what the article is about and where it is going. It often pays to skim a selection before you read it thoroughly. Use the title and subheads to direct your thinking.

RULE 7: Read difficult sentences aloud. Where meaning is fuzzy or reading difficult, read aloud. Language is primarily a spoken instrument; therefore we tend to understand better when the message is phrased orally.

RULE 8: Visualize as you read. Try to picture in your mind what you are reading about. Visualizing will help you remember more clearly and will help relate one part to another.

RULE 9: Associate the new with the old. One of the standard means of understanding and remembering what you read is to associate new material with what you already know. You know how the U.S. government is organized. When reading about the organization of the French government, associate it with that of the U.S. You can then note the similarities and differences.

RULE 10: Vary your reading speed. Contrary to popular opinion, a superior reader does not read everything at a uniformly high rate of speed. He varies his rate to suit his purpose and the nature of the reading material.

These 10 rules give you an idea of how a good reader proceeds. The ideas contained in them are presented in detail in PARADE's guide to better reading, How to Read and Succeed. Clip the coupon below and send for your copy today. Then watch your reading skills soar!

THE JAMES BOND GIRLS

by LLOYD SHEARER

Sean Connery, who has starred as James Bond, secret agent 007, in three spy thrillers by the late Ian Fleming; is a tall, handsome Scot approaching 40. Connery broke into show business as a chorus boy in South Pacific, was chosen for the role of Bond through a London newspaper poll. As James Bond he has become wealthy and successful, has more offers than he can fill. Enthusiastic about the role, he's "happy that Fleming had such good taste in women."

Before she won the role of Pussy Galore in Goldfinger, Honor Blackman was the rage of British TV. At 37, Honor feels that as Pussy, the hard-bitten pilot of Auric Goldfinger, she will find new fame. A judo expert in a former TV series, she manages in Goldfinger to throw James Bond on his rear before succumbing to his charm. Born in London, Honor, a blue-eyed blonde, 5-foot-6, measures 37-23-37. Married twice, she is a pilot and following Goldfinger was signed to a long-term film contract.

Off-screen, Sean Connery is married to Diane Cilento, 30, who was born in New Guinea, raised in Australia and New York. A top actress in her own right—she starred in Tom Jones and Agony and Ecstasy. Diane Cilento has been married twice. She has a 7-year-old daughter by her first marriage and an infant son, Jason, from her marriage to Sean Connery. The Connerys live in London.

Late this month United Artists will release a film entitled Goldfinger. It tells the story of a modern-day miser who wants to capture all the gold stored by the U.S. Treasury in Fort Knox.

Already a proven hit in Europe, Goldfinger stars James Bond, the suave, fictional, sophisticated secret agent 007, created by the late Ian Fleming.

Author Fleming, who penned 11 James Bond sagas and earned $1,500,000 in the process, was once a member of the editorial board of the London Sunday Times. He worked as Moscow correspondent for Reuters and the London Times and during World War II served as assistant to Britain's Director of Naval Intelligence.

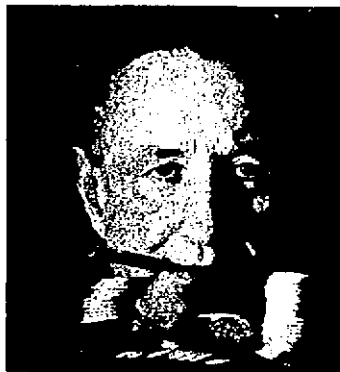

As a newspaperman, Fleming was regarded by his colleagues as a connoisseur of beautiful women. He liked them svelte, charming, exotic, versatile, intelligent but, above all, endowed with a high and visible sex appeal quotient.

In 1952, after a rewarding and varied bachelorhood, Fleming married the former Ann Geraldine Charteris. But first he had been named as correspondent in a divorce action brought by her husband, the 2nd Viscount Rothermere.

With this sort of research and experience behind him, Englishman Fleming wrote most knowledgeably of women, punctuating each James Bond book with the described presence of long, lithe, languid females.

These beauties are all incidental to the imaginative and thrilling screen adventures of James Bond (played by actor Sean Connery). But as stimulating scenery they collectively provided moviegoers with the most exciting exhibition of pulchritude projected in years.

Ian Fleming, author of You Only Live Twice and 10 other tales of adventure, died Aug. 12, leaving a hero, James Bond.

THE BOND GIRLS ARE TALL AND SHAPELY

Yugoslavian-born Nadja Regin, who plays one of the James Bond girls in Goldfinger, has enjoyed the pleasure of becoming a popular actress in Yugoslavia, Germany, Great Britain. Married to a wealthy real estate broker, Nadja works in films to avoid the monotony of having nothing to do. She feels that being an actress makes her a better wife and mother. Nadja is the only actress to play different roles in two James Bond films; she played in From Russia, With Love, and will appear in Goldfinger as a fiery Latin-American dancer. Like all the Bond girls she is tall—5-foot-7—and shapely—measuring 37-23-38.

Daniela Bianchi, 23, only child of a retired Italian army colonel, played James Bond's voluptuous Russian girl friend in From Russia, With Love. Of the 200 young women interviewed for the role of Tatiana Romanova, Daniela was the only one who had ever been to Russia. Fleming described the girl she played as having "fine dark brown silken hair . . . a good soft pale skin . . . lips full and finely etched . . . tall firm body . . . the passionate promise of a full mouth." Since her appearance in the second Fleming film, Daniela, who is 5-foot-8 and measures 36-22-37, has worked in French, Italian, British movies.

Goldfinger is well-sprinkled with beautiful women, and perhaps none is more attractive than Tania Mallett, who makes her film debut in the production. Tania, 23, was born in Blackpool, educated in England and France. Two years ago she decided to try modeling in London, 10 days later was sent out on audition, has been working ever since. Immensely photogenic, Tania measures 34-22-35.

Shirley Eaton, one of many dazzling blondes in Goldfinger, was born in Edgware, England, almost 30 years ago. She began her show business career as a child dancer. Married to a young building contractor, Shirley says, "It has taken me a long, long time to convince British film producers that I have sex appeal." The actress is 5-foot-6, weighs 110 pounds and measures 35-22-36.

In the first Fleming novel transferred to the screen, Dr. No, actress Ursula Andress played the first James Bond girl, Honeychile Rider. Fleming described her as "extraordinarily erotic... with a beautiful back... legs straight and beautiful... hair cut to the shoulders." In Dr. No, Ursula, wife of actor John Derek, played a beautiful Caribbean girl who becomes amorously involved with Bond. After Dr. No, Ursula became very much in demand as an actress, is currently working in Israel, now demands and gets as much as $100,000 per film.

Today he plays the club circuit, touring the country, telling such jokes as these:

You know, we Americans sure are funny people. We took the country away from the Indians who scalped us—then turned it over to the politicians who skin us.

"Never mind," said the panhandler, stepping back. "All I've been getting today is a lot of hard-luck stories."

ANECDOTE of THE WEEK

■ After French athletes failed to win a single first in the 1960 Olympic Games, Gen. Charles de Gaulle decided to promote sports in France. As an incentive, he promised to wine and dine those countrymen of his who won gold medals in the 1964 Olympic Games. The only top French winner at Tokyo was a horse that won a gold medal for show jumping. De Gaulle is now faced with a problem in protocol. Does he dine and wine the rider or give the horse an extra bag of oats? ■

fur in your hair

by VIRGINIA POPE
PARADE FASHION EDITOR

To make cluster of mink balls, divide collar into thirds. Roll tissue into each piece. Sew skins, leaving threads at end to attach to comb.

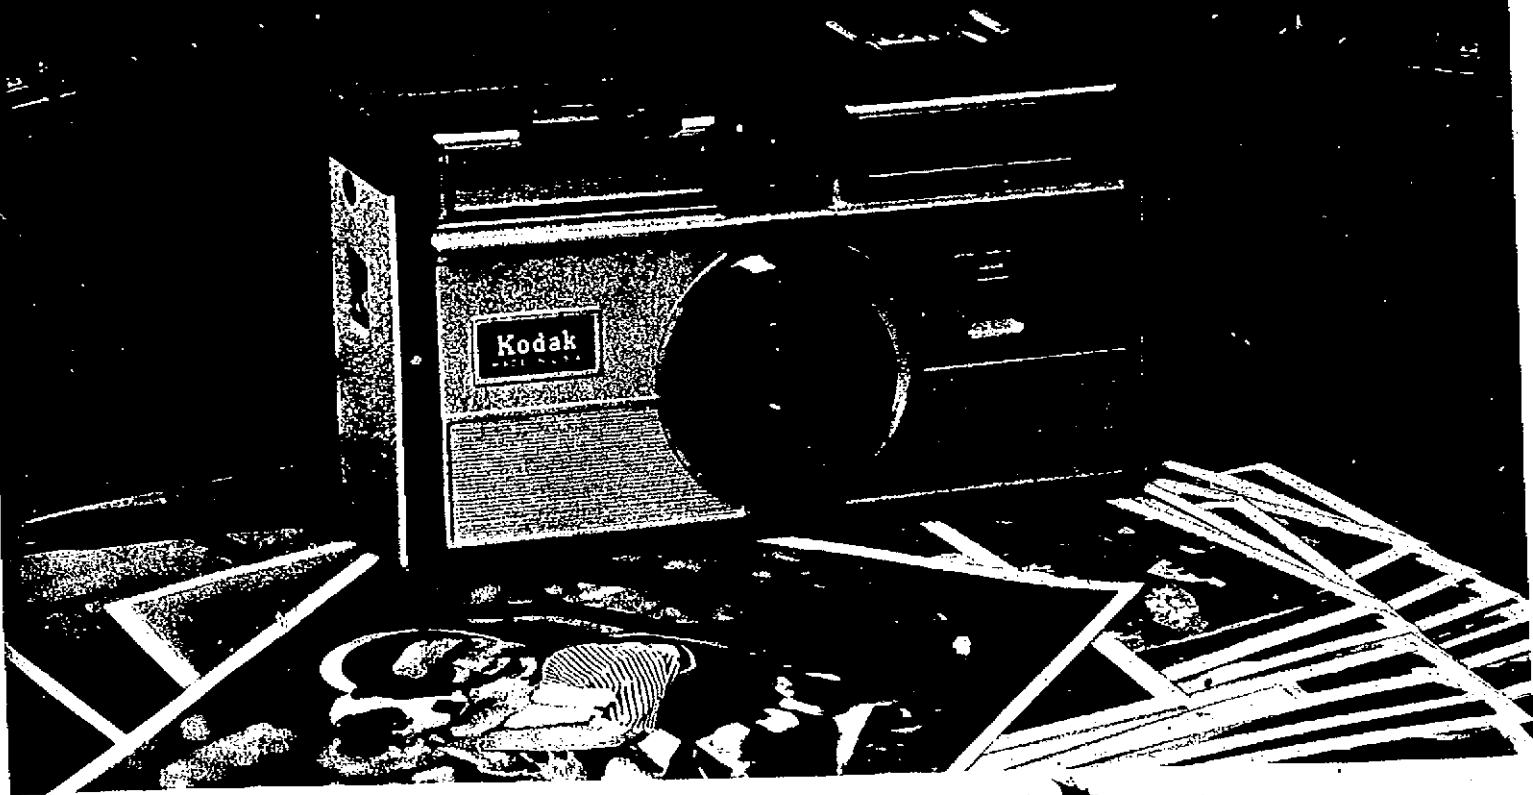

Turn collar into headband. Cut in half, sew lengths together, attach ribbons to fur ends so skins may be tied about the head.

Shake the moth balls out of those fur odds and ends you have tucked away somewhere, ladies—there's glamour in those old pelts yet. This Christmas you can tie up your bonnie brown, (blonde, red or gray) hair in bows, balls, tiaras or bands fashioned from squirrel, mink or muskrat collars you may have stored away. The idea of using fur decoratively in hairstyling is an important new trend in Italy, according to Mr. Laurent of the Max Factor Rome Salon, where the styles shown here originated. There's no special trick to turning old collars into hair trimmings, Mr. Laurent points out. All you need is a piece of fur you could live without, a furrier's needle and thread, a razor to cut the pelts (scissors shred fur) and velvet or satin ribbons to tie the fur piece around your head. If you want to make a cluster of fur balls to ornament your hairdo, be sure that you roll a ball of tissue paper into each small piece of fur before sewing it into a ball. This gives the fur circlelet more body. For a fur bow, cut a collar in two, leaving a small part for center knot; then loop the long pieces separately. Sew ends together and sew to center knot. Try these styles or create your own.

THESE YOUNGSTERS WILL MEET JACQUELINE KENNEDY

This Tuesday, Mrs. John F. Kennedy will personally greet 12 participants in the Work-a-Day-for-JFK project and their escorts.

They are coming here to be thanked by the former First Lady for working a day and sending the money they earned to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library Fund. In response to PARADE's May 17, 1964, article, thousands of inspiring letters were written by these boys and girls from every part of the United States and mailed to the Library Fund along with their contributions.

The ones on this page are representative of the spirit, resourcefulness and creativity of all those who took part. The authors will join the six boys and girls whose letters were published in PARADE August 23, 1964. They are Douglas Ferguson, South Haven, Mich.; Janet Bentley, Milwaukie, Ore.; Robert L. Prendergast, Glens Falls, N. Y.; Jeanie Jones, Little Rock, Ark.; Linda Sleight, Forest Hills, N. Y.; R. Bradford Allen LaCroix, South Burlington, Vt.

Mrs. Kennedy is now devoting a great deal of her time to the Memorial Library, to be built in Boston. The Work-a-Day-for-JFK project is continuing, and all those who participate will receive a personal thank-you note from the late President's widow. The names of all participants will be on file in the Library.

Join the thousands of other youngsters who have already contributed $250,000 and send your contribution and letter telling how you earned the money to Kennedy Library Fund, PARADE, Box 1640, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

ELLEN & PAUL DEUTSCH

1 Sherwood Lane
Norwich, Conn. 06360

Dear Sirs:

This summer my brother and I planted some pumpkin seeds. This fall we picked the pumpkins and sold them in front of our house.

We made $2.25 in one day. We would like to donate this money to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library Fund.

Sincerely,
Ellen & Paul Deutsch

104-45 108th Street
Richmond Hill 19, N. Y.

Dear Mrs. Kennedy:

I am donating a nickel which I earned Sunday.

I behaved like a gentleman while visiting my aunt.

Yours truly,
Gregory Triolo

2325 Tyrolean Way
Sacramento, Calif. 95821

Gentlemen:

I would like to make an additional contribution to the Kennedy Memorial Library Fund. This was for work actually done last year, when I wrote a weekly column of my high school news for a local paper.

He left in November, but this era, his work and the generation that he so often commended still remain, and it seems wrong now to use what abilities I was given for my own ends when others might benefit from them. The President inspired dreams for my time to fulfill. I will not disappoint him.

In a letter attached to my last contribution, I said that if the sum, small as it was, could place a brick or two on the Library's walls, I would be satisfied. It is with this same feeling that I include another donation.

Sincerely,
Karolyn Pettingell

MARY ANN BLAINE

6812 Belford Drive
Takoma Park, Md.

Dear Sir:

I am writing this letter with a twofold purpose: 1. in an attempt to thank you and your magazine and 2. to relate, in my case, what fruits your past articles have produced.

This past summer was one of reflection for me. The several issues of PARADE dealing with the ways and means the youth of America have worked for the J. F. Kennedy Library were a great comfort and incentive. But my inspiration derived from those articles was on a larger scale. In my tribute to JFK I hoped and prayed I could include my entire school, Regina High. This is an all-girls Catholic High School where I am now in my senior year.

If one understands, as I know you do, the special love America's youth has for President Kennedy, my hope was not unrealistic. The Library, with our help, will give to those who did not share our privilege of living in his lifetime a little of the man and image we treasure. My plan was enthusiastically welcomed by students and faculty. It is still in blueprint form. It will be a hootenanny and probably a successful one.

I also believe those PARADE issues did much to improve the opinion the present generation holds about mine. As self-appointed spokesman, I thank you very much.

Sincerely,
Mary Ann Blaine

45 N. Park Drive
Canton, Ill.

Dear Mrs. Kennedy:

Enclosed is my contribution for the Library. I did my best to earn all I could by doing what I can do best—play ball. I decided to send all I could earn during the finals for a Baseball Tournament, with money earned, as follows: 10¢ for a single; 20¢ for a double; 30¢ for a triple; $1.00 for a home run.

My home run with 2 on base ahead of me was the blow that wrecked the chances of the other team, and we finished our season undefeated. I was proud to hit that run for the President, and they put my picture hitting it in the paper here. I know the President loved sports and I chose this way to do what I thought he would like. He was a great man and loved you all. I hope I get to visit the great Library sometime.

Your good friend,
Larry Bordner, Age 13

BRINGING UP BABY®
HINTS COLLECTED
BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF FIVE

biography of a baby explorer

Everyone wants to see the world and wee ones are no exception. And what better way to start one's travels than to creep? Styles vary, of course. Your baby may be a conventionalist and use the forward method. Or he may be an individualist and favor backward or crabwise creeping. But whatever style your sweetheart selects, he'll learn a lot about the world around him... make big strides in developing confidence, co-ordination and control.

"Table tips" for travelers

Scot-about, every enchanting one of them, need protein to help develop those muscles-on-the-move. Delightful ways to give your baby a goodly ration of protein: Gerber Strained or Junior High Meat Dinners. These delicious "combo" dishes have three times as much meat (and therefore more protein) as regular vegetable and meat combinations. Selected vegetables are added to the extra meat to increase flavor interest and nutritive benefits.

Super Supper Suggestion (Gerber Style)

Beef High Meat Dinner
Creamed Spinach
Vanilla Custard Pudding
Formula or Milk

Taste-testing division

What do you suppose 25,000 disposable spoons have to do with your baby? That's how many spoons were used for taste-testing in one Gerber plant in a year. And this critical, continuous work goes on in all Gerber plants. Foods are judged by a panel of taste experts, who grade them for color, flavor, consistency and texture. Each food must measure up to strict Gerber standards and only those that score well are released for distribution.

P.S. In addition to Gerber taste-testing, foods are also taste-tested by babies and mothers on a year 'round basis. One example: Gerber High Meat Dinners were taste-tested and approved by 4,500 babies.

"Home base" for travelers

Once baby discovers the fun and freedom of floor-excursions, the playpen may cramp his style. But there will still be times when you'll want him to stay put. Thing to do is make the playpen as inviting as possible. If you provide something-to-do toys and rotate them from day to day it will help offset frustration. Snacks, like Gerber Fruit Juices or Meat Sticks also make the playpen nice to "come home to."

Start to finish

Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods—infant formulas, cereals, strained and junior foods—to meet your baby's nutritional needs. We're proud to say:

...our only business!"

The Commander—George Lincoln Rockwell, leader of the American Nazi Party—spouts hate at rally in Virginia.

'WHY I QUIT THE AMERICAN NAZI PARTY'

by PAT RYAN as told to JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Until a few weeks ago, I was a Nazi—an unlikely one to be sure, but one sworn to serve the American gauleiter, George Lincoln Rockwell, who looks upon himself as Hitler's true heir and delights in calling himself "Mr. Hate." Indeed, as part of the induction ritual, I signed over my mortal remains to him.

In his cause, I demonstrated last summer against both President Johnson and Sen. Goldwater; I even got myself arrested during the free-for-all at the Democratic convention. (I was the slim little guy cowering under a showcase in front of the Atlantic City Convention Hall.) Yet try as I might, strutting around in khaki uniform with a swastika in hand, I somehow could never make a very fearsome storm trooper.

I began my flirtation with Hitler's ghost as a teenager. I read books about der Fuehrer, even taught myself to speak German. Actually, I was less interested in Nazi philosophy than in arguing the absurd. It would amuse me to make a blood-curdling statement, then await the horrified reaction of my betters. As I grew into my 20's, my curiosity about Nazism lingered. So last July, on impulse, I decided to become a Nazi.

I presented myself at Nazi headquarters in Arlington, Va., where I was motioned aside by a man in a soiled uniform with a menacing .45 revolver on his hip. I was put through a third degree, followed by a theatrical but thorough search. "Rockwell's life is in dire danger," tersely explained my interrogator in an imitation of Humphrey Bogart.

Next, I was hustled into a beat-up station wagon and driven three miles to a ramshackle old house, which turned out to be the Nazi barracks. Again I was ceremoniously searched, then kept waiting another 45 minutes under glowering eyes. At last, I was marched upstairs to enter the presence of The Commander ("There is only one Fuehrer"), George Lincoln Rockwell himself.

I stepped into a frigid blast, created by two overworked air conditioners. The Commander, I later learned, considers it Nordic to live in an icy atmosphere (he also has a perspiration problem).

I don't know what I expected, but it wasn't what I encountered. Unwashed and unshaved, Rockwell slouched glumly in an old stuffed chair. He was dressed in faded blue slacks and a seedy T-shirt; tufts of black hair poked through holes in the shirt. His paunch bulged over a cowboy belt. He was sucking a long-stem corn-cob pipe. He rarely smokes it, I found out, but uses it for a character gimmick, an idea he picked up from the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Anyone less like an Aryan superman would be hard to imagine. He has schooled his features into a dark brooding look, accentuated by the heavy pout of his lower lip. His manner was arrogant, and he seemed openly contemptuous of his own men. The interview, brusquely brief, ended with him thrusting a book into my hand and collecting its $10 purchase price. "Read it," he ordered. "It will tell you everything you need to know." He suggested that I stay at the barracks and contribute what I would spend on a hotel to the party. An eager man for a buck is The Commander—just how eager I was soon to learn.

After looking the place over, I returned to my home in Omaha for my baggage, books and two police dogs. Then, with my earthly possessions piled in the back seat, I drove to Arlington to be sworn in as a PT (Probationary Trooper). Part of the ritual was to sign a grisly document, which read: "I Pat Ryan, being in sound mind and of age, do hereby give and bequeath to George Lincoln Rockwell . . . my mortal remains in the event of my death, for whatever disposal he may care to make of such body."

The trooper's day (there were about a dozen of us) begins at 7 A.M. with calisthenics, then breakfast, barracks cleaning and office work. The latter consists mostly of folding the propaganda Rockwell churns out with his offset press. Meals were wretched, prepared by a former alcoholic who dreamed aloud of opening his own pizza joint. Troopers are not allowed to drink, are discouraged from smoking. This is probably more a matter of economics than morality, since the party pays for all living expenses. Officers get small salaries, but troopers

SUGGESTIONS FROM MRS. DAN GERBER

Here's cereal magic with a fruitful viewpoint: Gerber Strained Oatmeal or Mixed Cereal with Applesauce and Bananas. Each cereal is cooked with the fruit and ready to serve. The flavors are delightfully subtle... the texture marvelously moist and smooth. In the nutrition department, both are enriched with iron and important B-vitamins. Why not try a jar soon and watch your baby's appetite rise to the occasion? Serve "as is" or top with milk for added nourishment.

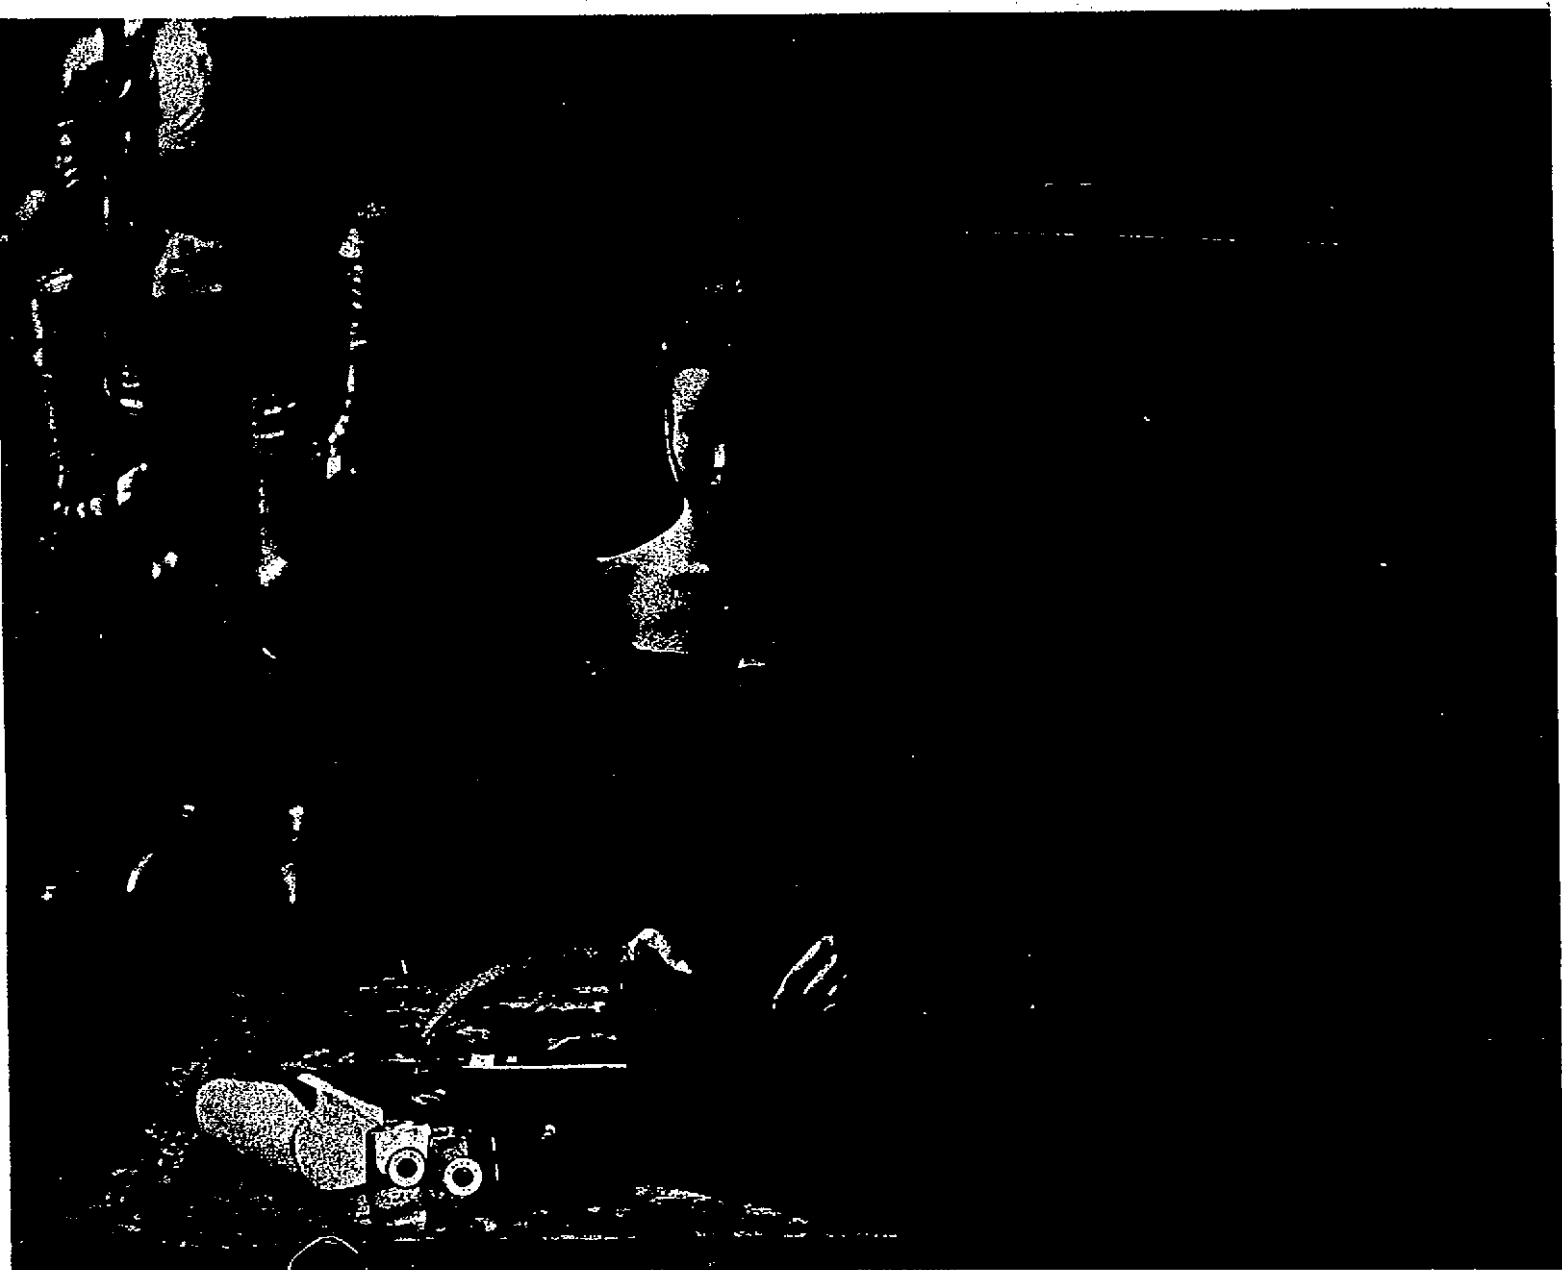

Sunny baby specialty. Doctors recommend egg yolks in the infant diet for the iron and other important nutrients they supply. Gerber Strained Egg Yolks are high in iron and vitamin A and a good source of body-building protein. And, they're specially processed to make them delightfully palatable for babies. The happy result? A creamy, custard-like texture, a delicate, fresh-egg flavor.

GERBER TOY FOR THE MONTH

Have fun! You have extra hours of protection with Kotams tampon

 You can wear Kotams hours longer than most women trust their tampon. Many, many women proved this. Their actual use tests of Kotams gave these astonishing results: this new tampon provided internal sanitary protection for an average of 3 hours more than most women had felt they could trust a tampon.

Kotams has more absorbent material. Much more than in old-style tampons. Intensely compressed, Kotams are small and easy to insert. But, internally, they expand as your own individual needs require.

The slim inserter is easier and sure. Only Kotams has a slender inserter with a marked grip that makes it virtually impossible to place the tampon incorrectly. Kotams small size makes insertion so comfortable. Beginners prefer Kotams, too.

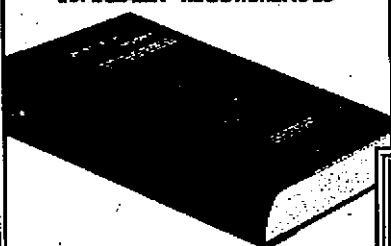

Try this new style tampon. Smartly wrapped, individually, to carry discreetly in your purse.

CATCH UP ON GOOD BOOKS

you have promised yourself to read

... THROUGH A SHORT EXPERIMENTAL MEMBERSHIP IN THE BOOK-OF-THE-MONTH CLUB

ANY THREE for only $1

THE TRIAL: SIMPLY BUY THREE ADDITIONAL BOOKS FROM THE CLUB DURING THE NEXT YEAR

THE MOST ECONOMICAL LIBRARY-BUILDING SYSTEM EVER DEvised: BOOK-DIVIDENDS

THE EXPERIMENTAL MEMBERSHIP suggested here will not only prove, by your own actual experience, how effectually membership in the Book-of-the-Month Club can keep you from missing, through oversight or overbusyness, books you fully intend to read; it will also demonstrate another equally important advantage enjoyed by Club members: Book-Dividends. Through this unique profit-sharing system Club members can regularly receive useful or beautiful volumes and fine high-priced library sets—at a small fraction of their prices—simply by buying the books they would buy anyway.

★ During this experimental membership and thereafter, if you continue, you will receive, with every Club choice you buy, a Book-Dividend Certificate. Each Certificate, together with a nominal sum, usually $1.00 or $1.50—occasionally more for unusually expensive volumes—can be redeemed for a Book-Dividend which you may choose from over a hundred fine library volumes whose retail prices average $7. Since the inauguration of the Club's Book-Dividend system over $296,000,000 worth of books (retail value) has been received by Book-of-the-Month Club members through this unique plan.

Please enroll me as a member of the Book-of-the-Month Club and send me the three volumes whose numbers I have indicated in boxes below, billing me $1.00 for all three volumes. I agree to purchase at least three additional monthly Selections or Alternates, during the first year I am a member. I have the right to cancel my membership any time after buying these three books. During the trial and thereafter, if I continue, I am to receive a Book-Dividend Certificate with every Selection—or Alternate—I buy under the system described at right. (A small charge is added to all book shipments to cover postage and mailing expense.) PLEASE NOTE: Occasionally the Club offers a Double Selection, two books at a special combined price. Such purchases are counted as a single book in fulfilling the membership obligation.

SOFT, DENSE FEATHERS PROTECT THE GREBE AGAINST MOISTURE AND COLD...

BUT THEY SERVE ANOTHER PURPOSE AS WELL...
